I want to say how pleased I am at what the Boston American has been doing in the cause of the people—The American did wonderful work last fall in the campaign. Its like effort this year will win the fight— Yours Eugene N. Foss

RAILWAY MAIL MEN CONDEMN HITCHCOCK

Executive Board of National Association at Portsmouth Takes Action on Postal Head's Retrenchment Policy.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Oct. 1.—The retrenchment policy of Postmaster-General Hitchcock, that has brought hardship to the thousands of post-office employes throughout the United States, was warmly discussed and certain features of it condemned at a meeting held here to-day by the Executive Board of the National Association of Railway Mail Clerks.

The tendency of the administration of the affairs of the Post Office department under Postmaster Hitchcock has been to cut salaries and men, and charges have been made in various parts of the country that this has been done regardless of long and faithful service in this most exacting department of the government.

18,000 Clerks Represented.

The meeting here to-day was held at the headquarters of George A. Wood, the national secretary. The executive board represented 18,000 railway mail clerks in the United States. The board expressed dissatisfaction with the treatment of this vast body of men, or many of them, by the Post Office Department.

Resolutions were passed strongly condemning the Government for its action through Postmaster-General Hitchcock in the cutting down of salaries of many of the men on the railway trains who have spent long years of their lives in becoming proficient in their work.

Many of the mail cars have been reduced in size because the department now transports magazines and other second-class matter by freight. The salaries of clerks who work in the smaller cars have been reduced, to some cases $200 or $300 a year, in spite of the fact that the men has not been deprecated in any way and is just as able to earn as much as ever, and incidentally needs the money more than ever.

Demand Uniform Wages.

The railway mail clerks demand uniform wages. They deny the right of the government to make this serious cut in their income for no other reason than a desire to make a good showing in the returns of the department.

Another demand made by the clerks is a re-organization of the transfer system and the pensioning of the aged employees in this branch of the service. Other changes that the clerks want, as well as these cited, will be laid before Postmaster-General Hitchcock by P. J. Shiell, the National President of the organization, of Milwaukee, who will go to Washington tomorrow for that purpose.

Discussing the subjects which they want re-adjusted, National Secretary Wood, said to-day:

"The postoffice has followed the rule for payment of postoffice clerks according to the size of the car—that is, forty, fifty or sixty foot car has been called a full size car and the clerks have been paid accordingly. The apartment car is the smaller car used as part smoker, part baggage and part mail. In this the clerk receives a smaller salary than the clerk in the full car, sometimes $200 or $300 a year less.

"This clerk might be just as good a man and as efficient a clerk, and have to know as large a number of postoffices as the full clerk.

"Under the method of retrenchment proposed by Postmaster-General Hitchcock, all the magazine publication matter has been sent by freight. This takes away a great deal of talk from the large mail cars and increases the number of clerks who are paid only for a smaller space in an apartment car and is tantamount to a reduction of salary to many. This obtains all over the United States.

"Already a committee of our association has been in conference with a committee at Washington with reference to reaching an agreement for some equitable payment of the clerks.

A VOTE FOR THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM THIS YEAR IS A VOTE FOR RIGHTS OF LABOR

Massachusetts Democrats Demand Department of Labor, the Abolition of Wage Slavery for Women in Foundries, the Initiative and Referendum and Other Reforms Long Advocated by Union Labor.

By WILLIAM H. O'BRIEN.
President of the Boston Central Labor Union.

PRACTICAL politics, to a trade unionist, is that kind of politics that will bring about those betterments of conditions demanded by organized labor for every man, woman and child in the entire community.

Because of their belief in that kind of politics, trade unionists, in common with all other citizens who are anxious to bring about improved conditions in this Commonwealth, are vitally interested in the platform promises of the two dominant political parties seeking the suffrages of the people.

The platform of every political party, as drafted by its accredited representatives in convention assembled, is a sort of political pathfinder.

Here are the paths which the leaders of the two great political parties of the State say the citizens should travel to attain civic and industrial progress.

FOR PROTECTION OF EMPLOYES.

DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.

The laws for protection of employes are imperfectly enforced, and the operation of the Board of Conciliation and Arbitration has been unsatisfactory. We recommend that all these functions be reorganized under the jurisdiction of one board, as a Department of Labor.

REPUBLICAN PLATFORM.

Despite the fact that the Massachusetts State Branch of the American Federation of Labor, and later the big Faneuil Hall indignation meeting, demanded the creation of a Labor Department for the more effective enforcement of all labor laws, no mention is made of the question in this platform.

EMPLOYMENT OF CHILDREN AND WOMEN.

DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.

A commission is now making inquiry into minimum wages for women and minors. We request this commission to report fully upon the employment of women and children at heavy labor, with recommendations of legislation for the care of any abuse.

REPUBLICAN PLATFORM.

We purpose protecting the toiler from the dangers of modern industry.

REGARDING PRISON PRODUCTS.

DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.

We recommend legislation to stop all competition of prison labor with free labor; to abolish the commission-agent method of selling prison products in the open market, and limit all prison-made goods to use in the State institutions; to fix a value on these products, and establish a fund to help discharged prisoners and the families of prisoners.

REPUBLICAN PLATFORM.

No mention made of the question in this platform.

INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM.

DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.

A constitutional amendment for direct legislation, known as the initiative and the referendum, giving to the people, on proper petition, power at the polls to veto objectionable legislation and to propose and enact measures which Legislatures refuse. We instruct the Democratic Legislative Committee to recommend an amendment to which all legislative candidates may be pledged.

REPUBLICAN PLATFORM.

The subject is ignored in this platform.

PRISON REFORM.

DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.

We recommend legislation to improve the administration of our State charities and prisons; to protect "first offenders" from moral contamination in our reformatories.

REPUBLICAN PLATFORM.

This reform, which also is urged by the principal trade unions of the Commonwealth, is not mentioned in the Republican platform.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE.

DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.

We believe that the question of equal suffrage should be submitted to the vote of the people.

REPUBLICAN PLATFORM.

Another measure endorsed by every labor organization in the State and the Nation, which the Republican platform completely ignores.

The foregoing list of reform measures dealt with in the Democratic platform includes only those which organized labor in this State has declared in favor of. In every instance cited the men who drafted that platform, and the delegates who adopted it, specifically promise to respect the wishes of the organized toilers in this respect.

There is only one brief mention in the Republican platform that by any stretch of imagination can be construed to apply to either of those reforms.

OSTEOPATHS WOULD TEST RIVAL SCHOOLS

Want Allopaths and Homeopaths to Enter Experiment With Pneumonia Patients

EACH SIDE TO TAKE 100.

OSTEOS, homeos or allos, which?

The osteopathists of the State are considering issuing a challenge to the homeopathists and the allopathists to come forward and fight a duel for the championship at treatment of human ailments.

The Massachusetts Osteopathy Society, at a meeting last night in the Pierce building in Copley square, discussed the matter of issuing a challenge to the practitioners of the homeopathic, regular and eclectic methods of treatment of disease.

The osteopaths, following the action of the American Osteopathy Society recently in Chicago, is anxious to have the other "paths" come forward and defend their colors. The American society has issued a national challenge to the American Medical Association, but as yet there has been no acceptance.

A Hospital Battle.

The osteopathists according to the plans outlined last night want the homeopathists and allopathists place a hundred pneumonia or typhoid fever patients in the Homeopathic Hospital or the Massachusetts General Hospital. The Osteopathists say they will take the same number for their experiments.

The patients once in the hospitals, the treatment will be immediately started by the different practitioners. Records will be kept of every case, and the osteopathists hope by this to get together sufficient statistics to show for good and all which method of treatment is the most efficient and affords the public the safest protection from disease.

The osteopathists referred the matter of the challenge to their committee on ethics. This committee is to meet shortly to take definite action. If it is decided to let the challenge issue, the committee is empowered to go ahead and arrange the details provided it is accepted.

The battle between the doctors if it can ever be arranged, will be watched with interest all over the country.

Course of Free Lectures.

One matter considered which brought forward a great deal of discussion was the proposition to appoint trustees for the new osteopathic hospital, which is to be erected in the Fenway. A committee will be appointed later to assist in raising the necessary funds.

The proposition to arrange for a course of free lectures for the public met with unanimous approval, and it was voted to authorize the president to appoint a committee to direct the work of preparation. Among the subjects to be discussed are: "What Is Osteopathy?" "Osteopath as a Family Physician," and "Osteopath as the Specialist."

The report of the delegates who attended the national convention of osteopaths in Chicago was made by Dr. R. . Smith and Dr. Sydney Ellis. The report summed up the opposition which the American Medical Association took with reference to the appointment of a health officer as a member of the association's cabinet.

MAY SEIZE EGYPT.

Britain May Soon Declare Protectorate Over the Country.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The Sunday Observer prints a dispatch from Cairo intimating that Lord Kitchener will soon declare Egypt to be a British protectorate. Egypt now acknowledges herself a vassal State of Turkey, and confirms Turkey's suzerainty by an annual payment of tribute, despite British occupation. Turkey claims the right to march troops to Tripoli through Egypt, but British annexation would, of course, render this impossible.

EDISON BACK WITH A KISS FOR LIBERTY

Seized With Desire to Embrace Statue as He Sailed Into New York.

MIGHTY GLAD HE'S HOME.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—"I tell you boys, I felt like kissing the Statue of Liberty when I came up the bay," exclaimed Thomas A. Edison, who, with Mrs. Edison, his son Theodore and his daughter, Madaline, arrived from Europe to-day on the liner America.

"I must say that after my first visit abroad I am satisfied with my own country. Our party toured Germany, France and Switzerland by automobile, and I had opportunity to inspect the big works in the towns which we touched.

"You ask me if I saw anything on the other side which struck me as better than we have here. No, I did not. I found the hotels all right, modern and with all the comforts to relieve the tedium of travel and transit inconveniences. I personally traveled like a Pittsburg millionaire and do you know that it did not cost me so much? I found the expenses very small.

Best Roads in France.

"The finest roads that I ever traveled over are in France. And right here let me say we are pretty raw when it comes to improved highways. In the 2,000 miles of road in France I went over I did not discover more than two miles in poor condition. But then France is a great big park. The farmers there can get twice as much out of their acreage as we can here, but they are shy on machinery."

"How about the airships over there?"

"Ah, those airships. Well, the airship of to-day is 85 per cent. man and 15 per cent. machine. This percentage must be reversed and the greater burden put on the machine rather than on the man."

A storm of protest and denial was aroused by a cable interview with Mr. Edison on Sept. 29 in which he was represented as criticising German ideas of art, architecture, machinery, and business methods, lack of originality and originality and their facility for copying machinery.

The attributed statement that aroused the mightiest storm of contradiction was this:

"The Englishman is the highest standard of integrity in the world. The German aristocrats are interested in business now to get rich quick, and they don't know how it is done."

Mr. Edison had not seen the statement until it was handed to him aboard the America.

Says He Was Misquoted.

"If he not quite correct," said Mr. Edison, "I said that of the Germans connected with the aristocracy. I acknowledged that the integrity of their commercial classes was not as high as that of the English.

"They were the best Germans who told me this—they acknowledged that the integrity of their business classes was not as high as that of the English."

Before he sailed in August Edison declared that he would live to be a hundred and fifty years old, and from the way he looked to-day he seemed to have a good chance of doing so. Dressed in a black overcoat, buttoned tightly around the throat, and wearing a black derby hat, the same that he wore when he departed, Mr. Edison was easily the most conspicuous passenger on the America.

Mrs. Edison and her daughter were kept in the Edison suite most of the voyage through seasickness, but the inventor was always on deck whether a gale was blowing or the sun shining.

"I SHALL BE RE-ELECTED WITH ENTIRE DEMOCRATIC TICKET," DECLARES GOV. FOSS

Governor Says He Will Win Because He Stands for the One Big Issue for the State and the Nation Real Reduction of the Tariff, and Asserts That Canada Will Change Her Mind on Reciprocity

"Democratic Platform Is Admirable in Every Respect"—"I'm Going Into Every City and Town in the State, and Tell the People What's the Matter With Things and How They Can Be Improved"

By CLEMENT L. POLLOCK.

GOVERNOR FOSS in a notable exclusive interview for the Sunday AMERICAN yesterday declared that he and the whole Democratic ticket would be elected in this State this Fall. He asserted that he should be re-elected because he stands for the one big thing that would help the State and nation—a lowering of the tariff.

The Governor has already started his campaign and he proposes to make it a most vigorous one. Referring to his administration during the past year, he said that more progressive legislation had been passed than had been enacted for a generation before. His financial experts, he asserted, had saved hundreds of thousands of dollars for the people.

The Democratic State platform, the Governor said, is an admirable document and he endorsed every plank in it. The overshadowing question, however, he said, was cutting down the tariff so that the high cost of living will be reduced.

The Governor thinks that Canada will change her mind on the reciprocity matter and that reciprocal relations will be established between this country and Canada within a few years.

The Governor thanked the AMERICAN warmly for the support it has given him.

"CERTAINLY, I AM GOING TO BE RE-ELECTED."

"Governor," he was asked, "are you going to be re-elected this Fall?"

"Certainly I am going to by re-elected, and so is the whole Democratic State ticket. I am not worrying about that at all. I feel just as confident of success as I have confidence that the good, old reliable sun will pop up from the eastern horizon to-morrow morning."

"Why should you be re-elected?"

"Because it will be for the good of the State and the nation. The things for which I stand and for which I have worked for many years are things that are of the most vital interest to the State and nation. I shall simply continue my fight for those things on the stump from now until election day."

"You propose to carry on an aggressive campaign, then?"

The Governor's eyes twinkled. His pugnacious jaw protruded.

"Yes, and I'm going right at it. I'm going into every town, city and hamlet in the State, if that is possible, and I'm going to tell the people what's the matter with things and how they can be improved. I did it last Fall and the people elected me. I'll do it again and I have confidence that they will impose their trust in me for the second time."

"Tariff is the Issue."

"What is the big issue in the campaign?" the Governor was asked.

"The tariff—downward revision of the tariff. There are other questions, but this is the biggest question before the people of the State and the nation to-day. We want reciprocity with Canada. That is one phase of the tariff question.

"President Taft believes in reciprocity and a lower tariff. At least he says he does. The Republicans tell the people to elect the Republican ticket and thus indorse Taft. Why, my election will be a vindication of President Taft's views.

"You know how Senator Lodge and Senator Crane stand on this reciprocity matter, don't you? Lodge was forced to support it. He has always been against tariff reduction. He never wanted reciprocity and he doesn't want it now. He is the incarnation of everything that opposes reciprocity and a lower tariff.

"Mr. Crane is in the same boat. He does not want tariff revision. They are both stand-patters and the stand-patters are in control of this State. The Republicans will be defeated and they should be defeated. They don't stand for that which will benefit the people. Lodge and Crane are not for the people.

Same Reciprocity Issue.

"The people are interested in the high cost of living. I told the people that when we got reciprocity with Canada prices would drop. And that stands to-day just as it did when I made the statement before. Taft's failure to secure reciprocity and his vetoes of the tariff revision have raised the cost of living to a record breaking point.

"The truth of that has already been shown. In anticipation of the success of the reciprocity pact prices began to fall. Had Canada ratified the bill we would have had lower prices to-day. Go to Canada and see what the prices are there. Food is from 10 to 20 per cent. lower than here. We would have got the benefit of that lower price.

"Is reciprocity dead, do you think, Governor?"

"No, I feel sure that it is not dead. Canada will wake up to what they have lost in time. They will see the direction in which things are drifting, and they will make the arrangements that we desire. It took the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill—that infamous and dastardly Payne-Aldrich bill—to wake up the American people.

"The days of that bill are numbered. The people will repudiate that legislation. And I think that the people of Canada will repudiate the recent action at the polls there. I think a new election will be held on this matter in Canada. Some think that it will come within eighteen months. I feel confident that in time reciprocity with Canada will be an accomplished fact.

Has No Apologies.

"I'm for reciprocity because it will benefit the people of Massachusetts and the people of the whole country. But the

Stops a Deep-Seated Cough in a Hurry

A Family Supply of Unequaled Cough Remedy for 50c—Money Refunded If It Fails.

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large proportion of plain syrup—a good ingredient, but one that anyone can make. A pint of granulated sugar, with ½ pint of warm water, stirred for two minutes, gives you as good syrup as money can buy.

A 50-cent bottle of Pinex, mixed in a pint bottle with home-made sugar syrup, gives you a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-mixed for $2.50. There's a clear saving of $2.00. Full directions in package.

And money couldn't buy a quicker, better remedy. Takes hold at once, gives almost instant relief, and usually stops the most obstinate, deep-seated cough in 24 hours. It stimulates the appetite, is slightly laxative and has a pleasant taste—children take it willingly. Splendid for hoarseness, asthma, chest pains and other throat troubles, and unequaled for prompt results in whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of imported Norway White Pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix it as directed with sugar syrup or granulated honey, and it is ready for use.

Used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Fort Wayne, Ind.

WHOLE TICKET WILL WIN, SAYS GOV. FOSS

Republicans are opposed to it and that is the reason why they have asked Senator Crane, the prince of campaign managers, to take charge of the fight against me. That's why they will flood this State with campaign cash.

"The biggest men in the party will come here and try to defeat me. The big organizations that oppose reciprocity and a reduction in the tariff will inundate the State with argument to defeat me.

"But it is to be hoped that Mr. Crane will not bring his friends with him, because if he does that might open up some matters that ordinarily would not be discussed in a State campaign."

"What have you to say, Governor, about your administration of the past year?"

"As Daniel Webster said when speaking about Massachusetts, so I say about my administration—there it is, behold it and judge for yourself. I have no apologies to make and shall make none."

"The Republicans are making an issue of your experts, Governor."

"Yes, they are saying something about them and it may be necessary for me to say something. These experts have done some magnificent work for the State. I am satisfied that they have benefited the people.

Defends His Experts.

"I had these experts only from the middle of March to the middle of July, and they attacked work that it would take two years to do as it should be done. They did simply the best they could in the time they had. They were limited in their work by the Walker law—a law in which I don't believe.

"I want to assure the people of Massachusetts on this point that as a result of what they have done they will save this State hundreds of thousands of dollars. One thing they have done that is of the greatest importance—they have toned up various departments. Expenditures are being looked after more carefully now than they were before the experts were provided.

"I distinctly instructed these experts that there was to be no muck-raking in their investigations. I told them that they were not sent out for the purpose of indiscriminating any one, but that they were employed to do a service to the State.

"Why, take that one fact that was unearthed at the State Farm when we found that something like $200,000 had been paid out within a few years and nobody knows who got it. That trouble has been corrected. It will not happen again. It will not happen again in any department. That accomplishment means something.

Cites Labor Legislation.

"And speaking about the finances of this State, I believe in that the Governor should have the right to veto certain items in the budget—that he should have a discriminating veto—but that it should be subject to certain items without vitiating the entire budget.

"As the thing stands now, the Governor can't veto one item unless he vetoes the whole budget. They have such a law in some States. We discussed the matter at the convention of Governors. I shall do what I can to get this power for the Governor of this State."

"Do you regard your administration as a progressive one?"

"We put on the statute books during my administration more progressive legislation," declared Governor Foss vigorously, "than was ever done before in any State in the same time. It more than equaled what had been done in a generation.

"Why, take the labor legislation alone. What a tremendous advance was made. Take the eight-hour-day, the fifty-four-hour law, the workmen's compensation act, the $9,000,000 harbor improvement bill, the West End merger—what a wonderful record it makes!

"I am proud of what was accomplished in connection with the West End matter. It was sold on all sides that the deal would never go through unless the stockholders of the West End got $ per cent. I did not believe it. I opposed it with all my power. Then it was proposed that the 6 per cent, be cut to 7½. But I said no, that 7 per cent. was right and that I had made up my mind not to stand for any more. And that is what was done and the people got the benefit of it."

"What do you think of the Democratic platform, Governor?"

"The platform is admirable in every respect."

"It is charged that you are not satisfied with it, Governor."

"I stand on that platform and indorse every plank in it. I think that the one big thing that stands out in the tariff problem. I am a believer in the principle of a non-business man. I stand to-day just where I stood ten years ago. In that time I have opposed a 'k' or dotted an 'i' to change my position.

"So far as I am concerned there is no politics in this matter whatever. I look at the matter as a manufacturer and seller of goods and as the employer of help. I look at the matter from a worldwide standpoint. I do not belittle any plank in that platform, but the one big thing that won't down—that can't be downed—is the tariff.

"And the most reasonable and most feasible way to get the benefit of a tariff reduction is to get reciprocity with Canada.

"My desire is to help the people. I have always had a sympathy with the people. Why shouldn't I. I am one of the people. I have worked with the people with my hands. I have mingled with them all my life and I propose to continue to work with them and for them.

Stayed Here for Employes.

"If I had not been sincere I would have left Massachusetts when my factory burned down eleven years ago and I would have gone to some place like Pittsburgh, where great inducements were held out to me. No, I declined to go to Pittsburg for the simple reason that I could not move my 1,000 employes to Pittsburgh.

"Some of those men had been with me all their lives practically. They had growing families. I had worked with them. I loved them and I could not desert them.

"And so I rebuilt my factory and kept my men. I told them that if conditions were bad in this State that we would go right to work and make them better. That is just what I have been striving to do."

"The Republicans charge, Governor, that if the tariff is reduced our workmen will be put on a basis with the cheap labor of Europe."

"That is not true. It would develop industry. It would develop the Southern States. Wages would be kept up through the efficiency of our workmen and our methods.

"I should like to take this opportunity to thank Daily and Sunday AMERICAN for the excellent work it has done and its support of the things I advocate. It was a big factor in bringing about my election last year and I have not forgotten it.

"What I have said here are some of the things that I shall repeat on the stump this Fall. Tariff reduction is going to benefit every man, woman and child in this State. It is a matter that goes into the homes and on the table.

"The people of Massachusetts demand relief and they will voice that demand at the polls on election day."

Mayor Fitzgerald Tells Why Voters Should Support Foss

By MAYOR JOHN F. FITZGERALD.

I have been asked to give reasons why, in my opinion, a thoughtful voter should prefer Governor Foss to Mr. Frothingham as a candidate for the highest magistracy of this Commonwealth. The best reasons I can give are contained in a comparison of the records of the two men. The reader of these deadly parallel columns will know where each of the candidates stand on certain fundamental questions affecting the public welfare.

GOVERNOR FOSS.	MR. FROTHINGHAM.
MEASURES ADOPTED.
Nine million dollars for Boston harbor.	Voted against free text books and supplies for public school pupils.
Workingmen's compensation law, rendering justice to injured employes.	Voted against bill repealing hours of labor for women and children.
Limitation of personal expenses of candidates.	Voted against nine hour day labor on public buildings.
Anti-injunction bill giving right of trial by jury to alleged violators of injunctions.	Voted against referendum on amendments to constitution.
Fifty-four hour week for women and children.	Voted against reduction of fares on railroads in and out of Boston.
Eight-hour day for public employes.	Voted against bill allowing one day in eight to firemen.
Initiative and referendum.	Voted against two cent mileage bill on railroads in this State.
Public opinion bill.	Voted against popular election of United States Senators.
Bill to give peaceful persuasion in labor disputes.	Voted against referendum on municipal franchises and locations.

PLATFORMS COMPARED BY A LABOR LEADER

or to any other measure that organized labor in this Commonwealth repeatedly has petitioned for, namely:

"We propose protecting the toiler from the dangers of modern industry."

"The following measures of our party policy have been enacted:

"Direct nominations, corrupt-practices act, jury trial in injunction contempt cases, the eight-hour law, the fifty-four-hour law, harbor and dock improvements."

Inquiry into Women's Wages.

They also might have made mention, had they so desired, of the act creating the commission now conducting an inquiry into the question of minimum wages paid women and children, with a view to making it a criminal offense for any employer to pay a child a wage that does not permit of an American standard of living.

Their opponents, on the other hand, while not denying that the Republican party has been in control of the State government with its majority ranging as far more than half a century," seemed to be unable to point to any legislation of importance that had been demanded by organized labor, and which had been refused by the Republicans during that boasted-of half-century.

"The prosperity of Massachusetts depends upon the skill of our workmen as mechanics, her farmers," is one of the declarations of the Democratic platform. An exhaustive and exhausting perusal of the same platform fails to find a single close any specific promise to remedy the grievances complained of by these skilled workers.

The election of United States Senators by popular vote, abolishment of the Republican board, a permanent State tribunal to determine the further development of our harbor front, and the keeping of its control and use in the hands of a public—public service corporations; a reduction in the valuation of party and personal assessments, and in addition to every instance the Democratic platform pledges a pledge, a promise to do everything possible for their betterment.

The Republican platform, notwithstanding the fact that it is behind and running over with the phrases and glittering generalities that is to give the common, every-day man any assurances on these important matters.

So far as its platform is concerned, which is the only document upon which the voters can pass in judgment when trying to size up what the Republican party intends to do in the future, that party has no hope or promise or anything definite for the people of this State in the immediate future.

Thousands Depend on Factories.

It is a matter of common knowledge that "we have a Commonwealth of more than 3,000,000, people dependent almost wholly upon manufacturing for their support. Of this 3,000,000 souls, to the trades of wading through the platform of any political party of any kind. The thing that most concerns these 3,000,000 people engaged in manufacturing pursuits is what betterments are proposed for their personal welfare by the men who demand that they be given control of the law-making power of the Commonwealth for the coming years.

The self-evident fact that stared every workingman with a job in this State a year ago, in the South, is known to every schoolboy. It was a waste of energy to read any part of those who wrote the Republican platform to call attention to that fact of national existence. The people of to-day want to know what the office-seeking officeholders, Republicans and Democrats, intend to do for the welfare of the toilers of the present time.

Quoting the warfare against tuberculosis and inebriety," as outlined in the Republican platform, is all very well and good. The working-class voter, however, in common with all other right-thinking citizens, wants to know if the Republican party intends to do away with the horrible practice of making paupers out of innocent women and children, by sacrificing to rent and Democrats criminal the husband and father who chances to be placed under arrest for drunkenness.

"The time has gone by when men count a ballot a thing to be cast for one party or another no matter what that party may call it.

How to Cure Rheumatism

Prominent Doctor's Best Prescription It Is Easily Mixed.

This is a very simple and harmless formula, but it has worked wonders for all who have tried it, quickly curing chronic and acute rheumatism and back-ache. Get one ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound and one ounce of Toris compound. Then get half a pint of good whiskey (or sherry wine if it is preferred) and put the other two ingredients into it. Take a tablespoonful of this mixture before each meal and at bed time. Shake the bottle before using. Results are felt the first day and despair has been forever routed, and will quickly get them from his wretched home. Any one can mix this.

This was practically published here and many of the worst cases of rheumatism and back-ache were cured by it in a short time. The tonic effect of the combination is also very remarkable, eradicating rheumatism it also restores vitality.

The EVENING AMERICAN guarantees to advertisers the largest circulation by far of any daily newspaper in Boston, and over 200,000 more than the next highest evening circulation, and over 100,000 more than all the other Boston evening newspapers combined. Circulation books open to all.

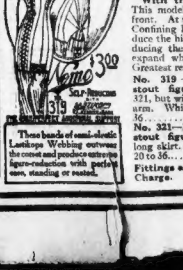
Celebrated as the Most Exclusive $5.00 Line in New England

Not a "few" higher-priced hats at $5.00 or a lot of undesirable frame or hand-made styles, but hundreds of beautiful long-napped beaver, rich pile velvet, imported and domestic velour, and scratch fur Fait shapes, trimmed with rich silk bows, exclusive tailored feather novelties, etc. Right up to the minute in style. Positively equal to $7.50 value shown elsewhere.



Nemo TRIPLE STRIP Self-Reducing Corsets

With the New Lastikops Flatning-Back

This model has the regular Nemo Self-Reducing front; At the bottom of the long skirt are the Hip-Confining Bands of Lastikops Webbing, which reduce the hips and turn the corset edge inward, producing the fashionable "in-curve." These bands expand when you sit down, giving perfect ease. Greatest reducing corset ever sold at the price.

TARKINGTONS END AN IDEAL ROMANCE

Novelist's Wife Blames Wealth and Success for Shattered Dream of Love.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The separation of Booth Tarkington, the novelist and playwright, from his beautiful wife, who was Miss Louise Fletcher of Indianapolis, ends tragically a romance begun with all the glamour and moonlight of a love story in a book.

Seven years ago, when the wedding took place, the whole country was raving with the pretty story of the meeting of Miss Fletcher and her fiance. Their love was apparent to all who saw them together, and all signs pointed to an ideal married life. Today Mrs. Tarkington returns from Europe after months of absence and declares she is never going to live with her husband again. She says she is through with him.

Wealth and success were what spoiled the married life of the Tarkingtons. When they married he was a struggling Indiana novelist and she was the daughter of a millionaire, but had not inherited her share of her father's wealth.

One book after another, one play after another brought wealth and fame to Tarkington and kept him away from his wife and home.

Mrs. Tarkington comes right out and declares that there is no woman in the case; merely that her husband prefers New York and Europe to his family circle in Indianapolis.

Miss Louise Fletcher and her father lived just around the corner from the Tarkingtons in Indianapolis, but they never met until one fateful day at the Country Club in 1902.

Miss Fletcher had just returned from several years absence attending Eastern colleges and she proudly bore a diploma from Smith acquired the year before. Mr. Tarkington was tremendously impressed by the beautiful, vivacious and wholly charming young woman and though her father was a millionaire and Mr. Tarkington wasn't so very well to do, that didn't make any difference in Indianapolis.

The author who had done newspaper work and a few short stories began his first book while under the inspiration of his love for her, and "A gentleman from Indiana" had for a heroine a favorable Louise Fletcher.

Flirting was the rage in Indianapolis at that time and Miss Fletcher was the champion. She played many games with Tarkington and always beat him. He declared he was too busy looking at her that he never noticed the ball until it was too late.

TARIFF THE ISSUE, SAYS SENATOR LODGE

Insurgents Called "Recreant Republicans" in Speech at Middlesex Club.

"The tariff, that's the issue," declared United States Senator Lodge yesterday at the reception tendered at Young's by the Middlesex Club to Republican State nominees.

"Yes," went on the senior Senator—and the boss of Republican politics in the State—"the tariff is the issue. The eyes of the nation are upon Massachusetts and upon what this State will do in November. Democrats in Congress, with the aid of recreant Republicans, sought to put President Taft in a hole by passing tariff bills which the executive promptly vetoed. And in his vetoes the President fixed the issue for the campaign this year in our State and for the greater campaign in the year to come.

"The people will have to chose between a tariff for revenue only, which is free trade, and a tariff for the protection of American industries."

Senator Lodge was cheered and cheered again by the assembled two hundred Republicans—almost all of them officeholders—and was followed by speeches on the Republican State ticket.

Lieut.-Gov. Frothingham, campaigning in the central part of the State, sent his regrets. Robert Luce, Frothingham's place, Secretary of State Albert P. Langtry and Auditor John E. White held the banners and urged the defeat of Gov. Foss.

Congressman Robert O. Harris and Samuel J. Elder urged the importance to the wage worker of keeping the tariff where it is, and Representative ex-Congressman and president of the club, did the same thing.

CHILDREN'S WEEK

Commencing tomorrow morning and continuing during the week we shall run a special Fall sale in our Infants' Dept. We specialize in Children's Clothing up to 5 years of age. During the coming week probably one-half the women of New England will purchase their children's Winter outfit. Our stock is not the largest in the city, but by all means, it is the best selected. We give especial attention to the make and finish of every garment, no matter whether it sells for 49c or $50. We run this dept. as a sort of advertising card to our other business. A competitor complained only a short time ago that we sold goods too low; that our prices demoralized the business. We simply replied that that was our affair.

FALL SHIRT WAISTS

Tailored Waists are in big demand. We probably notice this more than the other merchants, because we handle our waists, and therefore give more attention to this particular part of our Waist Dept. In tailored waists, covering all grades and materials, we have a price from $1.00 to $3.50, we show over 400 styles. Do you wonder that when a woman wants a tailored waist of any description she naturally comes to us?

Flannel Shirts—Don't you want to be in it and have a flannel waist made like a man's shirt, with collar and cuff collar attached? They are made of pure French and Scotch flannel and our price is only 1.95

These waists are the thing for all outdoor occasions.

Have You Ever Tried Our Best Grade of Fine Chocolates?

We think they are the best obtainable at the price. Do not allow your prejudice to get the better of your good judgment, and think that because you pay $1.00 or more a pound is the only where the chocolates must be better than ours. Ours are made in our own factory, by skilled workmen, from the best material obtainable, and our price is only 70c a pound... and our price is only 70c a pound..... 70c

Webster's Intercollegiate Dictionary

Undoubtedly the greatest value in a really fine Dictionary that has ever been offered in Boston. It is built upon a new plan which reduces an unabridged dictionary to proportions of a teacher's Bible. Elegantly bound in full flexible Morocco, red edges with thumb index, 1224 pages, in large and very clear type, on very thin imported Bible paper, 50,000 words defined, with an extra large appendix of many new and very valuable features. The regular price of this dictionary is $2.75. We offer it for only 89c. By mail 17c extra..... 89c

For the benefit of those living at a distance, who would like one of these Dictionaries, if they could know just what they are, we have circulars with photographic reproductions showing the exact size and appearance of this Dictionary, sample pages and a full description. These circulars we will mail to anyone on request.

The New England Baptist Hospital gets $5,000 and Colby College, Newton Theological Institute gets $1,000. To various Baptist societies in New England he bequeathed sums totaling $25,000, more than $4,000,000.

TAYLOR AUTO DEATH CASE IS CONTINUED

WORCESTER, Oct. 7.—Paul F. Taylor, the richest young man in Worcester, was arraigned in the District Court in Marlborough to-day on two counts of manslaughter charging responsibility for the deaths of Patrick Sullivan, who had a place of business at No. 1,218 Washington street, Boston, and Frank Downes of Mattapan, when Taylor's auto sideswiped that in which the victims were riding in Marlboro on September 23. At the request of counsel the case was continued until next Saturday, no plea being made. Bail was continued at $2,000.

Taylor was in court and was represented by four lawyers. Three were for counsel for the Taylor estate, which is valued at more than $4,000,000.

THREE GIRLS HURT IN HOTEL EXPLOSION

Three girls were hurt and several other people were frightened when a hot water pipe exploded in a basement laundry of the New Maritime Hotel, No. 738 Washington street late yesterday.

Miss Mary Maloney of No. 17 Lamartine street, Jamaica Plain, one of the kitchen staff, was hurled to the floor, receiving severe bruises on one side.

Two chambermaids who were in the laundry when the explosion occurred, were thrown from their feet. One, a Miss Connolly, was cut on the face. Miss Brady of Jamaica Plain, was injured on the leg. One of the maids was sent to the nearest doctor's office in a taxi. The other chambermaid and Mrs. Maloney were attended at the hotel.

CRAIG PRIZE GOES TO RADCLIFFE GIRL

The Craig prize of $250 for the best play written by students of Harvard or Radcliffe has been awarded this year to Miss Elizabeth Apthorp McFadden, L. B., of Cincinnati, a graduate student of Radcliffe College. In addition to the prize, which is offered each year by John Craig of the Castle Square Theatre, the author of the play is promised a production of the composition within a stated time, the price being given to the Harvard University library for the purchase of books dealing with the history of the English stage.

LYNN SHOE CUTTERS DEMAND 8 HOURS

Lynn shoe cutters are out with a demand on the shoe manufacturers for an eight hour day, instead of a nine and a half hour day.

The question will be considered by the manufacturers at a meeting on Tuesday evening.

A strike of the cutters would affect some 20,000 operatives directly and demoralize the entire business of the city.

At the meeting of the Manufacturers' Association to be held Tuesday evening in Historical Hall, the chair will be taken by F. J. Hardy, president of the association.

Latimer S. Johnson, one of the largest manufacturers of Lynn, said last evening to the AMERICAN reporter:

"The matter will be thrashed out there and then, I suppose, we will be ready to give our answer."

Try This for Colds
Prescription Known for Results Rather than Large Quantity.

Go to your druggist and get "Two ounces of Glycerine and half an ounce of Concentrated Pine compound. Mix these with half a pint of good whiskey. Shake well. Take one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bed time. Smaller doses as to children according to age." Any one can prepare this at home. This is said to be the quickest cough and cold cure known to the medical profession. Be sure to get only the genuine (Globe) Concentrated Pine. Each half ounce bottle comes in a tin screw-top sealed case. If the druggist is out of stock he will soon get it from the wholesale house. Don't fool with mixtures. It is risky. If the first dose does not relieve, the second will. Full directions for the use of the extract will be found in each package. For adults get only the most concentrated.

We aspire to be absolutely pre-eminent in the Suit and Coat business of Boston, and are fast attaining that position. We are offering these Suits at this price only to that end, and we positively do not overestimate the value when we tell you that these Suits are being sold at other stores up to, and a few above, $40.00. We are illustrating three (3) of the models, which will give you but a faint idea of the magnitude and comprehensiveness of our stock at this price, as we are showing at least twenty others. No woman who wants to buy a Suit and has thought of paying up to $50.00, should miss this sale, as she is bound to be satisfied here. The tailoring, cloths, linings and trimmings are consistent with garments worth twice as much as we are asking for these. Some models severely tailored, made by the best tailors in America. Others beautifully braided, again others with wide silk braid, most with hand tailored coats and beautiful silk ornaments and frogs used as fastener. Skirts also, in some cases, show Trimming.

The materials include the finest broadcloths, serges, worsteds, diagonal and plain cheviots, fine mixtures, and in fact, every material used in fine suits. The styles are wonderful in their completeness, every new embellishment and latest Paris fashions are embodied in these suits. Only the finest Peau de Cygne and Satins are used as linings. A lot of these suits have silk shields, and remember, this is not a lot of suits made and purchased for a sale, but suits taken out of our regular stocks that we ordinarily sell up to and including $40.00, so that you are assured of getting every size from 34 to 44, in every color shown this Fall and black. In reference to alterations, we do not think many will be required, as these garments are as near perfect as good designers and tailors can make them.

½ Price Sale for Men

A Leading Manufacturer's Entire Stock of Combination Rain Proof Overcoats Purchased by Us at 50c on the Dollar

To be sold in our Third Floor Clothing Department, beginning tomorrow, at one price—

$12 Rain Proof Overcoats
$15 Rain Proof Overcoats
$18 Rain Proof Overcoats

These overcoats are made of high-grade, strictly rain-proofed worsteds and fancy scotches in the very newest fancy greys, neat stripes, plaids and blacks. Coats are 52 inches long. Many are made of the celebrated Priestly cravenetted materials. REMEMBER one-half of these coats are heavy winter overcoats, rainproofed.

It is no longer necessary for a man to have both an overcoat and a raincoat. Even if he has both it often happens that the raincoat is at the wrong end of the line when the rain storm comes. Not so with these coats. To all appearances one of these coats is a high-grade overcoat such as any high-class tailor would make for $25.00 or $30.00. But when it begins to rain it will be found that one of these coats will shed the water as well and keep you as dry as any RUBBER raincoat ever made.

The man who invented the process by which these coats are rain proof has made millions of dollars out of his invention because he invented something really worth while, and for every dollar he has made he has saved the men who wear the coats many other dollars by combining a raincoat and an overcoat into one.

This is absolutely and without question the most sensational sale announced this season for men and the coats are as good as sold when this advertisement is read today. Size 36 to 44; regular $12.00, $15.00 and $18.00 coats; sale price..... $7.50

2,000 MARCHERS IN PARADE AT LYNN

Temperance Societies Celebrate Anniversary of Birth of Father Mathew.

With church services in the morning, a parade in the afternoon, and a ball in the evening, the Catholic temperance societies of Lynn observed the 137th anniversary of the birth of the Rt. Rev. Theobald Mathew, the noted Irish apostle of temperance. Delegations of temperance advocates from every city and town in Essex County aided in the celebration.

Although the birthday of Father Mathew falls on Tuesday, October 10, it was decided to celebrate the event yesterday, as most of the members of the temperance societies are to participate in the great Columbus Day parade in Boston.

The parade was the principal event of the day. More than 2,000 were in line. Promptly at 8:15 the word was given by Chief Marshal Thomas F. Connolly to start. Headed by a squad of mounted police the parade passed through the principal streets of Lynn.

The parade was split into two divisions, at the head of the first division was the Father Mathew C. T. A. Society. Then followed a float of women, all members of the Father Mathew C. T. A. Auxiliary. Of particular interest in the float was the commanding figure of Father Mathew, impersonated by Joseph Duffy, pledging a pledge to a child.

In the second division were delegations from the various Catholic Temperance Societies from every section of Essex county. Mayor William P. Connery and members of the Lynn city government were in line.

At City Hall square the members of the societies fell out of line and scattered to the quarters of the temperance societies. St. Mary's, the Sacred Heart and Father Mathew's, where luncheon was served.

The ball, an elaborate affair, was attended by many public officials. Mayor Connery delivered an address on the "Life of Father Mathew."

ELIOT INSCRIBES BUILDING.

Prepares Message to Appear on Washington Postoffice.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard University, has written the inscriptions to go on the new city postoffice at the request of the architects. Upon the east pavilion of the building will be the following inscription: "Carrier of News and Knowledge, Instrument of Trade and Commerce, Promoter of Mutual Acquaintance Among Men and Nations, and Herald of Peace and Good Will." On the west pavilion will be this: "Carrier of Love and Sympathy, Messenger of Friendship, Comforter in the Lonely, Bond of the Scattered Family, Enlarger of the Common Life." These inscriptions have received the approval of Secretary McVeagh. The new building will be let to contract October 10.

WINDOW SMASHER IS LANDED BEHIND BARS

John McDonald of Howard street, Quincy, is locked up in the City Hall avenue police station, charged with breaking a $200 plate glass window in the store of Philip Cohen at No. 67 Hanover street at midnight and taking goods valued at $33.

Prior to this, he smashed a window in the store of Frederick Gray, at No. 64 Washington street, but nothing was taken. He gave the police as a clue money they captured him.

A girl's cap was present in the Cohen store when McDonald smashed in the glass, and the police say the fellow. When arrested McDonald, according to the police, had the goods in his possession that he took from the Cohen store. He was charged with breaking and entering. Today Mr. McDonald will be arraigned in the municipal court tomorrow morning.

SINCLAIRS RECONCILED?

Author May Call Off His Pending Divorce Suit.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The marital troubles of the Upton Sinclairs have been partly smoothed over, it was reported tonight, and the wife of the divorce brought by the author-poet may be abandoned.

Such was the information gleaned at the residence of Mrs. Sinclair's father, W. W. Fuller, from a member of the family who desired that her name be withheld for the time being.

Mr. Sinclair's attorney, George H. Gilman, when told over the telephone last night of the news of the contemplated withdrawal of the suit, said he was not at all surprised.

"What next," he said, "is really always news regarding my client, and advance news is the regulation news. I have been accustomed to receive it. The newspapers have always heard of the determination of the Sinclairs before I have."

"The last formal word I received from Mr. Sinclair is that he wants to push the suit. But he changes his mind often, and so, no doubt, on Monday I may receive a verification of this report."

JEREMIAH MAHONEY DEAD.

Succumbs to Long Illness at His Home in Salem.

Jeremiah T. Mahoney, Register of Probate in Essex county for twenty-eight years, died at his home in Lynde street, Salem, late last night, following a long illness. He was sixty-three years old.

Until two years ago, he was president of the Salem National bank, giving up that office when the bank merged with the others. Mr. Mahoney was born in Salem, receiving his education in the public schools.

JOHN JACOB ASTOR'S SON IS AT HARVARD

Vincent, with $5,000 a Year for Pin Money, Will Specialize in Science.

VINCENT ASTOR'S FRESHMAN OUTFIT.

Twenty suits of clothes.
Ten pairs of shoes. (Five pairs ridiculed every morning.)
Six trunks.
Suite up the "Gold Coast."
Five thousand dollars a year spending money. (All bills to father.)
Six rugs.
Wall paper effects.
Open fireplace.
Costly pictures.
All the "Rain's."

While you hugged over morning coffee and toast today, "Jimmie" was polishing five pairs of shoes for Astor at Harvard.

"Jimmie" is the house valet at Cleverly Hall, one of Harvard's "Gold Coast" dormitories. He is an ex-pugilist, not an undesirable recommendation at times in saints.

When "Jimmie" stops at the hall door of suite 37, Cleverly, and picks up five pairs of shoes to shine, two things are revealed of Vincent Astor, owner of the five pairs.

First—He is democratic enough to use the house valet, instead of having a valet of his own.

Second—He is luxurious enough to have five pairs of shoes polished daily.

Hence, the richest man at Harvard (via father) is living like an Astor but is not being foolish about it.

Vincent Astor, son and heir of John Jacob Astor, whose wealth is estimated at $100,000,000, is a freshman at the big university across the Charles. He has entered with the class of 1915, and presumably will be graduated with flying colors. He is a bright chap, also inclined to be studious.

Income of $5,000 a Year.

It is understood around Cleverly that Vincent Astor has a college income of $5,000 a year. That is for spending money alone. Reduced to figures which can be understood in a suburban home, this means about $150 a week for the college year.

That is merely for spending money. All the bills go to father. And they will be "home bills," too. Cleverly Hall suites rent a lot of money. Tailors' bills will foot up considerable. Young Astor enters Harvard with twenty suits of clothes.

"Rain" will amount to something. If Astor puts up at one of the college clubs or fraternity houses, the bill can be sent to father, too. Garage bills, extra trunks and other items can be mailed to the head of the house.

So the $5,000 will amount to a good sum, when all the regular bills are eliminated.

Some years ago a Japanese Count came to Harvard with his son. He consulted President Eliot and asked: "I intend to give my son an allowance of $20,000 a year. Is that sufficient?"

President Eliot immediately said he did not care to have any Harvard man with an allowance of over $5,000 a year. The Count immediately cut down the amount of the sum. Colonel John Jacob Astor, the richest man in America, gives his son the Eliot limit but no more.

Specialize in Science.

Suite 37, Cleverly, is on the third floor, northeast corner. It is regarded as the premiere suite in Cleverly, that is, just the one for an Astor.

A reporter found ranged about the entry the Astor trunks, most of them overflowing with purple and fine linen. The occupant of the suite was getting settled. Five pairs of polished shoes, newly polished that morning, were in the entry. They testified to the skill and energy of "Jimmie," the house valet with the pugilistic past.

A knock at the door of the suite proper brought Vincent Astor promptly. He is tall and of manly appearance. He is deeply tanned. He stands so straight that he gets the full benefit of his six feet, one inch of height.

He was not fussy about whoever might be at his door. He was tying a necktie when he heard the knock and he came to the door with his tie half-adjusted.

"Does Vincent Astor live here?"

"That's me."

The caller declared himself as a reporter.

"O, what do you want of me?" queried young Astor as coolly as he had been asked the time o' day.

"What do you think of Harvard?"

"Harvard's all right."

"What course are you going to take in college?"

"I'm going to specialize in sciences more or less. Chemistry and physics, you know."

Will Not Be a Physician.

"Going to be a doctor?"

"O, no, but I like this sort of work."

The "doctor" query was put because Colonel Astor has said he wishes Vincent to study law, while Vincent preferred medicine. This was considered natural on the colonel's part, in view of the vast estate the young man will eventually handle. It looks as though Vincent has given up his medical preferences.

The heir to the house of Astor has fitted his rooms luxuriously. The big living room, with its broad bay window, is crimson, gold and green in color scheme. A Persian rug at which any woman would exclaim, will delight every the third floor. There are easy chairs, pictures and fancy draperies, but such as one would expect to find in a suite where money is the least object of all.

The walls are covered with heavy tapestry, new and obviously put on for the latest occupant.

Col. Pillsbury Dies Suddenly.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Oct. 7.—Colonel William Pillsbury, a wealthy shoe manufacturer and old-time Republican, died suddenly today from heart failure. He was seventy-eight years of age. His son, Bowers W. Pillsbury, is publisher of the Manchester Union and prominent in politics.

With the opening of the new banks the total of postoffice banks in Boston will be nine, for one was recently opened at the Central office. The postal banks will be under the superintendence for the present of Superintendent Corbig of the Central office.

M'KEE DIVORCE CASE IS TO BE REOPENED

Grandmother Will Bring Suit for Possession of Noted Beauty's Son.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, Oct. 7.—Mrs. H. Sellers McKee, mother of A. Hart McKee, has brought suit for the custody of her grandson, "Baby" McKee, which threatens to reopen the whole divorce case in which her son and Mrs. Cornelia Baxter Terle-McKee, his wife, figured. The child is now permitted to spend two days every week with his grandmother. The remainder of the time he is in the custody of his mother.

The French courts are loath to separate mother and child, unless it can be shown that the mother is absolutely unfit to have the custody of the infant. Mrs. H. Sellers McKee, wife of the Pittsburg millionaire, is prominent in society, charity and church work, has made up his mind that the child must be brought up properly in its present environment.

Her allegations are likely to open some new chapters and introduce some new characters into the domestic drama of the beautiful Mrs. McKee, sometimes called "the handsomest American woman in Europe and often declared to be the most beautiful daughter of the native state of Tennessee.

Prominent Names Mentioned.

The divorce names that will be brought into the case is that of Count Apponyi, Secretary of the Austrian embassy in Argentine. He figures prominently in the letter Terle-McKee. It is said she discovered the had no money and left the Argentine Republic.

Hadie Hamid Pasha will be another to be brought into the case. It was he who assisted Mrs. McKee when she was seeking a divorce from her husband, to her and accepted her stocks as security. Then he refused to give them back and she brought suit which was withdrawn because of his publicity.

The Turk was then commissioner of public works of Constantinople. He had plenty of money and liked Paris as a residence. The Young Turks, when they took possession of the capital, made his residence here a matter of necessity. The transaction of the stocks with the Turkish noblemen cut Mrs. McKee's income from $30,000 to $15,000 a year and caused her great inconvenience.

The Third Gallant.

The third ardent gallant eager to matrey Mrs. Terle-McKee was Prince Tean Ghika. The prince, however, need a divorce to do this, even though he may have the consent of Mrs. McKee to his suit. The Princess Ghika was Miss Hazel Singer, of Chicago, daughter of Charles J. Singer.

Before contracting this marriage, it is said that the prince was so careless that he acquainted the word of a friend that Miss Singer was one of the sewing machine heiresses with so much wealth it was a hard matter to find out what to do with it. The Prince was fortunate enough to become the husband of Mrs. McKee. He is a brother of the Prince Ghika, who married the Parisian beauty, Elaine De Pourg, and his cousin is pretender to the throne of Albania. The suit of Mrs. H. Sellers McKee is set for trial before the first tribunal of the Seine on Wednesday and her efforts to obtain possession of her grandson promises to be interesting.

Address by C. K. Bolton.

The Sunday Concert Service at the Museum of Fine Arts today will include two lectures, one by Charles K. Bolton on "Gilbert Stuart" in the Early American Room at 3 o'clock, and the other immediately following, on "The Development of Portrait Sculpture," by Lacey D. Caskey in the Fifth Century Room.

Girl Killed by Fall.

NORTH ADAMS, Oct. 7.—Pauline Gierek, eighteen, was instantly killed by falling from the piazza at her home. The railing broke.

LEWIS OF RED SOX JILTS HIS FIANCEE

Calls Off Wedding To-morrow With Miss Elenore Keane and Leaves for West.

Friends of Miss Elenore Keane of Hyde Park, who was to be married to-morrow to George E. (Duffy) Lewis, the Red Sox left fielder, were shocked to learn yesterday that there will be no wedding. The engagement is broken. Miss Keane, utterly prostrated, says Lewis has jilted her.

The abrupt news of the broken engagement caused great surprise in Hyde Park and among Boston baseball fans, who were interested in the prospective bride of one of the Red Sox team.

The bans were to have been called for the third time to-day by the Rev. James Chittick, pastor of the Church of the Most Precious Blood in Hyde Park. The wedding was to have taken place to-morrow morning, by special dispensation, in the rectory of St. Margaret's Church, Lowell, because the Rev. John J. Harkins, pastor of the Lowell church, is a close friend of Lewis.

To-day, instead of looking forward to her wedding, Miss Keane is broken-hearted in her Hyde Park home. She will return the engagement ring Lewis gave her and will then try to forget the sorrow she now feels.

Miss Keane said last night that Lewis told her last week Friday that the wedding would not take place. He said he had changed his mind through advice given him. Miss Keane said that Lewis told the name of President Taaffe of the Red Sox. The two quarreled but made up Thursday. Lewis telephoned Miss Keane she says, and told her he had finally decided not to marry.

"I was terribly surprised the time," added Miss Keane, "because we had made all our plans and had talked of how I should travel with the team next year.

"I was wearing the diamond he had given me and all our friends were to attend the wedding in Lowell Monday.

"I tried to get Duffy on the 'phone yesterday but they told me he had gone to California. I am going away from Hyde Park. No, I shall not think of seeing him. I only want to go away."

RESCUED FROM FLAMES.

Brookline Woman Is Carried To the Street by Patrolman.

Patrolman Matthew Moreland of the Brookline police climbed to the second floor of No. 28 Pearl street, Brookline, last night, through blinding smoke and assisted Mrs. Mary Coughlin, who is well along in years, to the street. Her husband, John, was able to get out himself.

The cause of the fire is unknown. When Lieut. Albert Allen arrived he found several fires going at one time in different parts of the house, he told Chief Johnson, who arrived later, and he will report the affair to the police to-morrow morning. The damage was $100.

MAYOR IS WORRIED OVER CORNERSTONE

Were you around town in 1832?

If you were—and are still around town—and if you happened to be along Court street when they laid the cornerstone of the Old Court House, please tell Mayor Fitzgerald under which corner they laid the cornerstone.

The Mayor is looking for the corner. Finding that, he hopes to find the cornerstone. He wishes to preserve the stone and give it to some historical society or a collector of cornerstones.

The cornerstone of the Old Court House, which is now being torn down—the hours not the cornerstone—was laid in 1832 with Masonic rites. The Mayor has had files of the Boston Courier consulted, but so far he learned is the date of the laying. The reporters of that early date neglected to specify which of the four corners was chosen by the architect, Masons, et al., to contain the honored stone.

Then the Mayor asked Charles T. Gallagher, the Massachusetts Mason, if his records would specify which corner Mr. Gallagher decided that if any records told that information, they were destroyed when the old Masonic Temple in Tremont street was burned in 1894.

Now the Mayor wonders if any elderly Bostonian, now living, who happened to witness the laying of this stone, can recall which corner holds the desired souvenir.

The Old Court House is about half torn down. Before the workmen get to the lower courses the Mayor wishes to learn what corner to watch so the cornerstone can be saved from injury.

How Society Woman Wards off Wrinkles

"Wrinkles are not strangers to me, but when I acquire such disfigurements I know how to lose them in a hurry." A well-known society matron confided this to me. I had wondered how she, with her strenuous social duties and late hours, could so completely ward off the usual marks of care and dissipation.

"I don't wear wrinkles in public nor those horrid lines beneath the eyes," she continued, "since I've learned what plain, ordinary saxolite will do. When any of those hateful marks appear, I send to the drug-store for an ounce of powdered saxolite and a half pint of witch hazel. I mix the two, bathe my face in the solution and—that's the whole secret. I've never known anything that works so miraculously. My chin is inclined to double; this trouble, too, I keep in check in the same way."—Emily Dean in Town Talk.

PE-RU-NA RECEIVES PRAISE.

For Relieving Such Symptoms as Debility, Backache and Headache.

Mrs. Tressie Nelson, 150 3rd Ave., N., Nashville, Tenn., writes: "As Peruna has done me a world of good I feel in duty bound to tell of it, in hopes that it may meet the eye of some who has suffered as I did.

"For five years I really did not know what a perfectly well day was, and if I did not have headache, I had backache or a pain somewhere and really life was not worth the effort I made to keep going.

"A good friend advised me to use Peruna and I was glad to try anything, and I am very pleased to say that six bottles made a new woman of me and I have no more pains and life looks bright again."

There are a great many phases of woman's ailments that require the assistance of the surgeon.

But by far the greatest number of such cases are amenable to correct medicinal treatment.

Our Medical Department receives many letters from all parts of the country relating to subjects of vital interest to womankind.

Of the vast multitude of women who take Peruna only a very small percentage consider it necessary to write us on the subject.

While it is not affirmed that Peruna will relieve every case of this kind, it is certainly the part of wisdom for every woman so afflicted to give Peruna a fair trial.

Mrs. Joseph Lacelle, 124 Glenora Ave., Ottawa, East, Ontario, Canada, writes:

"I suffered with backache and headache for over nine months and nothing relieved me until I took Peruna. This medicine is by far better than any other medicine for these troubles. A few bottles relieved me of my miserable, half-dead, half-alive condition.

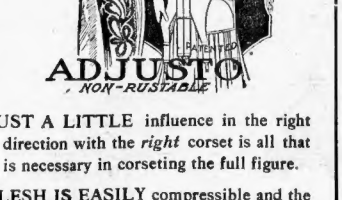
"I am now in good health, have neither ache nor pain, nor have I had any for the past year. If every suffering woman would take Peruna, they would know its value and never be without it."

Mrs. Ella Miskell, R. F. D. 2, Box 80, Scottsburg, Indiana, writes:

"I suffered for two years with catarrh in the head, having such pains in the head and face that I feared I would lose my reason. I tried every known remedy, but gradually grew worse. Nights of restlessness would succeed days of agony. After taking twelve bottles of Peruna I am entirely well."

NON-RUSTABLE
ADJUSTO CORSETS

Easily Adjusted in the "Twinkling of an Eye"



JUST A LITTLE influence in the right direction with the right corset is all that is necessary in corseting the full figure.

FLESH IS EASILY compressible and the stout woman needs only the "gentle persuasion" of the ADJUSTO corset to assume the charm and grace of more slender figures.

THE ADJUSTO CORSET with the world-famous "Reducing Bands" does the work with ease. SOLD EVERYWHERE $3 and $5. Ask your dealer.

ANOTHER VICTORY IS WON FOR HOME RULE

Thomas W. Russell Elected to Parliament for North Tyrone After Bitter Fight.

DUBLIN, Oct. 7.—Thomas W. Russell, who ran as Liberal and Home Ruler, was elected today for North Tyrone in succession to Redmond Barry, who was recently appointed Lord Chancellor of Ireland.

It was a close election, Mr. Russell's poll being 3,704 to 3,600 votes cast for the Tory candidate, E. C. Herdman.

Mr. Russell's accession to the home rule cause is quite as important as that of Sir A. Conan Doyle, the novelist, at last week declined an invitation to an anti-Home Rule meeting at Belfast on the ground that he is no longer opposed to granting Ireland self-government.

TOURAINE CLERK IS CAUGHT IN NEW YORK

Bertram H. Gallagher, recently the room clerk at the Hotel Touraine, whom the Boston police have been seeking on charges of passing worthless checks, was arrested in New York yesterday afternoon after a slight scrap made by the house detectives of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. The clerks in the New York case are said to be drawn on a Boston bank for $200.

Dispatches from New York to the Sunday AMERICAN last night, relating Gallagher's arrest, added that a taxicab chauffeur was also under arrest there with an unpaid bill of $34. The chauffeur declared that Gallagher landed just after he was arrested. The chauffeur hustled to the police station for his money, but was told to go to Jefferson Market police court tomorrow morning to press the claim.

The $34 bill was for a little taxi jaunt of nine hours which Gallagher, according to the chauffeur, had enjoyed the day before.

The Boston police have been looking for Gallagher for two weeks. The police will ask the New York authorities for a warrant to prevent the clerk from leaving until he has passed bad checks on Boston merchants to the amount of $500.

Was a Free Spender.

The Waldorf-Astoria charges Gallagher with getting two worthless checks cashed for a total of $200. He is described as a tall, trim, smartly dressed young man registered at the Waldorf-Astoria a few days before the arrival of Bertram H. Gallagher. He spent money freely but was not ostentatious. He seemed quite familiar with hotel life.

Has Romantic History.

According to the story Gallagher has had rather a romantic history. He told his associates at the Touraine that he was the son of a wealthy Montreal family, but became estranged from them through marrying his mother's hairdresser. Gallagher pictured his wife as a wonderfully beautiful girl.

About ten days ago Gallagher suddenly resigned his position. Several days later he had received. His [illegible] bore the stamp of Montreal at a Western city. He left the city. Then tailors, shoe dealers, haberdashers and so on, went to the police. The police say they complained that Gallagher had given in payment for goods checks on the Exchange Trust Company, which were returned marked "No funds." The amount of these checks was put at $500.

Search was made for Gallagher three days ago, but was not to be found. Though he had raked of going West, it was believed he would be found in Montreal. The next known was the news last night that Gallagher was under arrest there in charge of passing bad checks at the Waldorf-Astoria.

BIG STOCK THEFT CHARGED TO GAVET

Once Prosperous Boston Broker Arrested at Salem After Inquiry Into Books.

Louis F. Gavet, who was at one time a member of the prosperous brokerage firm of Gavet & Porter, of No. 15 Congress street, Boston, was arrested yesterday in Salem, charged with larceny in connection with stock transactions from patrons of the firm.

While the arrest was made upon technical charges of amounts that total only about $2,000, on examination of the firm was said to be very much larger when it was dissolved last July. One mention was made of $50,000 as missing.

Gavet, who is forty-one years of age and lives at No. 53 Spring street, Danvers, was taken into custody by Captains Armstrong and Moriarty of Boston police headquarters. He was arraigned in Salem police court by George A. Hunton of No. 185 Devonshire street, Boston, and Frederick Parkinson Arlington Heights, counsel for Assistant District Attorney Preston Rood, Somerville, and Charles H. Gardner of No. 293 Washington street, Boston.

Accused by Woman.

Gavet was charged with the larceny of $1,000 from Hunton on May 1 last. Capt. Armstrong said that Gavet induced Hunton to purchase Brown Stocking stock on the promise that it would pay 7 per cent dividends, but he failed to get any income and after requiring the stock as worthless.

Mrs. Farnsworth charged that she lent Gavet Library Bureau stock valued at $700 for the purpose of getting a loan. It is charged that he sold the stock and pocketed the money. The same charge was made against Gavet by Cutler.

After Gavet had been booked yesterday at police headquarters he was taken upon as a man who would make a big disturbance when he and Assistant U. S. Porter, Jr., went into business at No. 15 Congress street.

They started out in a small way, were soon doing a good, high-class business and the profits were put into the business. The firm dissolved on July 18 last. Just before the dissolution took place, it is understood, it was found that securities valued at $60,000 were missing.

Handled Firm's Books.

Gavet handled the books of the firm and when it was learned that the securities were gone Porter asked him about them.

"John G. Hardy of Worcester has them," it is said Gavet replied. "He is to negotiate a loan on them."

It [illegible] had better not negotiate the loan," it is said Porter declared. "Please get the securities back."

When Mr. Porter asked about the trouble at the time it became known he said:

"When I discovered the shortage in our office, I dissolved the partnership. There was no failure and there was no bankruptcy. I assumed all the claims and liabilities and will continue the business under my own name at the same place."

Gavet lives in Danvers. He is married and has a daughter. L. M. Wyman now has charge of the Porter offices on the sixth floor of No. 15 Congress street. When a reporter asked Mr. Wyman there yesterday evening, Mr. Wyman said:

"I cannot," replied Mr. Wyman. "For I am pledged to secrecy and this whole investigation of the late firm has been held behind closed doors."

KATHERINE B. CHILD, WHO PLANS A NEW HOME FOR GIRLS

MISS KATHERINE B. CHILD

OVINGTON READY FOR FLIGHT TO PACIFIC

Plans to Leave Governor's Island In Hearst $50,000 Prize Contest Tomorrow.

By ARNOLD KRUCKMAN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—At 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, if the weather is favorable, Earle L. Ovington intends to start from Nassau Boulevard on his flight to Governor's Island. Monday morning he plans to leave Governor's Island on the flight across the American continent, a feat for the performance of which William Randolph Hearst has offered a $50,000 prize.

Ovington today made the announcement that he would start from Nassau Boulevard tomorrow, only unfavorable weather or an unexpected defect in his craft will cause any delay.

Early Monday morning between 7 and 8 o'clock he plans to start from Governor's Island and his first stop will be Poughkeepsie, seventy-four miles North.

If everything goes well, he hopes to reach Utica before stopping for the night.

To-day Ovington made several interesting trial flights around Nassau Boulevard.

FALSE KEY THIEF BUSY.

Neighbors Mistake Him for the Old Clothes Man.

A thief walked off with $800 worth of women's waists and skirts yesterday afternoon, while neighbors of Mrs. Bella Peterson, whose apartment he had entered at No. 494 Tremont street, hailed the rubber as the old clothes man. When Mrs. Peterson got home a short time afterwards from a shopping trip, she found her apartment in a topsy-turvy condition and her dresses, including a handsome opera cloak, were missing.

Sergeant Inspector Wilmam Irwin was detailed on the case from the East Dedham street station and he ascertained that the thief had entered by using a false key. The police watched the pawn shop district last night in the hope of finding some of Mrs. Peterson's dresses.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY IN HOME.

Son Dead, Aged Mother Unable to Give Aid.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Oct. 7.—The body of Howard H. Hardwell, lay in a bed in his room here tonight, while his mother, Mrs. Mary Hardwell, ninety-nine years old, and partly paralyzed, was in a room on the floor below unable to call for aid. She was taken to the hospital a week from starvation that her recovery is doubtful. She said that she had not seen her son for three days and if it supposed that he had been dead that long of these. The medical [illegible] that the son's death was due to opium poisoning.

NEW HOME PLANNED FOR WORKING GIRLS

Miss Katherine Child, Founder of Stuart Club, Solves Hall Room Problem.

By GERTRUDE L. MARVIN.

Here's an end in Boston of hall bed rooms and lonely suppers in the corner restaurant. Plans have already been drawn by Howard Walker for an apartment house for women, to be built on the Fenway, adjoining the Stuart Club. Miss Katherine B. Child, who has made Stuart a splendid success of the Stuart Club, the home of the young stenographer and professional woman, is responsible for the idea of this new apartment house for women and is now raising money to commence the building during the Spring.

Miss Child has thought out a most charming scheme of living for young professional women, who are wedded to their work and who like to live in a home where one can call for the comforts of home life for just a time.

Miss Child says that she finds many groups of five and six young women living in little three and four room apartments for the sake of being together and of having the comforts of an apartment.

Great Rush for Rooms.

Many have already applied to Miss Child for rooms in the new house, and as the first tenants will have the privilege of selecting their rooms according to priority of their rooms, the house will probably be filled long before it is finished.

The plans is" said Miss Child "that the way down to the first floor for all tenants are accustomed to. They go home at night to their apartments all alone in a strange house, and pick up their meals where ever they may happen to be. What I want to do is to give them just the little relief and comforts of home life to which they are accustomed. But I do not propose to give them [illegible] and I think they will realize this. I want to provide the luxuries of home life, but the latter therefore put up with the inconveniences of housekeeping.

"The problem demonstrate the possibility," said Miss Child, "of providing an apartment house for young professional women shall have, at reasonable rates, the luxuries of living that they accustomed to in their own houses. They ought to have their own separate bedroom and a private dining room, and a little kitchenette where they can toss around, and a maid to wait on them, and they ought to be able to have all this for—one—$10 a week anyway, perhaps less.

"The way I plan it is this. It is to be a four-story house, just like this clubhouse. There will be apartments of six rooms, a kitchenette and a bath on each floor. I am going to have a big garden in the back yard all walled in with vines and bushes. Then down in the basement, looking out on the garden through long French windows, I shall have four little dining rooms, running right across the back of the house, with the kitchen in front of them. There will be a little entrance hall on which the windows open, and in the Spring and Summer days they can bring their little tables out on the balcony and have their meals in the garden. We can have tinlets, covered with vines for partitions, on the balcony, to give each table the effect of a separate garden.

Breakfasts Will Be Simple.

For instance, I think no one ought to be able to get along with very little service in such an apartment house. The breakfasts will be simple, and the tenants ought to be able to manage all four dining rooms in the morning. Then, because they are professional women they will be away all day, and no housework will be necessary. During the middle of the day, the two servants can take care of the apartments and have dinner ready in the evening.

"They may make some special arrangement about serving dinner, in this way, the girls ought to be able to get along with just the two cooks and one assistant.

"Of course girls who want little extras, like [illegible] or pay extra for them. Just as they do in English lodgings. They will be able to send their laundry out now, it is impossible to take care of it economically on a small scale. I think that the other needs will be planned for comfortably.

$20,000 INCENDIARY BLAZE AT LINCOLN

Fire, believed to have been of incendiary origin, destroyed the 200 foot barn of the $50,000 estate of Dr. F. H. Blodgett, one of the wealthiest citizens of Lincoln, destroyed a number of blooded cattle, threatened the beautiful Blodgett residence and caused a loss of $20,000, late yesterday.

The fire was well under way when it was discovered by Dr. Blodgett. The entire end of the barn was a mass of flames. The building stood in a favorable place to check the fire. Blodgett directed the farm hands, who had listened to the cries of the fire, to the saving of the valuable horses and cattle stabled within the burning building.

Soon after arriving he persuaded the frightened men, according to the now familiar story, to push a check for $25 on a Boston trust company. The next day he presented a check for $75. The cashier obliged the [illegible] of an apartment.

Yesterday a telegram was received from the Boston trust company saying the checks were worthless, as Mr. Gallagher had closed his account at that bank last September. The hotel management lost no time in telling Gallagher's record. The arrival of the indignant chauffeur with his $34 bill added the finishing touch of the overcoat.

The Boston police will probably send New York to-day for an opportunity to be heard against Gallagher.

Has Romantic History.

According to his own story Gallagher has had rather a romantic history. He told his associates at the Touraine that he is the son of a wealthy Montreal family, but became estranged from them through marrying his mother's hairdresser. Gallagher pictured his wife as a wonderfully beautiful girl.

About ten days ago Gallagher suddenly resigned his position. Several days later he had received. His [illegible] bore the stamp of Montreal at a Western city. He left the city. Then tailors, shoe dealers, haberdashers and so on, went to the police. The police say they complained that Gallagher had given in payment for goods checks on the Exchange Trust Company, which were returned marked "No funds." The amount of these checks was put at $500.

Search was made for Gallagher three days ago, but was not to be found. Though he had raked of going West, it was believed he would be found in Montreal. The next known was the news last night that Gallagher was under arrest there in charge of passing bad checks at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Number of Cattle Burned.

Within the blazing structure were thirty prize cattle and a number of blooded horses. With employes of the estate succeed in saving all but five cattle, a few horses and pigs, which were consumed by the flames.

When the apparatus arrived from Lincoln, the firemen, at once realizing the inability of saving the barn, concentrated their efforts on the dwelling. Rumford proper, which was within a few feet of the barn.

The fire was of a spectacular nature [illegible] with its heavens. Flames could be seen for miles around. Two hundred tons of hay stored in the barn furnished an excellent fuel for the flames.

Stranger Seen on the Farm.

Shortly before the discovery of the fire a stranger was seen prowling around the barn by one of the farm hands. At the time he thought nothing of it. He gave this information to Dr. Blodgett, who at once told the police. An investigation was begun at once.

GRAND JURY RETURNS THIRTY-FIVE BILLS

Suspects in the Death Mystery of Sergt. Tracey are Given Their Freedom.

The Grand Jury of Suffolk County yesterday reported thirty-five true bills and fifteen no bills. No bill was returned in the case of Frank and Thomas Degnan, stablemen in an alley off Chardon street, charged with manslaughter in the alleged killing of Sergeant W. J. Tracey of the Seventh Regiment, M. V. M. Tracey was found dead with a fractured skull in the Malden armory Sunday morning, September 3, following a street brawl in Chardon street the night before.

No bill was found in the case of Alvan J. McVicar, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Nelson Shaw in a Roxbury house on August 24. Frederick Hofenstein was indicted for assault with intent to kill his wife Hester Hofenstein on September 11.

Lewis Carmichael, who had been reported dead, but was discovered alive, was indicted on the charge of robbing Fred Fleming of $350 in Howard street. Stephen Ruggiero was indicted for assault with intent to murder Domingo Faisarino of No. 227 North street.

Strength Comes

Not from What You Eat, but from What You Digest.

A Tablet Dispatch a Meal. Trial Package Free.

Most people eat most foods without discrimination—it matters little what. Few stop to think what that food does for them. This is the first turn on the road to dyspepsia. Reckless disregard of the proper choice of foods, rapid eating and incomplete mastication, are the unquestioned causes of all stomach disorders from the slight ache to the malignant cancer.

There is nothing more revolting than a dyspeptic stomach—a very vat for putrefaction, sending forth its poison throughout the entire system, depressing the brain, befouling the breath, souring the taste, deadening the muscles, incapacitating the liver and kidneys for their work, debilitating the heart, choking the lungs and clogging the bowels.

All of these disagreeable and dangerous conditions are due to the improper digestion of food and the consequent assimilation of poison. What else can be expected? If the food lies in the stomach, if the system is constipated, fermentation is the natural outcome. It shows itself in sour watery risings, belchings, heartburn and painful breathing.

There is only one way to remove this condition. If the stomach refuses to digest your food put something into it that will. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are nothing like digestives. They are not a medicine. They work when the stomach will not.

Each tablet contains enough pepsin, diastase, golden seal and other digestive elements to reduce 3,000 grains of ordinary food to the proper consistency for assimilation into the blood.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are absolutely pure. There is nothing harmful in them, as shown in the endorsement by 40,000 physicians in the United States and Canada.

Ask your family physician his opinion of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and if he is honest toward you he will state forcefully that they will cure your stomach trouble, whatever it may be, unless you have waited too long and have allowed your disorder to develop into cancer.

Act to-day and begin to end your suffering. A free trial package will be sent to your address upon request. The 50-cent size packages are for sale at your druggist's. F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

TOMORROW INAUGURATES THE OPENING OF BOSTON'S FINEST AND MOST DISTINCTIVE HAIR GOODS STORE

A NEW HAIR GOODS STORE opens tomorrow on our second floor (in same location as our former department). New not only in methods, in stock, in ideas, BUT IN IDEALS! This new store, which makes its initial bow to the critical women of Boston is the culmination of the very latest scientific attainment in Hair Goods. It is the accomplishment of that which a few years ago was thought impossible.

This "New Kind of a Hair Goods Store"—a veritable replica of Rue de la Paix in Paris—has been equipped at an enormous expense; no detail that could add to your comfort has been overlooked. And through these newest improved methods, we will be in position to give not only a better service, but greater value for the money than heretofore has been the rule. To sell dependable merchandise below competitive values is the rule established at the outset.

Perhaps never before has there been gathered in a similar business the force of saleswomen specialists equal to those whom you will see here tomorrow—a great factor in a successful Hair Goods business. To say that they are experts of long experience is not enough, they are selected for their superior skill in keeping with the keynote of this new department; the determination to always prefer

BORDEN PICKS NEW CANADIAN MINISTRY

Majority of Cabinet, Which Will be Enlarged, Represents Money Class.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 7.—The personnel of the new Canadian government, under the leadership of R. L. Borden, was officially announced this afternoon. The portfolios to which the various ministers have been assigned will not be made public until Monday, when they will take the oath of office. It is a notable fact that the majority of the new cabinet represent the money classes. The interests that were responsible for the election of Mr. Borden were not to be defied.

W. T. White, president of the National Trust Company of Ottawa, also led the fight against reciprocity, is almost certain to be minister of finance. Mr. White is without parliamentary experience, although a lifelong Liberal.

He is a noted financier and a brilliant platform orator.

The Nationalist followers of Henri Bourassa, who contributed to the overwhelming defeat of Laurier, are well represented in the new cabinet. F. D. Monk and W. B. Nantel, who will hold portfolios, are both ardent Nationalists.

The new cabinet, as it is now constituted will be composed as follows:

Maritime provinces—R. L. Borden and J. D. Hazen, Quebec—F. D. Monk, L. P. Pelletier, W. B. Nantel, George H. Perley and J. Doherty.

Ontario—Frank Cochrane, W. T. White, George E. Foster, W. S. Middleboro, Andrew Broder and J. E. Armstrong.

Mr. Borden proposes to enlarge the cabinet which hitherto has consisted of fourteen portfolios. To do this he must secure an act of Parliament. In the meantime he will announce the appointment of at least three new cabinet ministers and assign portfolios as soon as the necessary statutory power is conferred upon him.

The proposed new ministers are: George E. Perley, the millionaire lumber king of Ontario, who has the chief organizer of the anti-reciprocity fight; H. H. Ames, a millionaire politician of Montreal, and T. A. McGrath, a strong Western man who was defeated in the recent election by Medicine Hat, Alberta, where the American farmers voted solidly for reciprocity.

Mr. McGrath will likely be appointed to a portfolio hitherto unknown, that of minister of Conservation. Mr. McGrath is specially fitted for this work, having once been the chief irrigation canal in the Canadian Northwest.

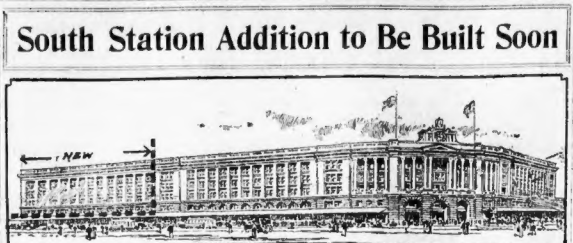
Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything, but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. You can learn more about it by writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a pamphlet which tells all about it. In writing mention the Boston American.

South Station Addition to Be Built Soon



Architect's drawing showing how the South Station will appear when the half-million dollar extension is made. Arrow indicates where the new structure will be united to the old. Provision will be made for 250 rooms for office work and meetings of President Mellen and his associates.

Plan to Complete $500,000 Extension in Time for Business Rush Next Summer.

Work will start within a short time on the new $500,000 addition to the South station, which is designed to accommodate President Mellen and the staff of directors and vice-presidents.

The addition will be at the corner of Summer street and Dorchester avenue. Rising to a height of five stories, it will furnish 67,000 feet additional floor space, and will consist of a number of work rest kinds. It is expected that the improvements will be completed in time to take care of the rush of work next Summer.

In order to carry on the work without interfering with the present traffic in the station, it is planned to erect a temporary roof between it and the present one. The construction work is under contract to George A. Fuller, with sub-contracts for the heating, ventilating, electrical work and elevators.

Ask $30,000 for Encampment.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Oct. 7.—In order to defray the expenses of the biennial encampments of the regular army and militia for next year the war department has asked for $150,000. This amount is $50,000 less than was last appropriated for the work.

SAUNDERS ESCAPES JAIL BY USING SAW

Man Who Appealed for Aid for Young Wife Slips Away to Freedom.

Sawing through three one inch window bars, Robert A. Saunders has escaped from the jail at Plymouth, N. H., and is still at large.

It was Saunders who wrote a remarkable letter to the Boston AMERICAN asking for aid for his young wife before he gave himself up and went with the officers from New Hampshire who charged him with robbing on the highway at West Thornton.

He pleaded that he had committed the robbery to get food for his wife and baby and asked that the wife be cured for while he was away. He was committed to Plymouth jail to await trial because he could not furnish bail and his escape has taken the county officers quite by surprise.

Saunders was taken to Grafton County jail the latter part of July. He was arrested at Haverhill, Mass., where he had been living with his wife and new-born baby under an assumed name.

The baby was very sick at the time he was arrested. Saunders wished to remain in Haverhill till the child was better. So he planned to fight extradition. But the baby took a sudden turn for the worse and died. Saunders then made no opposition to being taken across the State line into New Hampshire. He was arraigned in the district court and was held for the grand jury.

Lacking bail, he was committed to the Grafton County jail at Plymouth till the grand jury should meet and report on his case.

Saunders, who claims to be a college graduate and whose letter to the Sunday AMERICAN showed him to be a man of unusual literary ability, went out armed to rob, he declared, because of his wife and the little baby that died.

Essex County Branch.

The Knights of Columbus of Woburn will have a ball on the evening of Columbus Day in Lyceum Hall.

POLICE HOLD VISITOR TO THE STATE HOUSE

Man Who Sought Audience With Governor to be Examined as to Sanity.

Charles L. Crawford of Wales, Mass., who was arrested yesterday in the executive offices of the State House, is under observation at the Boston State Hospital, where he will be kept for a time until the physicians are satisfied as to his mental condition. State officer Thompson arrested the man, who gave the name of Crawford. He wanted an audience with Governor Foss to ask that six judges of the Superior Court be removed for conspiring to place him in prison. He also stated that he had just been released from a year's term in prison on a charge of disturbing his neighbors.

This man, who is about forty-five years old and is very neat in appearance, went to the State House yesterday. His request to see the Governor was denied. He went away but returned twice. On his third visit he was taken to the office of Deputy Chief Neal of the State police department and was questioned.

A few days ago Deputy Neal was given a letter to the Governor, which had apparently been written by this man, requesting an audience. Fearing that an attempt might be made to harm Governor Foss, and that the writer of the letter might make an attempt to seek the Governor at the Palmer Fair, a member of the State police was assigned to watch for anyone who might be very insistent for an audience.

The State police turned the man over to an officer from the Joy street station who took him to the Boston State Hospital in a closed carriage. Nothing was found on the person of the man of a harmful nature.

15,000 IN THIS PARISH.

New Bedford Pastor Gives Out Census Figures.

NEW BEDFORD, Oct. 7.—According to the official figures, made public by Father Deslauriers this week, St. Anthony's parish is one of the largest, if not the largest Catholic parish in the State. An official census of the church shows that the number of families in St. Anthony's parish is 1,837, with a total population of over 15,000. This exceeds by many thousands the population of any other parish in New Bedford and is believed to be a record for the State.

Father Deslauriers has also announced that the new church, which has been in years building and which is one of the handsomest edifices to be found in the country, is practically finished.

PAY BOYS TO TAKE VACATION AT RESORT

Fore! There
Here, caddy!

Sixty boys who live in the South End of Boston have just returned from Bretton Woods, New Hampshire, where they have spent their fifth and most successful season caddying on those wonderful golf links.

For many years the South End Settlement sought in vain to find the right kind of a vacation for the many boys who came to the club and classes during the Winter.

Finally Mr. Thomas Allen Anderson, proprietor of the two great hotels, the Mount Washington and the Mount Pleasant, had the happy idea of using his golfers with satisfactory results.

Then one Summer Mr. Anderson and the South End House came together and the boys were shown how to get a vacation and be paid for it, too.

The plan was worked out so satisfactorily that Boston boys have watched it, making it the most ideal vacation for boys in the United States.

Early last Summer, shortly after school had closed, the boys packed their boxes and dress suit cases and left Boston, for New England's most beautiful park in the White Mountains at the foot of the Presidential Range. Here, on the ideal location, they have worked all the season carrying golf bags and assisting golf balls for the guests.

Famous men from all parts of the country come to play the game in Bretton Woods. The boys have thrown into contact with each such as Attorney-General Wickersham, ex-Senator Depew, U. S. Senator Lodge, Harding, George R. Hugo, Eugene Grenfell, Mort Findlay, the golf champion, and a host of other business and professional men of Boston.

Such associations, supervised by trained men and women who look after the boys in the mountains, have had many excellent results. The boys have grown self reliant and manly. They have learned to govern themselves through representative committees. They have become ambitious for more schooling, such a large number have entered high school and graduated.

A half dozen more boys have been given work by the men for whom they caddied. They have not only relieved their parents from supporting them during the Summer, but they have brought home money toward rent and coal bills.

And added to all these assets they have grown big and strong on mountain air, three solid meals and a good quantity of beef and potatoes.

Minister Mulhern, who lives on Myrtle street near the Cathedral, holds the record for money earned. He is a strapping boy of seventeen and says a good deal of his thin brains from his round coin all the time he was caddying for Bretton golfers.

"We had a great Summer, the best yet," says Jimmie. There were so many golfers that Mr. Ernst had to send to Boston for more caddies. I got over $40 in tips. I take me long to get ready to start the next season. The first week I had was to find the golf ball which started the advertising boy's fourteenth. I'm not much of a runner, but when there's a $5 bill at the end of 220 yards, I can hold my own with any of them.

Sentenced for Ring Theft.

Edward Linquist, who says he lives in East Boston, was sentenced yesterday to ten months in the House of Corrections, by Judge Sullivan in the Municipal Court, on the charge of stealing a diamond ring, valued at $350, from Hattie Walton of Yarmouth street. Sergeant Irwin of the East Boston station arrested Linquist and recovered the ring.

JIMMIE MULHERN, BOY WHO CADDIED FOR WEALTHY MEN

JIMMIE MULHERN

CHANGES IN COURT PROCEDURE URGED

Suggestions as to how the Suffolk County courts can be improved were made to the special legislative commission appointed to investigate this matter, by several members of the bar, at a hearing at the State House yesterday. George H. Lacey said that one judge should handle poor debtor cases, and another applications for warrants so that the trial of criminal cases would not be interrupted. Chief Justice Holmes, chairman of the special commission, said this would require an additional justice.

Lewis R. Eggs said: "The city courts are overcrowded, while those in the outlying districts are in session only infrequently." He asked that the city courts be made a central court with jurisdiction over the others.

Charles H. McIntire favored restrictions regarding the right of appeal because in most cases it is in effect a second trial. Nathan R. Harris asked for a permanent motion session such as exists in the Superior Court. John E. Crowley believed it dangerous to have a judge who hears applications for a warrant sit at the trial of the same case. Thomas F. Rice, John J. Douglas and Walter Mortelson favored the plan of interpreters being appointed by the court. Another hearing will be held next Saturday, when the juvenile courts will be considered.

BEGINS WORK ON NEW SOUTH STATION TUBE

Contractors under orders of the Rapid Transit Commission began taking borings yesterday at different points along Summer street, at Dewey square and at Park square for the proposed South Station subway.

The AMERICAN, several years ago, advocated the tunnel and it was the bill as practicable drafted by the AMERICAN that was adopted.

Under the recent act of the Legislature merging the Elevated and West End, the Rapid Transit Commission was given authority to construct a subway connecting the South Station and Park square.

The subway will be one of the many new transit facilities that the Elevated-West End merger has made possible.

Pimples? No They've All Gone!

Trial Package Sent Free to Prove It.

No need for anyone to go about any longer with a face covered with pimples, blotches, eruptions, blackheads and liver-spots. These are all due to impurities in the blood. Cleanse the blood thoroughly and the blemishes will disappear.

That's what Stuart's Calcium Wafers are intended to accomplish and do accomplish. Their principal ingredient is Calcium Sulphide, the quickest and most thorough blood cleanser known.

Those wonderful little wafers go right into the blood, and destroy all eruptive substances present in it. In some cases a few days is sufficient to make the complexion clean and pure. And when the blood is pure the whole system is a hundred per cent better.

Don't let any longer about those blackheads, pimples, boils, tetter, eczema, spots or skin eruptions; they'll all go and "go quick" if you use Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

You can have a trial package of Stuart's Calcium Wafers, simply by sending your name and address to F. A. Stuart Co., 178 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich. Then, when you have proved their value, you can get the regular-size package for 50 cents, at any drug store.

A Few Days Ago My Face Was Full of Pimples. Now They're All Gone! I Used Stuart's Calcium Wafers."

ER ANY INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA OR SICK, GASSY, UPSET STOMACH.

Take your sour, out-of-order stomach—or maybe you call it Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gastritis or Catarrh of Stomach; it doesn't matter—take your stomach trouble right with you to your Pharmacist and ask him to open a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and let you eat one 22-grain Triangule and see if within five minutes there is left any trace of your former misery.

The correct name for your trouble is Food Fermentation—food poisoning, the digestive organs become weak, there is lack of gastric juice; your food is only half digested, and you become affected with loss of appetite, pressure and fullness after eating, vomiting, nausea, heartburn, griping in bowels, tenderness in the pit of stomach, bad taste in mouth, constipation, pain in limbs, sleeplessness, belching of gas, biliousness, sick headache, nervousness, dizziness or many other similar symptoms.

If your appetite is fickle, and nothing tempts you, or you belch gas or feel bloated after eating, or your food lies like a lump of lead on your stomach, you can make up your mind that at the bottom of all this there is but one cause—fermentation of undigested food.

Prove to yourself in five minutes that your stomach is as good as any, that there is nothing really wrong, but fermentation and begin eating what you want without fear of discomfort or misery.

Almost instantly Pape's is waiting for you. It is merely a matter of how soon you take a little Diapepsin.

HANDS WOULD CRACK OPEN AND BLEED

Blisters Formed, Skin Scaled Off, and Flesh Burned and Itched Dreadfully. Healed by Less Than One Cake of Cuticura Soap and One Box of Cuticura Ointment.

"About two months ago my hands started to crack open and bleed, the skin would scale off, and the good flesh would burn and itch dreadfully. When my hands first started to get sore, there were small blisters like water blisters which formed. They itched dreadfully, it just seemed as though I could tear the skin all off. I would scratch them and the skin would peel off, and the flesh would be all red and crack open and bleed. It worried me very much, as I had never had anything the matter with my skin. I was so afraid I would have to give up my employment.

"I consulted my doctor, and he said he didn't think it would amount to anything. But it kept getting worse. One day I saw a piece in one of the papers about a lady who had the same trouble with her hands. She had used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and was cured. I decided to try them, and my hands were all healed before I had used one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment. I am truly thankful for the good results from the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, for thanks to them I was cured, and I did not have to lose a day from work. I have had no return of the [illegible]." New Skin Absorber In Great Demand

Since the discovery that mercolized wax possesses remarkable absorbent powers when applied to the skin, the demand for it as a complexion [illegible] has been tremendous. Druggists [illegible] report sales far exceeding those of anything [illegible] ever had on their shelves.

The mercolide in the wax, according to Prof. Hoffman, gently absorbs devitalized cuticle, in tiny particles, so that the user gradually loses the old, worn-out complexion [illegible] [illegible] underneath [illegible] cutaneous eruptions, blotches, patches, tan and freckles [illegible] removed at the same time. As mercolized wax is entirely harmless, [illegible] try to use [illegible] quickly [illegible] complexions. The wax [illegible] hands [illegible] to remain over night, then washed with warm water.

¶ And thus share in many preliminary advantages. We need double our present number of customers for the new business. Many departments are already reorganized to insure this result, others are being reorganized from week to week. Every department is planning merchandise and service to build up in advance this doubled clientele, and to make it worth while for those who now shop in only a few departments to become familiar with and patrons of the others. We are having the most gratifying results. But as the crowds get larger and larger we ask you to remember that this is the last year we shall spend these quarters and that what we cannot now give in the way of space we shall make up, in values and in the selection of beautiful merchandise from the largest stocks we have ever carried.

LA GUERRA ITALO-TURCA CRONACA DEGLI AVVENIMENTI L'ITALIA VINCE SEMPRE

Le Navi Nemiche Sconfitte Presso Prevesa ed ai Dardanelli—Tripoli Bombardata e Presa-Azione Italiana in Arabia—Torpediniere e Navi Affondate nell' Adriatico; Uccisie Prigioni a Centinaia

LE ragioni che spinsero l'Italia a dichiarare la guerra alla Turchia sono esposte dal Ministro di San Giuliano in una sua relazione fatta ai Consoli e pubblicata oggi nell' AMERICAN.

Con una rapidita' sorprendente ed una precisione matematica la flotta italiana si spinse subito nei campi d'azione, in Tripolitania, nelle coste dell' Adriatico, in quelle del Mare Egeo e fin nel Mar Rosso.

E le nostre navi immediatamente attaccarono le avversarie, infliggendo, ogni giorno e dappertutto, delle gravi perdite alle forze turche. Fin oggi non un soldato, non una barca e' stata perduta dalla squadra italiana; mentre, nei diversi scontri avvenuti e nel bombardamento di Tripoli, molti sono stati gli uccisi nel campo turco, quasi un migliaio i prigneri, crca 60 le navi catturate e non poche quelle mandate a picco.

Un seguito di trionfi ha arriso ad ogni passo all'armata italiana e noi ne esultiamo! Possa cosi' esser fino alla fine di questa guerra della civilta' contro la barbarie!

IL DUCA DEGLI ABRUZZI COMANDA UNA DIVISIONE.

Domenica scorsa, il Duca degli Abruzzi, al comando di una divisione navale, [illegible] attacca ed affonda nel porto di Prevesa due torpediniere turche, e fa prigionieri non pochi soldati turchi e cattura [illegible] navi. [illegible] un ufficiale di marina [illegible] si reco' su di un'altra [illegible] del turchi, pote' precisamente [illegible] ove dovevano dirigersi i tiri per colpire le dette torpediniere.

Il due Ottobre [illegible] divisione italiana [illegible] torpediniere, [illegible] nemica. Ne segui [illegible] evitato dalle navi turche che si rifugiarono precipitosamente nei Dardanelli.

Tutta la stampa europea riporto' [illegible] squadra italiana aveva avuta una [illegible] vittoria, ed affondo' tre navi e [illegible] potuto distruggerle tutte. Questa [illegible] non fu confermata; anzi la Porta si affretto' a smentirla, [illegible] navi italiane erano affondate in detto attacco.

La Marco Polo Cattura una Nave.

Martedi' mattina, secondo un telegramma da Londra giunse a Taranto una nave da guerra catturata dalla Marco Polo, con un generale e duecento soldati turchi, che erano stati fatti prigionieri. Nella nave si trovavano duecento cavalli e 5.000 fucili, destinati pure alla difesa di Tripoli.

In detto giorno, alle 3.30 p. m., dal la flotta italiana al comando dell' ammiraglio Aubrey, poiche' il Governatore di Tripoli si era rifiutato di arrendersi fu iniziato il bombardamento di detta citta.

Da ogni parte si son fatti elogi per la precisione [illegible] nel bombardamento. Si [illegible] sono i forti, la casa del Governatore ed il faro [illegible] e tutti i tripolini, raggruppati ne i paesi circostanti, essi elevano al bombardamento. Dai forti si rispose con impeto, ma i loro proiettili non raggiungevano le navi. Alla sera parecchi forti erano gia' smantellati.

La Presa di Tripoli.

Il giorno dopo mercoledi' [illegible] si riprese l'attacco, [illegible] forti si [illegible] a rispondere [illegible] tutte le fortificazioni furono ridotte in macerie ed i cannoni demoliti e messi al silenzio. Allora apparve la bandiera bianca e le navi italiane cessarono dal far fuoco.

Duo fatti emersero da questo combattimento: che [illegible] cannonieri italiani diedero prova di una precisione di tiro mai veri [illegible] essi scommettevano che avrebbero indovinato precisamente il punto mirato, e cio' avveniva [illegible] i soldati turchi da una grande devozione al dovere parecchi di essi furon trovati morti a fianco dei loro cannoni inservibili.

La notte del detto giorno, i marinai italiani sbarcarono a Tripoli ed issarono la [illegible] tricolore su tutti i principali edifizi.

Giovedi scorso, un telegramma da Costantinopoli annunziava che flotta italiana aveva distrutto la torpediniera nelle acque di [illegible] e che le truppe italiane avevan [illegible] possesso di quell' isola.

Non Se Ne Poteva Piu.

Destano un senso di penosa impressione gli articoli di certa stampa internazionale nei quali si tratta la T[illegible] [illegible] della favola, e l'I[illegible] [illegible] la divora. Cosi [illegible] grande simpatia per gli ottomani ed ogni vitupero contro gli Italiani [illegible] vadan compiendo un atto di brigantaggio.

Il lettore che ha cuore e mente [illegible] soprattutto che puo giudicare estrinsecandosi dai sentimenti egotisticamente patriottici, avra' tenuto in giusto conto i commenti di tali moralisti.

ITALY STATES HER CASE

Reasons for Going to War with Turkey Set Forth by Her Foreign Minister.

In response to a request for a statement of Italy's grounds for declaring war against Turkey, the Marchese di San Giuliano, the Italian Foreign Minister cabled the following reply

ROME, Sept 30.—The conflict which appears to have unexpectedly broken out between Italy and Turkey is only the epilogue of a long series of vexations and abuses, even more real than apparent, against Italy and Italians, by the authorities of the Ottoman Empire.

For a long time innumerable complaints have been made to the Royal government by our countrymen in every part of the Empire, asking for prompt justice for the many vexations, for denied justice, and for real unjust impositions which they had to bear, the solution of which was eternally delayed.

In this class of complaints, eternally involved, which show that the legitimate demands of the Royal government were taken into no consideration whatever by the Porte, it is enough to remember the [illegible] for the arbitrary intervention of the Ottoman authorities.

In the course of [illegible] case of [illegible] and of [illegible] of the Sola [illegible], respectively creditors of the State or of members of the imperial family.

Massacres of Adana.

The Italian firm Stagni [illegible] by the hostilities of the local Ottoman authorities to abandon the concession to cut wood in the Province of [illegible]. In this manner all the political injuries to which Italians were subjected in the various regions of the empire remained unsatisfied as, for instance, those in connection with the massacres of Adana in 1909 and the pillaging of the agency of the steamship company, Navigazione Generale Italiana, in Santi Quaranta.

Numerous other complaints of more or less importance exist, such as insults and assaults against the members of the Italian consular service, which show that for a long time Italians were surrounded by a hostile atmosphere not in accordance with the friendly [illegible] relations between the two [illegible] under the new regime, which had awakened great hopes in Italy [illegible] above deplorable incidents became more numerous and serious.

A very serious case occurred recently, the rape of the minor [illegible] Franzoni, aged sixteen years, fraudulently abducted from her family of honest laborers, employed in the Ottoman railroad works of Adana. The girl was seized, converted by force to the Moslem faith, and married by violence to a Mohammedan, notwithstanding the protests of her parents, of [illegible] of other [illegible] and the intervention of the Royal Consulate and Embassy.

Must Protect Emigrants.

This incident which would be of great importance to all nations is more so for Italy, which must provide for the protection of a very large [illegible] of laborers employed in the [illegible] works of Asia Minor. The [illegible] that a rapid solution was not [illegible] for this [illegible] system of [illegible] and rage of Sa [illegible] might be [illegible] of other [illegible] which directly affect the [illegible] working population, principally [illegible] to live with their family in such regions. But the most contagious [illegible] of hospitality by the Ottoman authorities were perpetrated in those parts of the empire where Italian interests were greatest: that is in the Red Sea and in Tripolitania.

On June 5 [illegible] the Turkish warship Nurabad, forty kilometers from the coast of Turkey took possession by force of the sum of 2,340 talers on board the Italian bark Sollma, a pirate act without any reason whatever.

But that was not enough. While the incident of the Genora was being settled on December 5, 1910 the commandant of a Turkish warship entered by force of arms on board the bark Sollma, and forced the captain to turn over the mail of the merchants of Massaua. Vexations of another nature of [illegible] of Eritrea, belonging to Ali Kozem [illegible] Turkish [illegible] vexations of minor importance against [illegible] vessels, always willing to damage the commerce of the Italian colony [illegible]

[illegible] the vessel [illegible] the provisions [illegible]

[illegible] merchants of [illegible] the continuous [illegible] authorities [illegible] have [illegible] great part their [illegible] great change [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] now compelled to give up [illegible] of a peaceful settlement [illegible] Having lost faith in [illegible] vain words and mendacious [illegible] Turkey in latter [illegible] Italy [illegible] of forbear[illegible] and an acknowl[illegible] has finally [illegible] with the greatest [illegible] the respect of our rights and [illegible] protection of her citizens.

[illegible] fell upon those who for the last [illegible] years, have [illegible] using by war [illegible] at [illegible] the several [illegible] the safety of the [illegible] of Eritrea [illegible] the Red Sea.

AUSTRIA WARNS ITALY TO CEASE NAVAL WARFARE ON TURKS IN THE ADRIATIC SEA

London Dispatch From Chiasso Says That Italians Have Explained Bombardment of San Giovanni Was Unintentional, and Have Decided to Withdraw All Their Ships From the Albanian Coast.

Special Cable to the Sunday American.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—A dispatch from Chiasso, on the Swiss-Italian frontier, declares that Austria has warned Italy to cease its naval activity in the Adriatic.

The Italian government, it is alleged, has made a detailed explanation that the bombardment of San Giovanni was unintentional and has decided to withdraw all of her ships from the Albanian coast.

A Paris special to the Weekly Budget says that Turkey's decision to place her subjects in Italy under the protection of the German ambassador instead of the American ambassador was made at the request of Germany. It is alleged that after Italy has definitely annexed Tripoli, Germany will demand the [illegible] to establish a colony in Erythea, Africa. Should Italy refuse, the triple alliance will surely be smashed.

Just now the waters adjacent to Italian territory are being scoured by Italian scout ships and destroyers in an effort to [illegible] Turkish warship [illegible] deal an effective blow to the [illegible]

[illegible] Italian warships may be well on their way to Tripoli by this time.

Cruisers Shell Turkish Town.

Now that the whole of Tripoli has been taken, it is pointed out by military experts, there is no good reason why the army of occupation and pacification should not be there already. Two reasons, however, are assigned for the delay in sending the troops. One is that it was desirable to sweep the seas of Turkish warships and the other is that should the Italian war vessels [illegible] troops [illegible]

Besides the [illegible] in the Adriatic it was reported to-day that two Italian cruisers had shelled the town of St. Jean de Medua, a Turkish port. The cruisers poured a raking fire into the town, according to the report, and then put off to sea. The Italian attack was precipitated, the report says, by the sinking of an Italian sailing vessel. No details as to the loss of life on the sailing vessel were received.

Since the bombardment of Tripoli by Admiral Aubrey and the landing of troops, there has been no fighting, reports from there to-day declared. The Turkish soldiers declined to surrender but instead of attempting to fight the invading marines, they retreated some distance to the rear of the city and have decided to await developments.

It now be that the Turks are mobilizing a force of Arabs and that the joint forces may sweep into Tripoli at any time and make a desperate effort to regain the possession of the place. Although half starved and in rags instead of regiments, it was reported that the Turkish garrison showed bravery of the highest quality. Many of them were killed by exposing themselves recklessly.

Rear Admiral Borea d'Olmo, the new Italian governor of Tripoli, issued a proclamation today in which he announced that the Italian government had taken possession of the city and that it was in a state of siege. The people were warned that they must obey the Italian control.

At the same time Captain Cagni, who is in command of the Italian forces, issued instructions to his forces as to maintaining the peace and protecting the consulates. The Italian warships made a search of the waters off Tripoli for mines that may have been placed there by the Turks. This was done in anticipation of the arrival of the Italian transports soon.

Tripoli Police Desert.

It was announced that nearly all of the Tripolitan police had gone over to the service of the Italians. Other officials of Tripoli also offered their services to the new regime. Arab chiefs, who declared that they represented various tribes in the vicinity of Tripoli, represented to the new government that they were desirous of [illegible]

The Duke of the Abruzzi, Vice-Admiral of the Italian navy, it was reported from Tripoli to-day, had proposed to [illegible] that the Duke lead an expedition party to the unexplored interior of Tripoli for the purpose of ascertaining the possibilities of the country for water and other necessities in connection with colonization. It is said that the Duke proposes to delve into parts of Central Africa that have never been visited by white men.

Such a trip would naturally be attended by great danger, but it is recognized on all sides that the dashing Duke would be just the man to lead such a party. He has already done notable work in his Alaskan and North Pole trips.

Twenty wounded Turks at Tripoli were placed in the hospital wards of the Italian warships. The wounds of these were very serious. Others [illegible] were carried away by their comrades.

The Italian warships [illegible] other coast towns of Tripoli [illegible] few Turkish troops. There were a few hundred at Bengazi, but only twenty-five at Soum, thirty at Tobruk and seventy at Derna. At Cyrene they came upon twenty police officers.

A military writer in the London Times says that Italian troops may land in Tripoli to-day.

"From Genoa the first transports sailed Wednesday night," he says. "They should have picked up the Naples convoy Thursday night, and have reached the Strait of Messina Friday morning, at which time the transports coming from the Adriatic should also have arrived. If the movement had been well arranged. Allowing the greater part of Friday for the marshaling of the convoy, which is said to consist of sixty ships, and assuming it might be considered advisable to reach the coast of Tripoli at dawn in order to have a long spell of light for the landing operations, these may begin to-day."

When Mother Did the Cooking

A glimpse of the past fifty years reveals many changes in the lives and health of the people of this country of ours.

Half a century ago graves were uncommon. Jewelers [illegible] was among [illegible] were then unknown. The great variety of modern diseases were never dreamed of, hence sickness had few adherents, famines were the rule. Doctors were rare. Large territories and it was quite common for patients to travel miles for treatment. Now they travel miles to escape it.

The men and women of earlier years were strong [illegible] hours, ate good home-made food and lived long [illegible]

The good old home-made cooking has been displaced by the real made cooking, where man eats what he knows not.

What is the cause of all this decadence in the present generation?

My theory is this. For years the big nuisance has increased and [illegible] In the old days there was not much chance to do any injury because mother did the cooking. But in this present day this important function is performed in the bakehouse, the delicatessen store and the bread, pie and jam factories. These places are alive with filthy cockroaches, water bugs and ants. There is no watchful eye of mother to see they don't get into the food. They do get in, and you get them to eat when you buy these products. Mr. [illegible] have shown these bugs are natural carriers of disease germs. Consequently, when you eat them, you eat the germs.

Result—outbreaks of pestilential diseases, or a slow poisoning of the body which leaves the victim pale, sickly and dyspeptic, and if it wasn't for Dr. W[illegible] the Lord knows what we would do [illegible] them! One for any of eleven different pests. [illegible] and $1.00 [illegible] WALTHAM CHEMICAL CO., Waltham, Mass.; Tel. 28.

ITALIAN CONSUL ON THE WAR

By EMILO GAETANO POCCARDI,

Italian Consul in Boston.

SIGNOR POCCARDI

Emilio Gaetano Poccardi is the Italian Consul in Boston.

ITALY is fighting not only in the interests of her own people, but also in the interests of civilization.

The Turkish people have not treated the Italians fairly in Turkey. They have oppressed our countrymen. They would not give them a square deal.

But Italy is not fighting simply because the Italian interests suffered. That is the principal reason, it is true. But still there is another reason. Italy is defending humanity against the outrages of an uncivilized people.

The manner in which the Turks have treated the Christians for centuries, their brutal attacks on helpless Christians, the massacres and such outrages—Italy remembers all of these, and gave due consideration to them when the possibility of war was first thought of.

I wish to repeat the statement I made before—that Italy is fighting in the interests of civilization as well as in the interests of her own people.

I know that the people of Boston are intensely interested in the war, and that they are anxious to know the true facts. They want to know why Italy has declared war upon Turkey. I could go into them further in detail that has controlled to the cause, but the reasons have been stated better than I could state them.

In an official cablegram to the Italian Consul General in New York, Italy's Minister of Foreign Affairs, Marchese di San Giuliano, explained in detail just why our country declared war. In view of this fact, it would not be diplomatic for me to issue another official statement in regard to the war. I am glad that our minister has given out the statement, which is the best position to explain the reasons. [illegible]

I hope the AMERICAN readers will read what the minister has to say. Then they will understand the cause of the war.

The European nations realize that Italy is in the right. They have manifested their attitude.

I believe the war will be of a short duration, and that Italy will win.

TO-DAY virtuous Europe no longer steals Africans from Africa; her civilization, honesty and humanitarism have frowned upon that, so she reverses the order of things and now steals Africa from Africans. Thus we find Africa partitioned—sold out, as it were, among the nations of Europe.

The body of the [illegible] by Great Britain, France, [illegible] many, with Portugal, Italy, Spain and Holland trying to squeeze [illegible] sides, while Turkey, "The Sick Man of Europe," is about to be carried [illegible] and the unoccupied sea are [illegible] "reserved." Consequently Tripolitania, as the province of Tripoli is called, has at last found its way into the international grab bag.

In the seventh century began the great Arab invasion of North Africa which threw the resistless tidal wave of the Jehad or Holy War sweeping across Barbary. It merged the [illegible] Berber aborigines into the great sea of Islam, broke down what was left of Roman rule, flooded into Spain, even to the very gates of Poitiers in France, where it was checked by the Franks under Charles [illegible].

But in Spain the Moors held their sway for nearly [illegible] before they were [illegible] across the Straits of Gibraltar [illegible] they left the impress of [illegible] on Europe in its literature, [illegible] ture and [illegible] on that of the entire [illegible] and our own United States.

Tripoli Is Truly African.

The Pashalic of Tripoli includes that portion of the vilayet extending from Tunisia to the southernmost point of the Gulf of Sidra. Of all [illegible] Tripolitania is most truly African.

The North African coast from Tunis eastward does not meet the [illegible] water routes short of its eastern extremity at Suez. Along the seaboard of this territory the [illegible] laps the desert sand [illegible] bounded and scorched [illegible] Tripoli and Barca, to the [illegible] of Egypt, wild tribes control vast wastes.

Although the vilayet of Tripoli is a [illegible] agricultural province a very small area of these barren, inhospitable wastes is cultivated or tillable under present conditions and one need [illegible] for the primary cause [illegible] of Turkish taxation.

The district which lies between the [illegible] eastern extremity of the Atlas known as the Tripoli Hills and the sea forms almost the entire present [illegible] the soil of the vilayet of T[illegible] [illegible] In [illegible] Arabs, Berbers and Bedawi cultivate [illegible] and fruit trees. Here one is transported into an Old Testament land, to a people who still cling with childish tenacity to the picturesque and crude customs of ages past.

The soil, however, is so fertile that with abundant rains the harvests are [illegible] in their yield. The seed sown [illegible] wheat, guinea corn, [illegible] but generally barley, the staple food of the Arab.

Four Great Native Races.

The majority of those who live in the towns of Tripolitania or drift to [illegible] oases and across her deserts are of the four great native [illegible] descendants of the [illegible] Arabs, progeny of the [illegible] the native Jews and [illegible] [illegible] deserts and the Blacks [illegible]

[illegible] people profess Mohammedanism and intermarrying to [illegible] the Turkish [illegible] merchants are less. In [illegible] Of the intrusive foreign [illegible] are several hundred [illegible] Maltese colony of [illegible] near the Ferretto [illegible]

Such is the general glimpse of this last [illegible] possession and Mohammedan country of Northern Africa, which Italy covets and has coveted since the treaty of Berlin, when it was thoroughly understood by the powers signatory to it that Italy should not be interferred with in her [illegible] of Tripoli but the greatest drawback to Italy's ambitions was France, for French aspirations also lay toward North Africa.

About twenty-five years ago, just as Italy was spreading her wings over Tunisia, France [illegible] the quarry. It angered and angered Italy [illegible] the attention to Tripolitania, a garden spot at her very back door, where, next to Turkey, her interests and influence unquestionably predominate.

[illegible]

Great Britain a Spectator

Great Britain, too, seems to be waiting to remain merely as a looker on. Only one thing was necessary to the [illegible] culmination of Italy's coup: the acquiescence of Turkey.

[illegible]

[illegible] in Tripoli were perfectly [illegible] own business and used a [illegible] Government [illegible] officer and the complainant a foreigner.

Are a Hospitable People.

The cafe garden of the Turkish Army and Navy Club by courtesy of the Turks was open to any respectable foreigner and was the rendezvous of the [illegible] of foreigners after the heat of the day between 6 and 7 or 8 o'clock. [illegible] interests that were [illegible] as much as any other foreign interests and the fact that they remained in Tripoli and [illegible] that [illegible] to stay, even though [illegible] their own country.

There are [illegible] not much over a thousand [illegible] in the whole of Tripolitania [illegible] a million population [illegible] in the city of Tripoli they number possibly five or six hundred [illegible] population of 30,000. To [illegible] the charges made by Italy against Turkey in Tripoli and those of us who know the conditions there first hand realize with what extreme care Turkey has [illegible] avoided giving Italy [illegible]

The remarkable self-control of the Turks in view of Italy's [illegible] would lead the [illegible] [illegible] We are [illegible] Italy's reason is purely [illegible]

From this point of view, then, Italy seems to be [illegible] justified in following the course she is pursuing [illegible] in their own country and [illegible] is over-crowded [illegible] fails to [illegible] increase in wealth in ratio to [illegible] population. It is not to be wondered at that with the garden plot of Tripoli at her very back door within her possible grasp, and with the possibility of France's taking it if she does not, that she has seized what seems to be the psychological moment and declared war on Turkey.

How well I know the view which [illegible] the eyes of the Italian officers when they sighted through their glasses as they cruised off that reef-lined coast on a gently heaving sea and looked on Tripoli bathed in the magic sunlight of Africa. In a long oasis, one sees her on the edge of the desert a dazzling, white-washed, color-tinted city, a great sea of flat housetops broken only by several minarets, an occasional palm tree, the castle battlements, and the flag staffs of the European consulates. The mosques, the city walls and some of the more important buildings are built of huge blocks of stone [illegible] the [illegible] is a city of sundried bricks, rafters of palm wood and whitewash.

I Am Willing to Prove I Can Cure You

To That End I Am Giving Away $10,000 Worth of Medicine

In order to show beyond all doubt that I am in possession of a medicine that will cure kidney trouble, bladder trouble or rheumatism, I will this year give away ten thousand dollars' worth of this medicine among those suffering from these diseases can get a box of it absolutely free. All that is necessary is to send me your address.

I don't mean that you are to use a part of it or all of it and then pay me if cured. I mean that I will send you a box of this medicine absolutely free of charge, a gift from me to the Uric Acid sufferers of the world, so I can show them where and how they may be cured. I will not expect payment for this free medicine, nor would I accept it now or later if you sent it. It is free in the real meaning of the word.

For twenty-five years—a quarter of a century—I have been trying to convince the public that I have something genuine, something better than others have for the cure of stubborn, chronic rheumatism, for torturing kidney backache, for annoying bladder troubles.

But it is hard to convince people—they try a few things unsuccessfully and give up all hope and refuse to try anything more thereafter. Happily, all this is now to be demonstrate to sufferers at my own expense that I have a medicine that cures these diseases. I don't ask them to spend any money for it, but I do ask them to find out; I don't ask them to take the word of reliable people, but all I ask is that they allow me to send them the medicine at my own cost. That is surely fair.

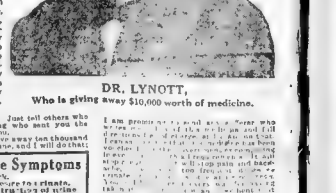
To this end I have set aside ten thousand dollars, which will be used to compound my medicine. It is called Dr. Lynott's Relief and by now to be sent out, all of it fresh and standard. There will be enough for all sufferers, though there are hundreds of them, and none who sends for it can get some of it free. But in order that I shall know that you have used a disease for which I have recommended, I ask you to send me some testimony as to your symptoms. If you have any of the symptoms in the list printed here, you can have the medicine, and you will only write me I will gladly send you a box of it at once. Don't delay, but write me to-day. Describe by symptoms over, see which symptoms you have, then write me about as follows: "Dear Dr., I notice my symptom number"—here put down the figures, give your age, full address, and send it to me. My address is Dr. J. Frank Lynott, 4776 Occidental building, Chicago, Ill.

The ten thousand dollars I am spending for the compounding of my medicine is only a part of the money I am devoting to the cause, for the package of medicine I send you will be fully prepaid at my expense. From any standpoint you view it, YOU incur no expense or obligation. Just tell others who you know are suffering who send you the medicine that cured you.

I am confident to give away ten thousand dollars' worth of medicine, and I will do that.

These Are the Symptoms

1—Pain in the back.
2—Too frequent desire for urination.
3—Burning or obstruction of urine
4—Pain or soreness in the bladder.
5—Prostatic trouble.
6—Gas or pain in the stomach.
7—General debility, weakness, dizziness.
8—Pain or soreness under right rib.
9—Swelling in any part of the body.
10—Constipation or liver trouble.
11—Palpitation or pain under the heart.
12—Pain in the hip joint.
13—Pain in the neck or head.
14—Pain or soreness in the kidneys.
15—Pain or swelling of the joints.
16—Pain or swelling of the muscles.
17—Pain and soreness in the nerves.
18—Acute or chronic rheumatism.



DR. LYNOTT,
Who is giving away $10,000 worth of medicine.

I am prompted to send you this offer because I know that many of you have suffered for years and have spent much money in vain. I am confident that I have a medicine that will cure you, and I am willing to prove it at my own expense. I am not a stranger asking you to try an untried remedy, but I am a physician of long standing, who has made a special study of these diseases, and I am willing to stake my reputation that my medicine will cure you. Don't delay, but write me to-day. Address me personally, as follows:

Engagement of Prince Boris and Grand Duchess Olga to Be Announced Soon.

By MARQUISE De CASTELLANE.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, Oct. 7.—The engagement of the Grand Duchess Olga of Russia and Prince Boris of Bulgaria will [illegible] on November 15. The Grand Duchess is the eldest of the four daughters of the Emperor and Empress of Russia.

She is [illegible] the prettiest. She is devotedly attached to her little brother, the Grand Duke Alexis, who is only seven years old. In fact, she has frequently [illegible] this [illegible] to the Tsar [illegible] and the chief regret of the youthful bride when leaving will be parting with her only brother. The Grand Duchess will be sixteen next birthday, which is November 15. This is one reason that date has been selected for the official announcement.

Prince Boris is the Crown Prince of Bulgaria. He has one brother, Prince Cyril, and two sisters, the pretty Princesses Eudoxia and Nadejda. The Prince is slightly older than his fiancee, as he will be seventeen next January.

He is very like his mother, who belonged to the Bourbons of Parma. In [illegible] a quarrel about baby Boris [illegible] with [illegible] the age of two [illegible] Ferdinand, then Prince Ferdinand, insisted upon having the heir to the throne baptized into the Orthodox Greek [illegible] which is that of the people of Bulgaria. Princess Marie Louise [illegible] Roman Catholic and wanted to keep the baby in the church of his forefathers.

Master Stroke by Ferdinand.

The young Prince has a stepmother who before her marriage with King Ferdinand was Princess Eleonora of Reuss-Kostritz. From a Bulgarian standpoint the marriage will be a masterstroke on the part of the wily Czar Ferdinand. His powerful neighbor of the North, to whom Bulgaria owes her independence, will be more friendly than ever. The Bulgarians are constantly helping the Macedonians [illegible] off the yoke of Turk [illegible] the Grand Duchess Olga will be [illegible] "Citizen King." Heir-Presumptive of Emperor Franz Josef of Austria-Hungary Will Wed the Princess Zita of Bourbon

By EDWARD T. HEYN.

Special Cable to Sunday AMERICAN.

BERLIN, Oct. 7.—The already complicated intrigue for the succession to the Imperial throne of Austria will become even more involved this month, when Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, grand nephew of the Emperor and heir presumptive, marries the Princess Zita of Parma.

The announcement of the engagement during the Summer upset the calculations of a number of arch duchesses who [illegible] designs upon the throne and [illegible] pointed the aged Emperor [illegible] the heir presumptive to marry the [illegible] duchess [illegible]

The most bitterly disappointed [illegible] at the Austrian court, however, is the Duchess of Hohenberg, who as Countess Chotek became the morganatic wife of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and [illegible] children [illegible] of royal [illegible] Her [illegible] raised to [illegible] Duchess of Hohenberg [illegible] backed by her husband [illegible] further increased [illegible] might be on the same plane [illegible] by the Emperor [illegible] Prince Maximilian, declared the [illegible] it is not believed [illegible] that she will ever [illegible] Charles [illegible] Royal [illegible] Empress Zita [illegible] Queen and [illegible] the heirs to the throne [illegible] Princess to [illegible]

McNamara Dynamite Trial On This Week

Accused of Killing Twenty at Los Angeles

More Than Four Hundred Witnesses Have Been Summoned For the Prosecution.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 7.—In a large, [illegible] of Records [illegible] drawn next [illegible] of another great drama which has been written in the struggle between labor and capital when John J. McNamara, secretary of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, and [illegible] McNamara, [illegible] Walter Brad[illegible] on charges of wholesale murder by dynamiting in connection with the destruction of the Los Angeles Times building, at First street and Broadway, on the morning of October 1, 1910, in which disaster [illegible] their lives.

District Attorney [illegible] D. Fredericks [illegible] prepared to present this case [illegible] and that the web of evidence [illegible] two men was concluded. The [illegible] for the defence say that they [illegible] ready to proceed and [illegible] for neither delay nor [illegible].

400 Witnesses for State.

[illegible] almost six months the District-Attorney, assisted by agents of the William J. [illegible], has been preparing for [illegible]. Almost a million [illegible] the prosecution and [illegible] have been summoned to appear against the McNamara [illegible]. Ortie E. McManigal, [illegible], Spanish American War veteran and informer, has been in daily [illegible] with the District Attorney for the last month. McManigal is a [illegible] and it is upon his testimony [illegible] great portion of the State's case [illegible].

Three [illegible] was believed that he would [illegible] as a witness in the [illegible]. However, it was decided [illegible] District Attorney Fredericks and Assistant District Attorney Ford that McManigal would [illegible]. This decision, it was [illegible] only after every [illegible] McManigal [illegible] here under indictment [illegible] the Llewellyn Iron Works [illegible] said that he was prepared to testify and that he would con[illegible] he was a truthful [illegible].

Wanted in Fifteen States.

The scope of the investigation, which has followed the arrest of John J. McNamara [illegible], was revealed today when it was announced by District Attorney [illegible] that the McNamara brothers [illegible] for dynamiting in [illegible] States. This number [illegible] States. It was announced, [illegible] to warrant a [illegible] obtained. The total [illegible] attributed to them [illegible] McManigal is 100.

No [illegible] estimate has been given yet as to the time it will take for the jury to hear the case. The work of selecting the jury has been estimated at two months, and upon this basis it is believed by some that it will take at least six months to hear the first case. Attorneys for the defence have made no announcement as to the number of witnesses they will call. To date they have not asked that any be called. It is generally believed, however, that about 200 will be summoned before them.

The legal batteries for the defence are being directed by Clarence Darrow, lawyer, philosopher, labor leader and writer. Associated with him are Le Compte Davis, who has been prominent in almost every criminal case in Southern California during the last ten years; Joseph Scott, former president of the Chamber of Commerce, prominent Catholic layman, president of the city Board of Education, and known through the State for his oratory and ability as a pleader; and Job Harriman, Socialist candidate for Mayor.

Detectives to Aid Defence.

Besides these lawyers, an able corps of detectives under the direction of John L. Harrington of Chicago, is assisting. Three weekly newspapers are being published in the interests of the McNamara brothers [illegible] in every [illegible] been spent by the defence in the complete preparation of their case.

No intimation has been given as to the line of defence. Many rumors have it that Mr. Darrow and his associates will argue [illegible]. The most generally accepted theory [illegible] the defence will [illegible] in evidence which will be made by the prosecution, and that they will be able to present an explanation [illegible] show [illegible] other [illegible] tions case.

Both the McNamara brothers [illegible] satisfied with their [illegible] in which their defence has been prepared. [illegible] was arrested at [illegible] structural iron workers [illegible] arrest [illegible] be induced to take charge of [illegible] Scott [illegible] hopes the defence [illegible] and complete hearing before an unprejudiced jury.

Jury of Farmers Likely.

Great care is being taken now by the District Attorney and by the lawyers representing the defence to [illegible] jurors [illegible] have been canvassing the county for months and the leaning of almost every prospective juror has been [illegible]. As a result of [illegible] composed of farmers.

[illegible] Fredericks [illegible] John L. Harrington, who was in charge of the detectives working for the defence, was recently taken before the grand jury to answer [illegible] character. When Harrington refused to answer the interrogations of Assistant District Attorney Ford a warrant charging [illegible] was issued.

It was charged that Harrington had offered the husband of Mrs. D. H. Ingersoll of San Francisco $5,000 if he would induce his wife to remain away from Los Angeles during the trial. This woman is regarded as one of the State's most important witnesses. It is alleged that J. B. McNamara roomed at her home in San Francisco [illegible] it is charged the Times building was destroyed.

This, according to the District Attorney, was preceded by an attempt to induce McManigal [illegible] George Behm, McManigal's [illegible] several months [illegible] McManigal's wife and uncle of [illegible] to see Mr. Darrow. McManigal [illegible] to see Darrow, but before the lawyer reached the county jail the prisoner summoned Malcom McLaren, a Burns detective, and countermanded his previous order. Since then McManigal has repeatedly said that he would tell the truth about what he declares was a gigantic conspiracy on the part of the Structural Iron and Bridge Workers' Union to destroy properties owned and operated by the Steel Corporation.

Wants to Tell the Truth.

In a statement to the International News Service to-day McManigal made no attempt to justify the [illegible] says that he committed. He [illegible] that his present action is prompted by necessity and that the course he [illegible] was the only one left open to him. He now says that his [illegible] ranged from [illegible], and that he has [illegible] one hope—to tell fully to the world what he knows.

Those who know McManigal well say he will make an excellent witness for the prosecution. [illegible]

[illegible] tipathy for the work in which he says he was engaged is that McManigal confessed so quickly after being confined in the home of Detective Sergeant Reed in Chicago. [illegible]

FAT VANISHES

ONE POUND A DAY

By New Drugless Method.

TRUE SUCCESS AT LAST

Double Chin Vanishes.

During the Last Two Months Over Fifty Thousand Women Have Sent to Me for a Copy of This Remarkable Booklet, "WEIGHT REDUCTION WITHOUT DRUGS." Isn't This Convincing Evidence as to Its Value

I Will Send This Booklet to You at My Expense.

THE JOY OF LIVING IS THE HERITAGE OF THE LEAN. I WAS STOUT—AND I KNOW.

My friends were charitable and they called it obesity, others referred to me as being STOUT, but I know it was just plain bulky weight. I was miserable—you, too, are miserable if you are too fat.

To reduce your weight you must find the cause, you must get [illegible] the very root.

I FOUND THE CAUSE—THE BEST WAS EASY.

Before I succeeded, I tried everything within reason and some things beyond reason.

It was maddening, disgusting.

All I had to do was to remove the cause and I swear under oath, that by my simple method, without drugs, medicine, harmful exercises or starvation diet, I reduced my weight 37 pounds in five weeks, and guarantee that I can do the same for you. I do not use medicine of any kind or worthless stuff to rub on the body, but a simple home treatment; even a child can use it without harm. Through this marvelous combination home treatment, I succeeded because I had found the right way. I can now climb to the summit of Pike's Peak with ease. I could not do that until I had taken off 37 pounds of my ponderous weight.

If you are interested in your own happiness and health and figure, you will permit me to tell you how to reduce your weight "Nature's Way."

I have printed a booklet for you entitled, "Weight Reduction Without Drugs," which I am giving away without charge, prepaid to you, so that you may know of my successful method and be able to permanently reduce your weight any amount up to 50 pounds, without harmful exercises or starvation diet, drugs or medicine.

Send for my booklet "Weight Reduction Without Drugs." It is yours for the asking, and I will be glad to send it to you [illegible] postage prepaid. [illegible] that the best way to know [illegible] is to give it.

Sincerely your friend,

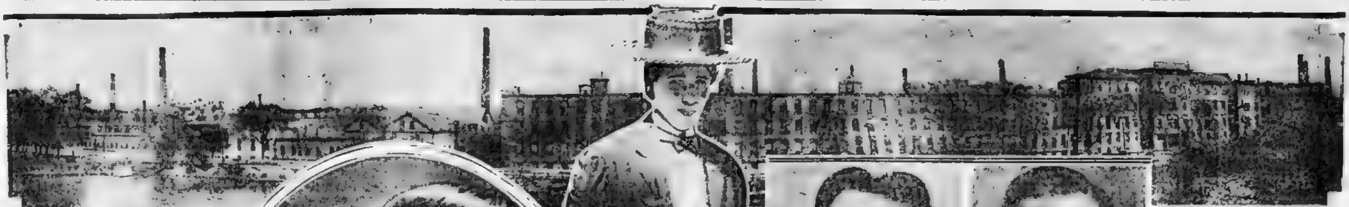
Ministers Protest Hardships of Women at Worcester Wire Works; Physicians Declare Heavy Lifting Brings on Serious Illness

WIRE TRUST PLANT AT WORCESTER WHERE WOMEN ARE EMPLOYED, SOME OF THE WOMEN WORKERS AND CITIZENS WHO PROTEST THEIR HARDSHIP



AMERICAN STEEL AND WIRE WORKS WORCESTER

MRS. LAURA ANDERSEN AND DAUGHTER VICTORIA

A TYPE OF WORKER

REV JOHN GULLANS • DR EMIL ENROTH

MISS MARIE CARLQUEST

The Rev. Mr. Gullans and Dr. Enroth both declare that the work done by women at the Worcester Wire Works is too hard for them and undermines their health.

"It Is Fearful, but We Must Live," Say Women Working at Steel Trust Plant.

WOMEN lift as much as 5,200 pounds of wire daily at the wire-making branch of the Billion Dollar Steel Trust at Worcester.

They have to stand all the time.

The atmosphere in which they toil is heavy with dust. This dust is part dirt, part [illegible] particles. It imperils the health of the women [illegible] contact with [illegible].

[illegible] of this peril, the work is dangerous in itself. The "snapping" or "back-coiling" of wire in the spooling and drawing [illegible] cause loss of fingers, or even of [illegible] at times.

This is the heavy indictment which the Sunday AMERICAN presents to-day against the Steel Trust's plant at Worcester, following the AMERICAN'S exposure of two weeks ago regarding the employment of women [illegible] by the Blake Knowles Pump Works at East Cambridge. It is another chapter [illegible] of [illegible] labor in this State that is totally unfitted to woman's strength.

Condemned By Clergymen.

Clergymen, physicians and others condemn this terrible employment of women at the Worcester wire works. The women say: "It is fearful. But one must live."

[illegible]

"This is what I do. I work in the spool room where the wire is wound from a can to a spool. These spools weigh ten pounds each. I average 260 spools a day. I have to lift these spools twice each and carry them from one end of the room to the other. You can figure out how much lifting I have to do."

[illegible]

Small Part of Big Trust

[illegible]

The Steel Trust [illegible] lifting tons of wire [illegible]. The Pump Trust [illegible] working as coremakers at its East Cambridge [illegible].

Arthur E. Smith, assistant superintendent at the Worcester plant, says:

"Wearing Themselves Out."

"The women do the work quicker than men and better. Of course, if the women don't want to work here they don't need to."

Presumably, they can starve to death if they prefer.

Dr. Emil Enroth of Worcester, who attends some of the women wire spoolers, says:

"The women in the wire works are wearing themselves out. Two of them, my patients, are already afflicted with tuberculosis. It is not the right kind of work for women."

The Rev. John Gullans, pastor of the Swedish-English Lutheran Church on Belmont street, Worcester, says:

"These women are doing men's work. I know that some of the women are compelled to stop work through weariness or sickness. [illegible]

[illegible]

Before starting work a woman [illegible]

[illegible] woman who has been employed by the company for fifteen years said that she makes on an average of 260 spools a day. These spools must weigh at least ten pounds a piece. She lifts them twice, making an aggregate [illegible] for this she receives $2.40 a day.

Cannot Afford to Rest.

Even those who have been employed for years cannot stand the strain of the work and are compelled to rest, sometimes for a week. As all of the work is piece work, they receive no regular pay. Others whose husbands have died and who are left with two or three children cannot afford to stop working. They continue until [illegible] a collapse, and from sheer weakness they cannot continue at the work.

An AMERICAN reporter called at one of the [illegible] where the widowed mother of [illegible] the father with a [illegible].

"[illegible] a week," she said, "and there is no [illegible] I am not [illegible] but I have [illegible] child and a father to feed and rent to pay, so I must go back."

At a house in another section of the town the reporter found a little girl scarcely fourteen years old.

"Mamma hasn't got home from the works," she replied in answer to a question from the reporter. [illegible]

There were two other children, one a [illegible]. The little mother turned to them and said, "Come in and get washed. Mamma will soon be here." The mother soon after arrived, and the little family sat down to dinner, a dinner of cold pigs' feet, some oatmeal, bread and a glass of milk each.

Are Paid Off by Numbers.

Many of the employes of this factory are of the Finnish nationality. None of them speaks English fluently and some of them cannot speak the language at all. All of the employes are known and paid off by a number.

Just before the noon hour a Sunday AMERICAN reporter was standing near the [illegible] to the factory. Hundreds of men grimed with dirt, with here and there a woman, were waiting for the whistle. One woman in particular stood nearest the entrance. Tall and pale she looked toward the whistle. [illegible] in the rush of humanity she was lost to view for a minute. Then she reappeared, running along the sidewalk. Her face was set and her [illegible] a study.

The reporter followed for nearly half a [illegible]

Below the spool room is the drawing and die room where large coils of wire are reduced to a smaller size. Here, as in the room above, women are employed. In this room the coils are much heavier, but there is not so much lifting. The coils, which weigh between fifty and seventy-five pounds, are placed on a ram. One end is passed through a series of dies until the required diameter is obtained. It is then wound on a spool. The operator is obliged to lift this weight twenty-five or thirty times a day.

"Yes, my back does ache, but I have got to work or starve," said one of the women in this department.

Injuries Are Frequent.

While some of the women make as high as $15 a week, there are others who average $6.50. They work the same length of time, but do not understand the trade, so cannot demand the same wages. They are paid by the piece and average 11 cents an hour. They are kept at this [illegible] work for at least two weeks then they are put into another room. Some of them can perform their new duties. Others who cannot are put back again. [illegible] goes by but what somebody is injured [illegible] great is the danger that a hospital corps is constantly on duty. Of three women seen by an AMERICAN reporter all of them had been injured. These injuries come from the snapping or back coiling of a wire that is being spooled or drawn. Employes have lost their fingers and had their legs nearly amputated from the wire.

Regarding these accidents any Worcester newspaper reporter can tell of the impossibility of getting details of any disaster at the wire plants, either at Grove street or Quinsigamond short of an actual disaster. [illegible]

The real reason, however [illegible]

[illegible]

As the AMERICAN [illegible] the wire works on [illegible] a series of wooden and brick buildings covering fully fifteen acres of ground. From every room came the whir of machinery, [illegible] and the clink, clink of the revolving spools.

Approaching one of the entrances he was met by a big man dressed [illegible] of a policeman. [illegible]

How long [illegible]

"For several years," [illegible] "You see, this place, the [illegible] central works were controlled by one man. [illegible] one could get permission to go through, but a few years ago the United States Steel Corporation bought them out for several hundred thousand dollars, and since that time nobody can get in. You know the United States Steel Corporation is called the 'Billion Dollar Trust' and I [illegible]."

How many women are employed [illegible]

[illegible] forty or fifty [illegible] work hard."

"Well, some of them have to work pretty hard, but it is because they want to. They want to make as much money as they can and as most of the work is piece work they work hard to earn it."

Dozen Special Police.

The reporter visited several other gateways and entrances and as he was about to enter the yard, from behind a gate or a little house there appeared the uniformed officer. Inquiry brought out the fact that there were about a dozen of these special officers always around the yard. They are not connected in any way with the police department of the city, but are retained and paid by the corporation.

One night the reporter found a woman who had been employed at the works for more than eighteen years. This woman lives in a suite of four rooms in the south west part of the city with her three children, two of them boys. The girl is fourteen years old and is the little mother of the family during the day.

The woman is employed in the drawing room where the large coils of wire are reduced to a smaller size. [illegible]

When the reporter reached the house it was 7 o'clock. The door was opened by a little girl dressed in a long apron.

"Is your mamma in?" inquired the reporter.

Supper Waiting for Mother.

"No, she isn't," replied the girl. "She has not got home from work yet. I am expecting her any minute now. The supper is waiting for her."

"Are you the housekeeper?"

"Well, you see," answered the girl, "mamma works all day and as I have two brothers here somebody has to look after the house. Mamma is so tired when she comes home that I try to have the supper already for her so she won't have to work too hard.

"You see she goes to work before seven in the morning and seldom gets home before [illegible] out and if I can get a lot of things done for her, why she does not feel it so much."

At this moment the door opened [illegible] the mother [illegible] her daughter placed dishes [illegible] table, and a big pitcher containing milk. The little family sat down to the table.

EXCUSE OF STATE POLICE FOR WOMAN SLAVERY IN SHOPS

[illegible] State of Massachusetts and [illegible] see that the labor laws of the State are enforced.—W. J. McKeever, factory inspector of the State police, speaking at the mass meeting [illegible] Saturday night, September 30, in Faneuil Hall, to [illegible] the employment of [illegible] at the Blake-Knowles [illegible].

[illegible] meal was [illegible] away [illegible] in the drawing room [illegible] said the woman [illegible]

[illegible] said the Trust [illegible] the wire has to be watched all the time.

Lifts Coils of 75 Pounds.

"The coil of wire that I lift weighs anywhere from forty to fifty, and some [illegible] seventy-five pounds. I take these [illegible]

We are paid according to the die of wire we make. For a [illegible] die we are paid 71 cents, for a [illegible] 60 cents; for a 54, 31 cents, and for a 44, 33 cents. The 44 die is smaller than the rest and [illegible] of this work than any of the others, so the day's pay averages about the same, no matter what size die you are working on. The women in that department make anywhere from $1.50 a day to $2.50, according to what work [illegible].

"Yes, I am tired after my day's work. Why shouldn't I be, lifting, stooping, as I do most of the time? No, I go to the theatre very little—I don't have enough time, [illegible] the money I make to run the house with and clothe the children."

"Are you satisfied with your work?" asked the reporter.

"Well, I have got to work and earn as much as I can. I make a good week's pay, and they are good to me. It is up to me. If I work hard I get more money than if I loaf and I can't afford to loaf. Sometimes I take a day off to rest, because you know [illegible] working ten hours a day for five days [illegible]

A Minister's Story.

[illegible] Rev. Mr. Gullans [illegible] own story [illegible] the wire work [illegible]

"I know of three widows who work in that factory. Two of them have children. They must work, and as they have been employed there several years they cannot do anything else. They must continue.

"These very women are doing men's work, they are working men's hours. Ten hours a day for a woman to be standing on her feet is altogether too much and in a factory of that kind the conditions must be unsanitary. It cannot be clean with [illegible] the lifting they have to [illegible] as much as a man. They were not built to do so. Thousands [illegible] for a woman, even a strong one—and many of these women are delicate.

"I have noticed a change in at least one instance. I have been away for two years [illegible] recently I could see a marked change. Two years ago she appeared strong and healthy [illegible] thin and from appearance [illegible] another condition.

"If these women must work they should not be allowed to work but eight hours a day. There should be a law to that effect and I hope to see such an act passed by the Legislature before long.

Eight Hours in Washington

The Company's Position

Arthur E. Smith, assistant superintendent of the American Steel and Wire Company's plant said that [illegible]

[illegible] that we are observing the law to the letter. None of the women work more than fifty-six hours a week. We would not allow it as it would be a violation."

"Why do you employ women in the spool and drawing rooms rather than men?" asked the reporter.

[illegible]

"Why don't you employ more women than you do at present?"

"Well," replied Mr. Smith, "we [illegible] men to women of course, but as I said, they can do a certain line of work better than the men, so we employ them."

"What are your sanitary conditions at the factory?"

"Our sanitary conditions are the best we can have. Everything is done possible to make the surrounding conditions as pleasant as possible for the women. [illegible] if the women don't want to work here [illegible]

SUNDAY AMERICAN SPECIAL MADE BIG HIT WITH ANCIENTS AT SEA

ANCIENTS READING THE SPECIAL EDITION OF THE SUNDAY AMERICAN ABOARD SHIP, AND INCIDENTS OF THE GREAT TRIP OF THE BOSTON COMPANY TO BERMUDA.

Big Buildings of Coral and Great Natural Caves Offered Real Surprise to Visitors

INTERESTING features of the trip of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company to Bermuda are told for readers of the Sunday AMERICAN by Richard W. Sears, staff photographer of the AMERICAN, who went on the trip. The Sunday AMERICAN'S special edition made a big hit with the Ancients at sea. Mr. Sears describes some of the principal events as follows:

By RICHARD W. SEARS.

There was so much for the Ancients to see in Bermuda that they were simply dumbfounded.

We never expected to see, for instance, big buildings, some of them six stories high, built of coral blocks, cut from nearby quarries.

Anybody's land in Bermuda seems to have a coral quarry. If a man wishes to build an addition to his house, he just goes out in his coral quarry and saws out enough blocks to finish the requisite building material. It is like a man sawing cakes of ice.

The blocks are laid side by side and cemented together. They are given a coat of whitewash and that is all that has to be done.

The roofs are laid of thin slabs of this coral. A trough at the eaves carries rainwater down into big barrels. That forms Bermuda's water supply.

They don't know what snow is in Bermuda, of course. Artificial ice is used by the well-to-do.

Between sight-seeing and the hospitality extended to us, the Ancients had all they could attend to and more during their two-days' stay.

We arrived at the Hotel Hamilton, city of Hamilton, last Monday morning and stayed there until Wednesday morning.

Wonderful Crystal Cave.

It seems to me that the most wonderful thing we saw there was the Crystal Cave. Four years ago two colored boys were playing ball. They lost their ball. They found it had dropped into a crevice in the ground. They dug out this crevice with shovels. This opened into a big underground cave. This cave is now one of the natural wonders of Bermuda.

You descend 150 steps to the Cave proper. The entire cave is lighted by electricity. It is 200 feet long and seventy-five feet wide at the bottom, with an underground lake twenty feet deep which has a four foot tide.

The two colored boys were given $30 for their discovery by the owners of the land. The owners have become rich now, admitting tourists to the Cave at seventy-five cents a head.

We also saw the Devil's Cave, the coral reefs, the angel fish, which change color when food is thrown to them, the smooth coral roads and other sights of the island.

Tuesday afternoon we were given a reception at Government House. Lord Kitchener, the Governor of Bermuda, is in Montreal, so the honors were done by the acting Governor.

Luncheon was served in the courtyard of Government House. The Salem Cadet Band and a band from the British barracks played. The officers of the British garrison, with their wives, were present, also members of wealthy Bermuda families and many guests from the hotels. Among these transient guests were Colonel John Jacob Astor and his bride, formerly Miss Madeline Force. Col. Astor's yacht, the Noma, is in Hamilton harbor. Mrs. Astor wore a cream colored dress and what seemed like a cape coat of black silk and a broad-brimmed purple hat, trimmed with a black Ostrich plume. Colonel Astor wore afternoon clothes, topped with a straw hat. The straw hat is always in fashion in Bermuda.

Meet Colonel Astor.

The Ancients wore their fatigue uniform and the new German caps at the reception. Several of the Ancients met Colonel Astor and his bride, including Colonel Benton and his staff.

After the reception we returned to the hotel and changed into white duck for the banquet given by the Ancients to the Bermuda officials at the Hamilton. The acting Governor-General was there, with lesser officials from all over the island.

One of the most picturesque gatherings was at the concert Monday night. It was a double concert, both the Salem Cadet and the British garrison band playing. All Bermuda society was there. The bands played alternately. The Salem Cadet band played "God Save the King," and the British played "The Star Spangled Banner," the audiences standing through both numbers. B. O. Wetmore of the Ancients sang the only solo numbers, "The Rosary," and "The Holy City," receiving loud applause.

Through the circle of palms and shrubbery around the side of the court yard could be seen the faces of colored natives of Bermuda, who crept up as close as they were allowed to watch the festivities. The music tickled them tremendously.

These were some of the principal events of our very busy stay on Bermuda. We took many drives around the island. The clubs were open to us. The Ancients really turned Hamilton upside down. They bought souvenirs by the dozen and left a lot of money there and had a bully time.

The British system of coinage bothered us some. A man buying a souvenir in a hurry would ask the price: "Seven and six," says the merchant. Then the Ancient would say: "For heaven's sake, tell it to me in American money."

By the way, the swimming at Bermuda is all right. You go in at five a. m. and stay as long as you wish. The temperature of the water is about 70.

Sunday American on Deck.

The Ancients are still talking of that special edition of the Sunday AMERICAN which was printed and delivered to them last Sunday morning while they were aboard the Oceana in the Gulf Stream. This edition was sent by special messengers to New York and caught the Oceana just as she sailed. The papers were held until Sunday morning, then were brought out and distributed by yours truly, as newsboy. The edition had pictures of the Ancients leaving Boston, scenes in Bermuda, itinerary of the trip and a corking all around story of the Bermuda excursion. It made a tremendous hit with [illegible] of the company, and greatly impressed other passengers on the Oceana.

"Off again, on again, gone again, Finnegan" has nothing on the Ancients. Just returned from Bermuda, they are off again for the South. A number stayed in New York Friday, on their return from Bermuda, and were joined there yesterday by a delegation from Boston. They are bound for Atlanta, where they will be the guests of the Gate City Guard, one of the best known military organizations of Georgia.

The occasion of their visit is the dedication of the new Peace Monument. The Ancients, as the oldest military organization in the country, have been honored by being designated [illegible] the right in line, where they will march under command of Colonel Everett C. Benton, their commander. The celebration is to be one of the biggest events in years in the South.

METAL DEALERS ARE HELD.

Three Charged with Receiving Stolen Goods.

Michael J. Meltzer, Max Daniels and Joseph Levendolph, connected with the New England Smelting and Refining Company, were arraigned in the Superior Criminal Court yesterday on five indictments, charging them with receiving stolen goods and conspiracy to steal from Richards & Co., a metal firm in Causeway street. To all indictments the three pleaded not guilty.

The prisoners were held in bail aggregating $10,500. Patrolman McCaffrey of the Hanover street station worked seven weeks gathering the evidence. The stolen property is valued between $4,000 and $4,000.

MORGAN PAYS $20 FOR A LENOX SHAVE

So Pleased with Gentle Barber He Smiles and Says: "Keep the Change."

LENOX, Oct. 7.—J. Pierpont Morgan felt so chipper after "Bernie" Ducles had oiled up his barber chair here to-day and dabbed a wee bit of talcum on the financier's countenance, that he broke into a smile, picked a yellow backed $20 bill from his pocket and handed it to "Bernie," saying in a cheery voice:

"Keep the change. It's the best shave I've had in a year."

[illegible]

There were [illegible] it was remarked by some outsiders who happened to know the list of guests, that in an emergency the diners could dig up a half billion dollars, if they felt like doing so.

Mr. Morgan is spending the week end as the guest of Mr. [illegible] the estate of his late cousin, Mrs. George H. Morgan. He is the executor of the estate and there is a report that he intends to purchase it and live here a part of each season. He has expressed himself as liking Lenox very much.

To-night the financier was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Patterson at a musical and entertainment at their home Blantyre.

Henry Russell knows all about [illegible] newspaper men and he seems to have taken a base advantage of the poet to accept his wager of 3,500 francs.

In discussing the matter with a London journalist, Russell said: "Maeterlinck is [illegible] interview and he is an adept in disguises."

If Maeterlinck tries to get into the United States in disguise it will be very sad for him. The United States Immigration office has no sense of humor. [illegible] has to give his right name and tell all about himself to land in America and just as soon as Maeterlinck tells his right name about a million reporters will land on his neck.

OFFICIALS WELCOME TAFT IN WASHINGTON

WALLA WALLA, Wash., Oct. 7.—President Taft arrived here today and was met by Gov. Hay upon his arrival. Former Senator Ankeny shook hands with him as he stepped from the train. President Taft spoke to a throng at the [illegible] park. Gov. Hay introduced the President saying that while all the people of the State of Washington might not agree "with all your policies, they admire your singleness of purpose."

The Governor expressed the hope that Mr. Taft would be re-elected President in 1912, and [illegible] the State [illegible] its duty. In reply the President laughingly explained:

"Well, the Governor says Senator Ankeny suggested me as President and that he would like to see the dose repeated in 1912. If that is so I guess I'll have to do the best I can. That's what I [illegible]"

Excellent Company Has Started the New Plymouth Theatre Upon the Road to a Prosperous Season. Charles Klein Remains in Boston to Put On His Latest Play with Cast Appearing in 'The Gamblers'

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

AFTER two weeks of the Irish Players and their natural acting of the dramatic gems of William Butler Yeats, Lady Gregory et al. we are bound to agree with those who direct affairs at the Plymouth Theatre that the drama of the green isle is just the thing for the opening of a new playhouse.

The Irish Players have triumphed with those who seek literary quality in the drama and unaffected acting. Even the peerless Drama League has been compelled to yield a point to the Irish Players, which may or may not have aided in the general prosperity that has been fluttering about the Plymouth Theatre since its opening.

Whether the Irish Players and their plays have done more than simply introduce us to unfamiliar things in plays and acting is a question. It is to be hoped, however, that the efforts of these interesting visitors to produce lasting impressions of a different type of stage entertainment than we have been accustomed to will succeed. They have been praised by the critics [illegible] the play-going public has been eloquently enthusiastic about them, which of course is cheering to those interested in the success of the experiment. But, it may be asked, have the audiences been drawn to the Plymouth from a curiosity to see the real drama of Ireland or from a deep and sincere feeling that these plays and players represent a higher type of drama than anything found in the domestic product?

STUDY OF PLYMOUTH AUDIENCES IS PUZZLING.

A study of the audiences at the Plymouth will move you to conflicting opinions. You will discover that the critical [illegible] produce mixed [illegible] understand [illegible] have been viewed [illegible] one portion of an [illegible] have been [illegible] the sincerity of the players [illegible] to the observation that [illegible] and much adver[illegible] large section [illegible] a body upon whom the higher [illegible] drama are wasted.

Nevertheless it is plain that the Irish [illegible] an attraction of this kind are now convinced that no mistake was made.

Charles Klein, who is still lingering in town, enjoying the sight of crowded houses at the Majestic, where "The Gamblers" is nightly adding generously to his royalties, is preparing to launch a little surprise in the form of a new play, upon which he is at this moment burning midnight oil. Mr. Klein is so happy in the belief that the company now presenting "The Gamblers" is the best that could be gathered together in one organization, that he is [illegible] to trust the first performance of [illegible] play to any other set of players. Consequently, when he pours the final [illegible] into the manuscript he will let Boston see the play at a special matinee, with the principals of "The Gamblers" company taking the honors.

Mr. Klein, who is the principal asset of the Authors' Producing Company, finds it difficult to write plays and direct the affairs of a big producing concern simultaneously, but inasmuch as he is permitted to garner dividends from two [illegible] he manages to keep more than [illegible] cheerful [illegible] the stress of [illegible]

By keeping mysteriously secret about the details of his new play, Mr. Klein is arousing a measure of curiosity. Mr. Klein is a good business man and knows advertis[illegible] [illegible] of course [illegible] an extract from him [illegible] admission that [illegible] the new play deals [illegible] problems and that [illegible] characters [illegible] have [illegible] of an actress of [illegible] Her name is [illegible]

It was confessed by Mr. Klein the other [illegible] that the play is sound.

[illegible] "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" [illegible] tency of his audiences that he has been compelled to retain the piece for a second week at the Castle Square Theatre. The past few weeks have given ample evidence of the loyalty of the stock audiences and their belief in Mr. Craig. With so many pronounced successes [illegible] theatre-going [illegible] theatres of [illegible] Mr. [illegible] In carrying "Forty-five Minutes From Broadway" into a second [illegible] Mr. Craig is merely responding to [illegible] demand for the stage [illegible] ordinary supplies. Apparently [illegible] in the business of selling entertainment is closer to his public than Mr. Craig.

Valeska Suratt and "The Red Rose" are nearly here again. They will arrive at the Hollis to-morrow [illegible] engagement [illegible] when Miss Suratt honored [illegible] Miss Suratt will [illegible] during her visit to the Hollis [illegible] it will be remembered, local playgoers were emphatically favorable to "The Red Rose" when it played at the Tremont.

Matrimony having broken out in Mr. Craig's Castle Square company, the [illegible] of [illegible] the loss of Miss Gertrude Binley, a new face is now smiling across the footlights. It is a face that knows how to smile agreeably, too. [illegible] West [illegible] Dean in "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway." Miss West has every [illegible] right to her acting ability, for she is the granddaughter of the late [illegible] Barton, who was for [illegible] years the leading man at the old [illegible] Museum. She is not entirely unknown [illegible] owing to her [illegible] Lawrence [illegible] Park Theatre a few [illegible] ago. Miss West makes a valuable [illegible] to Mr. Craig's company.

Hollis Street Theatre.

Valeska Suratt in "The Red Rose" comes [illegible] Hollis Street Theatre to-morrow for a two weeks' engagement. With Miss Suratt will [illegible] of seventy [illegible] [illegible] New [illegible] it was to the one to open there, early in the Summer. Miss Suratt's tour will last until the beginning of June, 1912, and during this time she will be seen in none but the principal cities of the East and Middle West.

"The Red Rose" [illegible] [illegible] tured.

B. F. Keith's Theatre

A genuine novelty is promised for next week at B. F. Keith's Theatre in Charles Kellogg, "the man who sings like a bird." Mr. Kellogg [illegible] [illegible] "I Love My Wife, but O You Kid" and Tasmus Hofer & Company in the new comedy.

National Theatre.

Another big European novelty will be presented at the new National Theatre this week when Mlle. Frigida, the beautiful Italian character actress and [illegible] of Europe, will present one of the [illegible] ever seen in America. Her appearance at the National will be her first engagement in America [illegible] interesting comedy and [illegible]

Mlle. Frigida is but one of the big features on the bill. Hayes and Wynn will present a great singing and dancing act, while [illegible] and Stevens, the comedy entertainers, are a big screen. The Clay [illegible] players have an interesting [illegible] one of the best [illegible] ever seen in vaudeville. The Pelots, jug[illegible] [illegible] jokers, have a good act and the Mozarts will show one of the greatest novelty acts ever seen in Boston.

Grand Opera House.

The thrilling New England rural melodrama "Another Man's Wife," in which the [illegible] country village [illegible] [illegible] Tuesday [illegible] and Saturday [illegible] of humor running [illegible] and an spontaneous [illegible] specialty acts [illegible] of both sexes who [illegible] and capable company.

Castle Square Theatre.

"Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" will have another week at the Castle Square, after an opening week in which thousands have enjoyed its merry humor. [illegible] with all of George [illegible] three acts that [illegible] on the go and [illegible] interspersed songs come in just frequently enough to be more than usually welcome, and they are made all the brighter by the presence of a pretty and spirited chorus.

In the leading role of Mary Jane Jenkins, Mary [illegible] side of her [illegible] ment with burlesque and seriousness with humor, and Miss Young carefully makes clear the many sides of Mary Jane's character. [illegible] George [illegible] makes a youth [illegible] Tom Bennett, the heir at law.

Park Theatre.

There is no question whatever about the great success of "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" at the Park Theatre, and night after night for two weeks the orchestra has been under the stage, proving conclusively that Boston playgoers are quite as greatly taken with this comedy by George M. Cohan as New Yorkers were last year. The comedy ran at the metropolis for more than [illegible] year, [illegible] hard to predict how long it can hold the stage at the Park.

Colonial Theatre.

When the curtain rises at the Colonial Theatre to-morrow evening, it will usher in the sixth week of the engagement of Raymond Hitchcock here in "The Red Widow." There is no question about the hearty liking that Bostonians have always had for this elongated comedian, but never has he appeared here to so great an advantage as now. His newest sphere of adventure is Russia, and in the course of the lively musical comedy he shows the trials and tribulations of an American corsetmaker who gets entangled in a band of Nihilists.

Tremont Theatre.

"Excuse Me" has established a new endurance record for the season of 1911 in Boston. Last night's performance marked the completion of the seventh week of the engagement of this Henry W. Savage farce production and it has but two weeks more to stay. There is not one member of the big company who has not scored an individual hit, and the cast as a whole has stamped the company as just about the best acting organization that has been seen in Boston in a long time.

Majestic Theatre.

"The Gamblers," which has made an unqualified success and which has been enthusiastically received by local theatregoers [illegible] who has been responsible for many of our stage successes, seem to have added the greatest triumph in his latest play.

Shubert Theatre.

The third week of the engagement of the Winter Garden [illegible] [illegible]

Boston Theatre.

The longer "The Round Up" stays at the Boston Theatre, the bigger are the audiences and greater the [illegible] [illegible] demand for [illegible] [illegible] finest character studies known to the stage.

Globe Theatre.

Billy B. Van in "A Lucky Hoodoo" opens his second and last week at the Globe Theatre to-morrow afternoon. Monday evening has been set as [illegible] [illegible] In the [illegible] of the region who will come to Boston for this occasion.

Gaiety Theatre.

Waldron's Casino.

Those fond of burlesque will thoroughly enjoy Hurtig and Seamon's latest production [illegible] at Waldron's Casino [illegible] greatest achievement in this particular direction. Not only have they equipped the attraction in a most gorgeous manner, but they have also been successful in securing a cast not excelled in productions of the highest type.

Orpheum Theatre.

The Boston public, and especially those [illegible] will be treated to as great an entertaining all-star bill as has been seen at the Orpheum Theatre thus far. Silverado, a sensational lady trapeze artist, the Melroy duo, singing and talking; the Musical Stippes, novelty musical act, and Morton and Macmillan [illegible] are among the entertainers.

Austin & Stone's.

The new program at Austin & Stone's Museum this week [illegible] Gumbo, the trained ourang-outang. Besides several other features in the curio hall there will be a new show in the theatre.

Hub Theatre.

The bill at the Hub Theatre this week will be composed of headline acts. For the first half of the week the feature will be Pyscho, the electrical wonder.

Howard Athenaeum.

A bevy of rare beauties known as the Broadway Gaiety Girls, come to the Howard Monday. Emma O'Neill and Jennie Delmar support the leading feminine roles, while the comedy end will be well taken care of by Dick Brown and John Bragg. In the continuous show Hayes and Alpoint, Wood and Lawson, expert dancers, Five Licorice Sticks, a colored feature, [illegible]

HARVARD HELD TO EIGHT POINTS IN HOT BATTLE WITH HOLY CROSS

Red Sox Close Season With Victory and Will Hold Fourth Place if Chicago Loses Today

HARVARD TRIES FIRST FORWARD PASS OF SEASON IN CLOSE STRUGGLE WITH HOLY CROSS AT BIG STADIUM, MAKING GOOD GAIN TOWARD OPPONENT'S GOAL

RED SOX WIND UP YEAR WITH 8-1 VICTORY OVER SENATORS

Beat Senators 8 to 1, and Break Into First Division; Speaker Hurt.

Boston's Red Sox yesterday closed the season of 1911 in the bromidic blaze of glory, defeating Washington 8 to 1, in their sixth straight victory and moving into fourth place, the longed for first division berth. Their victory gave them a cinch on fifth place any way but whether or not they will remain in fourth place depends on what Cleveland can do to Chicago to-morrow. The White Sox one defeat yesterday helped to move the Bostonians into the leading quartette.

The game was the last played on the Huntington Avenue Grounds where, for the last eleven years, or since the American League broke into the Hub, the club has been playing. A crowd that numbered about 3,000 people, including ten million kids, who were noisy guests of John I. Taylor, witnessed the final local exhibition of the national pastime in spite of a cold, watery day.

The gladsomeness of the victory was dimmed considerably by an accident which put Tris Speaker, the local hero, out of the game and, according to first reports, resulted in his serious injury. Information from the City Hospital, where he was taken after being hit by a wild shoot pitched by Cashion, the Washington hurler, later indicated that no bones were broken but that his right leg was severely bruised and that he would not be able to take part in the All-Star Athletic series.

The opening round consisted mainly of the kind of baseball that makes Washington famous and resulted in one run for the Sox. Elberfeld pegged to the stands on Henriksen's grounder and the Goth pulled up at second. A wild pitch put Olaf on third and Schaefer kicked Yerkes' bounder out of the diamond, Henriksen scoring. Cashion's second wild pitch gave Yerkes second and the Senators' pitcher then hit Speaker, Janvrin taking Tris' place. A third wild pitch moved both runners up a notch, but there was no more scoring.

There were two dead in the third when Gardner doubled and took third, while Gessler and Cunningham disputed over the ball. Lewis and Bradley walked and Williams scored two Red Sox with a drive to left. Hall walked, filling the bases again, and Henriksen's triple counted three more. Olaf scored on Yerkes' double, Janvrin, who opened the round, ending it.

[illegible] final Boston run was that made by Riggert when he sailed the boards in right centre for his homer in the eighth.

Washington's only run was made in the [illegible]. Cunningham opened with a single, and [illegible] on hits by Becker, who had succeeded Cashion in the fourth, and Milan, Ainsmith meanwhile flying out. The score:

Princeton Wins from Villa Nova, 31 to 0

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 7.—Despite the slippery, soggy ground, Princeton vanquished the Villa Nova eleven, 31 to 0, on Osborne Field this afternoon.

Princeton took the kick-off on her 20-yard line. McLean ran it back 30 yards. Pendleton contributed 10 yards through centre, Dewitt 10 more. The visitors held on their 25-yard line and Penfield, the Tiger fullback, dropped the ball over the bar from the 35-yard line for the first score. Three minutes later, Sawyer reeled off 40 yards for a touchdown, after Pendleton, Penfield and Dewitt had advanced the ball to the visitors 40-yard line. Pendleton kicked the goal.

In the remainder of the quarter the Princeton line played so poorly that the backs could do nothing and the quarter ended with the ball on Villa Nova's 7-yard line. Pendleton placed the ball on the visitors' goal line on the first play of the second quarter and Penfield carried it over. Pendleton kicked goal from a difficult angle. There was no more scoring in the first half.

The Tigers went right after the foe at the opening of the second half. Sawyer took the ball from midfield 30, 15, 12 and 3 yards for a touchdown. Pendleton kicked the goal. It only took [illegible] another minute to be over the visitors' [illegible] and Pendleton [illegible]. [illegible] last score was made early in the last quarter. Pendleton reeled off 40 yards and put the ball on the visitors' 15-yard line. A forward pass, Penfield to Waller, put the ball over the line, and Pendleton kicked the goal. Lineup:

FINAL GIANT GAME WON BY RUSTLERS

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Charles Victory Faust of Marion, Kas., official jinx of the Giants, made his regular debut as a big league pitcher at the Polo Grounds this afternoon, working one-half inning against Boston. There were a few hundred half frozen fans rewarded, getting a treat [illegible] no money could buy.

When Umpire Finneran bulletined "Faust now pitching for New York," the crowd didn't believe it, but, sure enough, the famous "nut" took the mound.

His record in words and figures follows: Rariden doubled over Snodgrass' head, Tyler rolled to Faust who threw him out at first, Rariden taking third. This was some graceful fielding on the part of Charles. Sweeney flied to Murray and Rariden scored after the catch. Donlin was tossed out by Fletcher.

Faust Insists on Batting.

The New York side was retired before Faust came to bat in his order, but Charley went in and tapped to Tyler for an easy out, but he went on around the bases anyway.

Rube Marquard was given [illegible] world's series workout, holding his old enemies, the Bostonians, to a tie in five innings. Then the southpaw king was taken out by McGraw and the lowly Beaneaters won a frosty game of baseball, while Louis Drucke was putting a come-back stunt. The final score was 5 to 2.

Outside of that, everything was perfectly all right. Nobody seemed to care much how it went. The line-ups got all mixed up in the melee, and it was hard to tell who was at bat along about the eighth inning. McGraw used some of his colts and Tenney used some not so coltish including himself.

It was the first game the Giants have been able to lose for some time and one they could afford to lose without distressing themselves.

Giants Are Most Generous.

It was a charitable loss at that, as Boston needs games as much as anybody in the league. Score:

The College Inns brought 12 tallies over the pan with 17 bingles.

DARTMOUTH TAKES LISTLESS GAME, 12-0

Defeats Colby in Slow Contest, Captain Daley Being Stellar Light.

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 7.—Dartmouth defeated Colby to-day 12 to 0. The Green men went into the game with a sort of listless spirit and all during the first two periods it looked as though the Dartmouth line men were out for spring practice with no game to play for six months. Meanwhile the Maine boys were working their heads off. They rushed the ball 87 yards in those two periods while Dartmouth carried it less than a third of that distance. The Colby team couldn't gain consistently [illegible] within striking distance [illegible]

Dartmouth's attack was very weak and the men didn't seem to get together at all. Everybody on the line except Captain Daley played as if he had his mind on [illegible]. They [illegible] to take every opportunity to block within the 20-yard zone and get penalized.

Hogsett brought the first real roar from the stands near the end of the second period when he hooked up with a punt in midfield and took the whole Colby team to the one-yard line. It was a pretty play and he put on the finishing touches by diving through tackle for the first touchdown. [illegible] the goal.

Looks Like Real Game.

From then on things began to look more like a football game to the Dartmouth stands. Coach Cavanaugh must have given the team an effective dose of oratory between the halves, for the men came out of their den eager to ring things up in great [illegible] [illegible] crashed through and blocked a punt [illegible] recovered. However, and punted to the 42-yard line, from where the Green line surged down the field with long, powerful rushes, only to be brought up with a jerk by the stubborn Colby team on the four-yard line. It was a critical moment for the Maine boys, and Taylor, their freshman left-half, [illegible] Hogsett Fleck dropped on the pigskin eight yards out. Morey advanced a yard and then Hoban tore through centre, punt between the posts. Barends made the score 12 to 0.

The fourth period was distinctly Dartmouth's. Colby's star end Mikelsky had [illegible] called home by telegram before the game and Hunt, the other regular end, had been taken from the field with a fractured [illegible]. This left the visitors badly weak[illegible]

Dartmouth worked the ball down the field [illegible] Barends and Hogsett to try drop kicks, both missing by inches. Then with a few minutes to play, Hogsett took a forward pass 31 yards to Colby's 15-yard line. Colby played for time, however, and the game closed with Dartmouth's ball second down on the one-yard line.

Daly Is Big Star.

The all-round work of Daley and Barends and Hogsett's running back punts featured the game and saved the day for Dartmouth. Hood was the star of the Colby team. Line-up:

YALE WINS, 12 TO 0; CAPTAIN HOWE STAR

Blue Leader Kicks Two Pretty Field Goals in the Syracuse Game.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 7.—Syracuse was beaten to-day by Yale, 12-0. At no time was the Eli goal in danger and only once were the visitors inside the Yale 30-yard line, a muffed punt by Philbin giving them a life in the first period which they failed to improve.

Capt. Arthur Howe lifted two clever field goals, and Ketcham fell on the ball behind the Syracuse goal after Reilly had fumbled it in taking it over the line. Derby, the Syracuse quarterback, really made this score possible by muffing a punt at the Syracuse 30-yard line. Capt. Howe and Anderson scored seven yard plunges, taking the ball to the shadow of the Syracuse goal.

Captain Howe's first field goal was Yale's only scoring of the first half. Syracuse held Yale in check during this period. In the second half Yale scored resistless football and scored twice. Fogg's punt was caught by Captain Howe in midfield and run back ten yards. A forward pass, Captain Howe to Bill Howe, netted 20 more and Anderson's 15-yard gain at end brought the ball to the shadow of the Syracuse goal, where Reilly broke through, but dropped the ball as he went over the line. Ketcham was fished out of a deep pile of players and was awarded the touchdown.

Captain Howe's field goal from the 48-yard line, late in the half, was the prettiest piece of toe work exhibited at Yale field this season. The angle was difficult and the Yale crowd roared as the ball sailed through the posts.

Yale forced the play throughout the final period. Captain Howe scored a fair catch at the Syracuse 40-yard line, and McDevitt narrowly missed a goal from placement. Yale took the ball to the Syracuse 10-yard line with only two minutes to play, and Anderson tried a dropkick, but missed.

Captain Howe's generalship and his handling of punts were half the Yale game. Philbin muffed two punts in the first period, halting the Yale advance and making scoring impossible. Bill Howe's end rush playing was spectacular. He twice recovered [illegible] on Syracuse fumbles. Francis and Captain Howe each missed a field goal. Probst and Captain Fogg were the stellar [illegible] for Syracuse.

Last year Yale defeated the visitors 10 to 6, and was especially anxious to blank them to-day to erase the memory of the two field goals which were scored then. Lineup:

HOLY CROSS GIVES HARVARD SCARE, HOLDING CRIMSON ELEVEN TO SCORE OF 8 TO 0

Visitors Rush Ball Close to Cambridge Team's Goal and only Poor Generalship Prevents Count. Wendell Proves Star of Contest. Picking Out Weak Spots and Breaking Through Continually

BY TED PARKE.

Harvard defeated Holy Cross yesterday, 8 to 0, but it was a hollow victory for the Crimson team, and a great disappointment to the followers of the Harvard eleven. Harvard showed little or no improvement in any department, except perhaps in the absence of fumbling, over the form displayed in the game with Bates last week. Instead the Crimson uncovered a great number of faults and weaknesses in the team, which must be corrected at once.

The game was unfortunate for Harvard inasmuch as Wigglesworth, one of the most promising men for the quarterback position, was so seriously injured that he will probably be out of the game for [illegible] of the season. A bone some place in his ankle was broken, and he had to be carried from the field. His playing again this year is out of the question. Gardner, another prominent man for quarter, was put out of the game last Saturday, with an injury to his knee, which will keep him from the game for the next month, so that now the brunt of the work will fall on Potter, the man who has been playing regular this season.

The day was cool and crisp, but the field was in poor condition for fast running.

Harvard's first score came in the first period, just four minutes after the start of the play. It was the result of brilliant running by Campbell and Wendell and excellent interference. Following this first burst of speed and strength, however, the Crimson seemed to lose all its energy. The attack from that time on was spiritless, ragged and lacked any degree of concentration.

Harvard Scores First Touchdown.

Harvard got the ball at midfield on a punt. Gardiner opened a hole at right tackle and Campbell went through for 15 yards. On the next play Gardiner kept off opponents from his side of the play, Smith shut off his end, and Wendell dashed [illegible] He was [illegible] on the 20-yard line, but easily shook himself free and kept on for the goal. At the goal line he was downed by Gibson, but rolled over the goal line. Smith missed the goal.

The second score came about the beginning of the second period on a beautiful drop kick by Potter from the 40-yard line. [illegible] the Crimson [illegible] drop kick by the Harvard [illegible] Holy Cross's 40-yard line. Wendell [illegible] three yards through right tackle, but on the next play Harvard was penalized fifteen yards for Wendell's hurdling and Morrison dropped a perfect forward pass from Potter. Harvard was forced to kick and Potter thereupon dropped back to the 40-yard line and booted the ball over the bar.

Holy Cross Threatens.

Holy Cross gave Harvard a fright not long after the last score of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Harvard men [illegible] [illegible] O'Brien was again entrusted with the ball. When he received it there was not a man anywhere near him, so slothful was the Harvard defence and he galloped off down the field with the Holy Cross interference grouped about him. When quarterback Potter finally managed to break through his interference, O'Brien had the ball on the Harvard 15-yard line.

A line plunge by Gibson gained three yards. The Harvard defence tightened up and Whelan called on Gibson for a placement kick. The pass from centre was poor and Whelan foozled it, a Harvard lineman fell on the ball when it rolled away from Whelan's hands, and Felton punted out of danger to midfield.

Holy Cross was not guilty of any infraction of the rules, according to the officials, but Harvard was penalized [illegible] for [illegible]

[illegible] of the Harvard team were [illegible]. The great trouble seemed to be [illegible] which [illegible] permitted [illegible] so that the proper [illegible] be open.

The stars of the line were Gardiner and Captain Fisher at right tackle and guard respectively. Gardiner continually broke through and tackled the runner and broke [illegible]

SPEED OF BROWN DEFEATS "AGGIES"

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 7.—Brown's speed [illegible] Massachusetts Aggies here this afternoon in a dense game [illegible] of 26 to 0, the contest being featured by the all around good work of Sprackling, Marble's line plunging and [illegible] Crowther of the Providence eleven. Brown played a line plunging game and profited well by it, but Sprackling [illegible] in some well executed forward passes which were good ground gainers.

Brown kicked off to the Aggies' 40-yard line and an exchange of punts gave the home team the ball on their own 40-yard line, but they failed to gain and Sprackling punted to midfield. Amherst, failing on a forward pass, booted and Brown's attempt at the pass also failed, but Marble smashed through centre for ten yards. There a fumble lost gave the ball to the Amherst men who made first down on line plunges and added fifteen yards on a forward pass, taking the oval to Brown's 10-yard line.

The Providence team braced at this critical juncture and threw the Aggie backs for a loss of ten yards on taking the ball. Marble sped round right end for twenty-five yards and a couple of line bucks added ten more yards, the period then ending.

Brown Scores Touchdown.

Crowther took Marble's place at right half for Brown when the next session began and the Providence backs tore up the Aggies' line for twenty yards, only to lose the ball on a fumble. Penalized for holding, the visitors punted and Sprackling ran back the ball to the Aggies' thirty-five yard line. Jones shot through centre for twelve yards, and more line plunges brought the ball to the Aggies' fifteen-yard line, where Sprackling broke away to a quarter run [illegible] for a touchdown. Ashbaugh kicked goal.

Brown [illegible] the ball after the kick-off [illegible] a forward pass, Sprackling to [illegible] gained fifteen yards, while [illegible] twenty more. Sprackling [illegible] the ball over the bar from the twenty-five yard line [illegible].

Long Run By Crowther.

Crowther [illegible] set the Brown rooters wild by tearing through the whole Aggie eleven for 110 yards on the kickoff and scoring a touchdown. Ashbaugh kicked [illegible] A forward pass brought the ball to the Aggies' four-yard line [illegible] Ashbaugh kicking [illegible].

Williams Beaten, 6-3, on Intercepted Pass

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Oct. 7.—Springfield Training School took advantage of a poorly executed forward pass attempted by the Williams team, and Merner scored a touchdown which won the game for Springfield on Western Field to-day, 6 to 3. Nage, the fast Williams halfback, was the individual star of the contest, gaining twice as much ground as any other player. The Williams line showed remarkable [illegible] but [illegible] day, and [illegible] Manning [illegible] outplayed Nage in the second half.

All the scoring was done in the first quarter. After Vinal had recovered a punt for Williams, Merner [illegible] a forward pass from Nage and ran seventy yards for a touchdown. Horne kicked the goal. After several exchanges of punts Garfield recovered one for Williams and Michael kicked a goal from placement from the twenty-seven yard line.

Constant punting characterized the play of the second period. Williams' team showed its ability to recover punts, [illegible] Walker's son doing the trick this time. Williams came near scoring again in the third quarter. Michael attempted another place kick from the twenty-three yard line, but Fish fumbled the pass and Doane of Springfield took the ball to the centre of the field before Fish downed him. The fourth period consisted mainly of a constant exchange of punts. Linder made a good gain [illegible] ten yards on a centre play.

NATICK SCORES 73.

Overwhelms Hudson in Midland League Opening.

HUDSON, Mass., Oct. 7.—Natick High School ran up 73 points against Hudson in the Interscholastic League here to-day. The visitors played rings around the local boys, who never had the ball in Natick's territory, except on the kickoff. Murray, Sheehan, and Doherty played a whirlwind game for Natick. Corcoran played well for Hudson High. Line-up:

BABE ADAMS BLANKS CHICAGO CUBS, 5-0

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—Fred Toney tossed off the game between the Cubs and the Pirates in the very first inning this afternoon. He was so wild that the Pirates didn't have to hit the ball, the visitors scoring four runs before they could be retired.

Slapnicka, the [illegible] recruit, followed Toney on the mound in the second inning and held the Pirates down pretty well after that. But the Cubs could not do anything with their hits and three safe drives was the best they could get off Babe Adams. The game was devoid of anything sensational. The weather was cold and threatening. WORCESTER BEATEN, 6-0 BY TRINITY Polytechnic Players Rally Too Late and Lose in Stubborn Battle.

HARTFORD, Ct., Oct. 7.—A single touchdown and goal in the first period won a 6 to 0 victory for Trinity over Worcester Polytechnic Institute in the opening game of the local season on Trinity Field to-day. It was a stubbornly fought contest from start to finish with Trinity playing the better game at the start and Worcester showing the greater strength at the close.

Worcester kicked off to Hudson and the burly Trinity fullback rushed the ball back to midfield before he was downed. Trinity [illegible] Worcester fumbled, Trinity recovering the ball on Worcester's 20-yard line. Worcester held for downs and kicked on the first play. Trinity by a series of line plays and end rushes, put the ball on Worcester's one-yard line. At this point Lawler made one of the sensational runs of the game, taking the ball to Worcester's one-yard line before he was tackled by Halligan. In a tandem play Hudson was shoved over the line for the touchdown and Kinney kicked a difficult goal.

Trinity had the ball on Worcester's twenty-yard line at the start of the second period. Hudson made ten yards around the right end but a Trinity forward pass went wrong and it was Worcester's ball. Both teams attempted line and end plays and forward passes, the ball going from one team to the other but in the centre of the field most of the time.

The last two periods were largely given over to kicking by both teams. Neither goal was in immediate danger, but Worcester's, gaining strength, played brilliant football, while Trinity played less brilliant. The ground was soft and soggy and fast playing was out of the question.

WINTHROP HOLDS NEWTON.

Black and Orange Team Wins Poor Game by 11 to 6 Score.

Newton High trimmed Winthrop High on the gridiron yesterday afternoon at Newtonville by 11 to 6. It was a poor game throughout, both elevens playing poorly. The Newton team was [illegible] to pile up a large score but [illegible] Winthrop's only score came when O'Donnell recovered the ball on an attempted goal from the field and ran through the entire Newton team from his own 5-yard line for a touchdown. HARVARD WEAK ON OFFENSIVE PLAY

Many Spots Show up Where Improvement is Needed

STRONG ON THE DEFENSE

Indications Point to Good Pounding Line or Circl-- [illegible]

By TED PARKE

The games the Harvard football eleven has thus far played have demonstrated one very grave fault, offensive weakness. The [illegible] of this is simple and lies in the [illegible] are a number of new men [illegible] line this year who have yet to learn [illegible] positions and who lack experience in [illegible] games.

The poor offensive work may be blamed to both the linemen and the backs. The backs are at fault because of the poor interference they are giving the man carrying the ball in the games and also in the scrimmages they have been unable with few exceptions to strike the [illegible] and then either run so far [illegible] the man [illegible] can get [illegible] or they [illegible] that the secondary defense has come in and broken up the play before a gain is made. [illegible]

[illegible] interference is discussed. The three backs, who at this time seem to be the first set on the Harvard team, are entirely different from one another in build and in style of play. Campbell is a small, but very fast man. Wendell is somewhat slower, but a wonderful line plunger. Morrison, at fullback, is a mixture of both, and is neither as slow as one nor as fast as the other. The great problem, therefore, is to train these men to run at the same speed in order to get the best results in interference. This will gradually be worked out as the season advances.

Line Strong on Defense.

As far as the defensive playing of the Harvard line is concerned, green as it is in some parts, little more could be asked. No [illegible] to speak of this [illegible] the first set of linemen that should re[illegible] strength as if locked in [illegible] a feature of the game [illegible] are decided weakness in the [illegible] offensive and defensive play [illegible] Keays is a big chap weighing over a hundred [illegible] and [illegible] a powerful guard, but he lacks the finer points. Whether it is [illegible] not absorb the teachings of his coaches or whether he will not absorb them is a question but the fact remains that he has not [illegible] very important [illegible] In the first place he [illegible] too high. He starts so slowly and awkwardly that his opponent has toppled him over before the play behind him has taken form, and the same is true when he plays on the defensive, and large [illegible]

[illegible]

Forwards Must Make Holes.

For instance, a signal is given calling for a hole to be opened in a certain spot. It is the duty of every player on the line, except those at that spot, to take care of his opponent so that he cannot get through to stop the play and also work with the man playing next to him to split [illegible]

[illegible] tactics need not be [illegible]

Harvard is developing a good man for the quarterback job in Potter, who was forced to play second fiddle to Wigglesworth all last season. Potter undoubtedly [illegible] than Wigglesworth and therefore is a far better man to have [illegible] a tight hole. In addition, he can [illegible] after having the advantage of [illegible] and his delivery is faster and more accurate. Being a cooler type of man, he can get his plays off faster and keep the team moving.

Added to all of this, Potter is now punting on the average of fifty yards and [illegible] kicker of no mean ability, with average protection being able to boot the ball over the crossbar from a distance of forty yards. Harvard's set of [illegible]

BIG SCORE FOR TUFTS.

Easily Defeats Connecticut "Aggies" 49 to 0.

Tufts trimmed the Connecticut Aggies [illegible] yesterday at Medford by a [illegible] of 49 to 0. The Aggies were outclassed in every department of the game [illegible] first down twice in the [illegible] the first few minutes, put [illegible] of substitutes [illegible] two scores occurred in quick [illegible] Connecticut held Tufts on the first [illegible] and kicked to the Aggies who [illegible] yards, for a touchdown. He [illegible] the ball to the 35-yard [illegible] forced them to kick on their first attempt and Angell made a long run then went over for a touchdown. Webber missed goal. Next team Tufts got a blocked kick on the Aggies 15-yard line and in two plays Adams went over. Webber kicked the goal. Tufts took the ball to Connecticut 1 yard line and Adams carried it over. Webber missed goal.

Tufts started the second half by scoring almost immediately.

The next two scores were results of long runs by Adams and a fumble by the Aggies Angell and Webber scoring.

SCHOOLBOY ELEVENS BEGIN HARD GAMES

Fifty Contests, Several of Them Important, Scheduled for This Week.

By OTTO B. HANSON.

The schoolboy gridiron games to date have not been of high order. No flashes of speed have been shown and it can be plainly seen that the teams have not yet [illegible] formed, but something is bound to break within a short time, for several of the schoolboy teams look good and they will soon be taking on harder opponents.

From this time on only the hardest kind of work is mapped out for the schoolboys. Most of the teams will play two games weekly and the boys will have to be in pink of condition to go through.

But two or three teams so far have shown any real football. Most of the teams have stamped themselves as comers [illegible] many teams will be on even ratings. The success of many elevens depends on open work, but many of the teams still stick to the old game of plunging the line.

This week will be a great one for the schoolboy teams. Over fifty games are scheduled and many of these will be the first big battles of the season. The opening game of the Suburban League will be [illegible] Malden and Melrose meet.

Three Big Days This Week

The schoolboy gridiron followers will have three big days this week. Thursday is Columbus Day and many annual contests will be fought. This day rivals Thanks[illegible] popularity among the [illegible] than a score of games are scheduled.

Medford High is one of the teams that has shown up well so far. The team of the Hillside school has real ability on the field. It has played several good games and has shown it will have to be reckoned with in all its games. Open work has [illegible]

[illegible] on the [illegible] His work has been up to the highest stand and in the games so far, and the opposing quarterbacks always try to carry things [illegible]

[illegible] as a wonder last year, and before the season is over he should develop into the best quarter that has ever been turned out from the Medford High School. Lawless has the [illegible]

Medford Factor in League.

Much [illegible] to all other members of the team, for they have all worked hard and [illegible] Medford should be a strong factor in the Suburban League this season. It will play its first league game a week from Saturday with Melrose High.

Everett plays Lawrence and Quincy this week, so it will have a lot of hard work.

Everett High, which has appeared well in the [illegible] so far will be Medford's rival for high honors, say Suburban League followers. The team opened its season with a victory over Revere High and showed [illegible] at contest that it will be able to cope with the strongest schoolboy elevens. Captain Morando was unable to play in that contest but he is now back at his position at end and has strengthened the team. Coach O'Donnell was a little more fortunate than other teams in the league with his material, starting off with eight veterans.

Everett in Two Games.

Everett has two hard games arranged for this week and they will be forced to fight in both. On [illegible] Day Boston College High [illegible] hard game is expected. Boston [illegible] opened its season by playing a slashing game against Medford resulting in a 0 to [illegible]

[illegible] schedule to Brockton High [illegible] at Somerville on [illegible] on Saturday [illegible] will be [illegible] of a beautiful [illegible] at it was their [illegible] one of the leading [illegible]

[illegible] and several other players that are [illegible] would have come in handy. Grant, [illegible] with Medford this season, was at Somerville High last year and would have [illegible] handy man to have around.

Back Field is Strong.

The Red and Blue has a strong backfield with Parks, Garland, Donne and Dardis, but it is the line that is weak. The [illegible] are able to go through many [illegible] will have to have some defence to be successful.

In the first two games of the season Boston Latin proved to be a weaker team than supposed. The men on the team, however, are heavy and several are veterans, so they should hit a winning stride pretty soon.

BOSTON LATIN WINS.

Open Play Feature of 11 to 0 Defeat of Newburyport High.

NEWBURYPORT, Mass., Oct. 7.—In a game featured by much open work Boston Latin defeated Newburyport High School this afternoon at the Fair Grounds, score being 11 to 0. The visitors outweighed the local lads 10 pounds to a man, but they lacked team work and costly fumbles kept the score down. Latin school's scores came in the third and last periods, when a series of end runs and line plunges carried the ball from the 20 [illegible]

MALDEN BEATS BROOKLINE.

Elevens Fight Hard Game to a 5 to 3 Score.

With seven veterans on its team, Malden High experienced one of the most stubbornly contested gridiron battles in its history when it lined up against Brookline High on the Malden Field yesterday afternoon, defeating the latter school, 5 to 3. Malden's game was mostly offensive but [illegible] was a puzzle [illegible] to be nearly irresistable.

Murphy made Malden's only score, a touchdown, during the first minute of play, when he made a 70 yard run. A field kick from the 20-yard line was the only score made by Brookline, also being made in the first period of play.

BALTUSROL TOURNEY NEXT ON GOLF LIST

GOLF EVENTS THIS WEEK.

Oct. 9-15. Women's national championship, Baltusrol G. C., Short Hills, New Jersey.

Oct. 12-14. The Country Club, three-day open tournament for the Country Club cup.

Oct. 11-12. Framingham Country Club, [illegible] handicap.

Oct. 12. Allston Golf Club, A. M. Women's Golf Association of Boston, 18 holes handicap match play, Team A and Team B.

This week's golfing interest centres in the women who are competing for the national championship of the United States on the links of the Baltusrol Golf Club at Short Hills, N. J. This meeting, the seventeenth annual championship, has attracted over a score more players than the field that played at the Homewood Country Club of Flossmoor, Ill., last year, and on Monday morning sixty-five women contestants will start in the qualifying round in an endeavor to be among the fortunate thirty-two players who will qualify for match play.

Women's golf in this country has for two years superceded the amateur national meeting in its international flavor, [illegible] Scottish champion, visited this country and won the Robert Cox trophy, emblematic of the national title here, on the Merion Cricket Club's course at Philadelphia.

Miss Dorothy Campbell changed her residence in the next year to live in Canada and entering the 1910 national meeting at the Homewood Cricket Club in Illinois was successful in defending her title, [illegible] the Robert Cox trophy again [illegible] States for a twelve month's stay in Miss Campbell's club, the Hamilton Golf Club of Canada.

Miss Campbell has come down to Baltusrol to defend her title for the second time, and though practically the same field will compete against her in attempt to recover the national honor, there are some players who may surprise the best of prophets.

Boston will be well represented with the Misses Margaret and Harriet Curtis, both former national champions, and Miss Georgiana Bishop, champion in 1904. This player is drawn with Miss Campbell for the qualifying round. From the Metropolitan district Miss Lillian B. Hyde, the Metropolitan champion, is the strongest favorite, and Mrs. R. H. Barlow and Mrs. Caleb Fox will be leaders from Philadelphia.

The Baltusrol links is in fine fettle and the fact that it is an Eastern course, undoubtedly accounts for the much larger entry this year. Moreover the fact that both the men's national and women's national [illegible] Britishers has aroused enthusiasm in the weaker sex in no small degree, and determination to keep at least one national cup in this country for 1911.

It was the winning of the cup by Miss Campbell for the second time last year that brought about the discussion of how the national meetings should be held. There was a strong feeling in some sections of the country that only United States players should be allowed [illegible] of the national events held under the auspices of the United States Golf Association. This feeling subsided however, as was evidenced by the fact that Harold Hilton was allowed to play in the amateur championship at Apawamis, Rye, N. Y., this year.

Mrs. G. M. Martin of Tavistock, England, was finalist to Miss Campbell last year and was beaten 2 up and 1 to play in an 18-hole final match. The former player is not entered this year, and a strong outside factor is thus left out of the field. Miss Campbell, however, is capable of taking care of all the finer points, for last year she won the qualifying medal and clipped five strokes off the competitive record for the course, playing an 85. Moreover, in her match with Miss Mary Fownes, sister of the 1910 amateur champion, [illegible]

Mrs. R. H. Barlow is a player who has been going splendidly this year and will be among the favorites to defeat Miss Campbell as will Miss L. B. Hyde of New York [illegible] Springfield [illegible] Country Club here will play.

Without a doubt the championship this year should prove one of the best the country has ever had, not only from the fact that a large field is in play, but because the calibre of women's golf here has been steadily rising to such extent that it is not [illegible] Miss Campbell [illegible] the Robert Cox trophy [illegible] its own among [illegible] woman [illegible]

Play will start Monday [illegible] at nine o'clock. After Mrs. C. G. Fraser and Miss Louisa A. Wells, who are the first pair off, are four minutes away, the remainder of the field will follow at four minute intervals, starting in the following order:

Mrs. C. G. Fraser [illegible] and Miss Louisa A. Wells, The Country Club, Brookline.
Miss Margaret [illegible], Essex County Club, and Mrs. F. H. Rosenthal, [illegible] C. C.

THE NEW EXECUTIVE OF N. E. "AD" GOLFERS, JOHN SHEPARD, JR.

'AD MEN' GOLFERS CLOSE FIRST SEASON

John Shepard, Jr., Elected President for Coming Year.

The New England Advertising Golfers' Association closed its first year Thursday with a tournament at the Woodland Golf Club, Auburndale. There were about twenty-five members in attendance, including players from Providence, Springfield, Lowell and South Framingham.

R. M. Purvee won the low gross prize with 80. Charles F. Bacon finished even with bogey, securing the prize for this event and also getting possession of the new President's Cup for one year.

R. J. French, Joseph McGreenery and S. C. Lowe tied for the first and second net, and in the play-off R. J. French got first net and Joseph McGreenery the second net.

After the tournament the annual meeting of the Association was held. The President, R. R. Whitman, presided. John Shepard, Jr., was elected president for the coming year and George C. Dutton, vice-president. R. M. Purvee was re-elected secretary-treasurer, and the following executive committee was also chosen: W. L. Crocker, R. J. French, S. C. Lowe, O. W. Nelson and R. R. Whitman.

The New England Advertisers' Golfing Association was organized a year ago, and the first year has been remarkably successful. The membership is now about forty, composed of leading advertising men from all over New England.

Tournaments during the season have been held at Woodland, Brae Burn, Providence and South Framingham. For the next season Springfield and Brockton have invited the advertising men to hold events at those places.

Any merchant or manufacturer in New England advertising in newspapers, magazines, street cars or outdoor display, as well as all men doing the actual work of advertising, consisting of preparation or placing of copy, are eligible to the association.

It is desired to increase the membership this coming year, and those advertising golfers throughout New England who are interested can secure all information and application blanks from R. M. Purvee, secretary and treasurer, 201 Devonshire street, Boston, Mass.

Mr. Hobbs is now engaged in a Boston banking house.

The first article, which will be illustrated, will be printed in next Wednesday's AMERICAN. In this article the All American tackle will tell what qualities an American tackle will tell what qualities a tackle, and will also explain the different ways of playing the position.

Adventures of Harold Hangover

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

CHAPTER XLIX.

The season of 1911 was drawing to a close.

[illegible] were [illegible] them after [illegible]

Harold Hangover, the great Oshkosh pitcher, strode toward the Polo Grounds with a [illegible] light. Though not [illegible] over could think, and he was doing some deep thinking [illegible] leading to the great Brush stadium.

"My share of the receipts," he mused, "ought to be well up over two thousand dollars if the Giants win, and even if they lose I ought to get [illegible] hundred dollars. Pretty soft for me, pretty soft. [illegible] dollars I can go back to Oshkosh and hire a good attorney to get me out [illegible] of 'wir.' He was always a good father to me, no matter what [illegible] choose to say about him."

It was a beautiful Autumn afternoon, one of those [illegible] days that make aristocrats sniff the air, one of those [illegible] "Fine weather we're having, Sir." The grand [illegible] Giants, the grand bluffs that even tower [illegible] per tier of the mammoth enclosure, seemed to reach up as if [illegible] the sun smiled back as if in favor of [illegible] its clanging trolleys and its noisy elevated [illegible] the glorious orb that shines down on the [illegible]

"Even if we lose to the Athletics," [illegible] there [illegible] still a matter of fourteen hundred dollars waiting for me. [illegible] That's more than any old man earned [illegible] in ten years."

As the great Oshkosh pitcher neared the club house he [illegible] a friend of his in the first years of his glory as a minor league twirler.

"Hello, Red," was Harold's amiable greeting.

There was no response. The auburn-haired trainer, who had once been Harold's friend, kept on his way, ignoring the outstretched hand of our hero [illegible] that had pitched so many sneeze balls, [illegible]

Harold Hangover had been used to rebuffs even as a [illegible] the grocer, the butcher, the [illegible] all of these had once [illegible] garded him coldly when he had sauntered into their respective places of business and asked, in the [illegible] manner affected by children, "Ma wants to know, will you charge it?" But the rebuff given him [illegible] the friend of other years [illegible] sneer on the classic features of Ames—that was another matter. [illegible] shuddered and moved on toward the club house.

"Hello, Wiltse, old pal," was his next salute. "Where is Snod?"

"Up in the club house, dressing," was the short response. And the veteran southpaw walked on.

"Again!" exclaimed our hero. Something was in the air, that much was certain. Here were two of his old playmates, one after the other, treating him with cold contempt. Again he shuddered, as a Georgia cracker might shudder with ague.

"Hello, Devore," he said feebly, as a short, well-made athlete [illegible] into view, "how's Josh?"

"Hello to you," grunted Devore, and it was plain to be seen that he cared little or nothing for either the conversation or the company of the great pitcher from Wisconsin. And past Harold swept Devore.

By this time the ordinarily steel nerves of our hero were getting to resemble the nerves of Jeffries on the eve of the fight at Reno. Cold drops of [illegible] stood out on his slanting brow as long as they were able to stand [illegible] slide, and then they splashed feebly down onto his well-developed nose.

"By gravy!" he muttered, relapsing into the twang and diction of his forefathers. "By gravy!"

With this last exclamation on his lips, Harold Hangover entered the club house and sought out Manager McGraw.

"What seems to be the trouble, Mr. McGraw?" asked Harold.

"Nothing seems to be—it is," replied the manager of the Giants.

"The only reason I asked you," explained Harold Hangover, "was because I noticed a sort of coldness on the part of the other players. I can't understand it."

"Well, Harold, my boy," said McGraw, "it was this way. Some of the [illegible] afraid that you wanted to cut into the World's Series receipts. You know how players are—they didn't figure how you belonged when the cut-up came. [illegible] them," continued McGraw, smoothingly, "that they had misjudged you [illegible] that you were far too square a sport to ask for part of the World's Series [illegible] when you have played so few games with us after leaving the Highlanders. I [illegible] them that you didn't expect a cent. That is all, Mr. Hangover. Good-by."

Editor's Note—The final instalment of Harold Hangover's baseball adventures for the 1911 season will be in next Sunday's AMERICAN. It will tell how, after a game has been almost lost, our hero steps in at the urgent request of Manager McGraw and his Giants and saves the day.

FOOTBALL IN WEST TAKES A BIG BOOM

By WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

CHICAGO, OCT. 7.—Although the season cannot be said to be in full swing, interest in the game, especially in the central west, where it has been lagging since Michigan withdrew from the western conference, plainly shows the popular college sport has taken on a new lease of life, and unless all signs go amiss the West is certain to enjoy the most successful football season since 1905.

One reason for this is the number of intersectional contests which will be played. The eastern college graduate who resides in the West always jumps at an opportunity to see one of the eastern elevens in action and as Cornell and Pennsylvania come West this year to play Chicago and Michigan, respectively, these contests will be attended by large crowds and there will be a large number of former eastern college students in attendance.

In the West there is no team which at this stage of the season appears to have the conference title in its grasp. Minnesota, before its contest with Ames, which held the strong Gophers to a 5 to [illegible] score, was looked upon as the logical choice for the honor, but the [illegible] showing of Coach Williams' team [illegible] the stock of the big Northwest eleven several notches. Illinois and Wisconsin give every indication of having strong elevens, while Minnesota is likely to improve enough before it meets either Illinois or Wisconsin to win from the last two named teams.

Northwestern and Iowa will be stronger than in years, but it is hard to conceive of either team mustering enough strength to win from either Illinois or Wisconsin. Chicago, with only mediocre material, cannot be considered in a class with other members of the conference with the possible exception of Purdue. After enjoying one of the best years in its football history last season, Indiana, because of the loss of nine veterans, will not be strong, but it should be good enough to give its opponents close and hard fought matches.

QUARTERBACK BIG FOOTBALL FACTOR

By EARL SPRACKLING.

Captain of Brown University Eleven and 1910 All-American Quarterback.

I take [illegible] the quarterback is still the chief factor for a football team's success. With the new rules last year it was predicted that the quarterback would [illegible] his powers and become simply a back along with two halves and [illegible]

A test proved this wrong and the experience of the Yale team showed that the quarter must continue to be the brains of a team.

At the beginning of last season Howe of Yale was played at full [illegible] [illegible] forward passes [illegible]

Howe's work was poor and the [illegible] put Howe at quarter. [illegible] team at once [illegible] After the [illegible] Yale played real football.

The quarter [illegible] team [illegible] should know [illegible] weak points of his team [illegible] learn his opponents' strength and weakness. Which is another way of [illegible]

O'Flaherty, Harvard's quarter [illegible] years ago, was a wonder with [illegible] but he had a poor head. Wigglesworth [illegible] was weak on carrying [illegible] Wigglesworth got the [illegible] counts.

A team is guided by signals by the quarterback, and he should keep them [illegible] fooled forward, backward [illegible]

He should give them in a low, smooth [illegible] in a series of [illegible] The tones should [illegible] the diaphragm and not from the chest. The latter do not carry.

I have [illegible] quarterbacks shout a few [illegible] time. United action is better than speed if you can't have both. It is well to have a code word for players to shout when they do not understand the signal.

THE SOUTH MAKES A STRONG SHOWING

The Bulk of the Glidden Tour Entrants Come from Georgia and Florida.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 30.—As an evidence of the interest the South has taken in the 1911 Glidden tour, it is only necessary to note that of the 62 entries that had been recorded to Wednesday just 43 are from the States of Georgia, through which the tour passes, and Florida, in whose [illegible] it ends.

The entries that have come from these States are solely for the sport of the run and in recognition of the value of the event as a medium through which the agitation of good roads may be agitated. The Governor of Georgia and the Mayor of Atlanta, a Congressman from Florida and the Mayor of a [illegible] Florida town are among the men who have taken sufficient interest in the event to enter.

NEW MODELS ARE MOST ATTRACTIVE

The Long Line of Buick Cars, Pleasure and Commercial, Are Stylish and Serviceable.

The first of the 1912 Buick line have [illegible] great activity in the sales and demonstrating departments of the Buick Motor Company's Park square salesrooms may be taken as a criterion. The well-known reliability and efficiency of the Model "10" Buick Roadsters and Surreys has attracted many to their successors, the Models "34" and "35," and the combination of lower price with [illegible] more value has proved irresistible for many.

The 1912 Limousines also on exhibition are attracting their full share of attention and the praise bestowed upon them is well deserved. Every detail that can add to the comfort or convenience of passengers or driver has been taken care of, and the addition of fore-doors and the [illegible] windows in the front compartment give a finishing touch that is most pleasing.

The first of the 1912 Buick trucks have also been received, and although no radical changes have been made in the chassis, several refinements that tend to increase efficiency and which make for more economical operation are noticeable. Two very handsome panel body trucks finished in special colors are shown by the commercial department. One is finished in a rich shade of brown, with crimson striping, and the other in an exceedingly neat [illegible] gray. The bodies are roomy, and so constructed that they may be easily adapted for any line of business in which the delivery of loads up to 1,500 pounds is an [illegible]. The chassis and power plant is too well known to require comment.

Peerless Torpedo Models.

Deliveries are now being made by the Peerless Motor Car Company of their various chassis mounted with torpedo bodies. While these bodies are distinctively "torpedo," they conform to the general design that characterizes all 1912 Peerless bodies as an individual type of motor car superstructure.

The "40-Four," "48 Six," "60-Six" torpedoes seat six passengers, while the "38-Six" seats four. The folding seats close down out of sight and leave a straight unbroken parapet line.

NEW ROUTE FROM OCEAN TO OCEAN

The Trip from New York to San Francisco Was Made in 35 Days Without Difficulty.

One of the most successful transcontinental motor trips ever made from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast has just been completed by Thomas W. Wilby under the auspices of the Touring Club of America.

Mr. Wilby left New York on August 31 last, and completed the first stage of the journey last week when he reached San Francisco in about thirty-five days. Besides mapping out the most feasible route for every [illegible] of the journey and [illegible] the latest information regarding road conditions [illegible] State through which he passed, another object of the tour is to show how comfortable a long distance journey across the country may be accomplished [illegible].

That a trip of this sort need no longer be regarded as fraught with exceptional difficulties [illegible] Mr. Wilby was accompanied in his [illegible]

In addition to procuring the latest information on road conditions for this [illegible] also the more northerly route, which will be immediately available for motorists at the office of the Touring Club of America. Mr. Wilby was also appointed a special agent of the United States Office of Public Roads, and he will give an exhaustive report on the road conditions throughout the far West.

NEED OF CHANGE IN TIRE REPLACEMENT

A fact admitted by manufacturers and emphasized by truck owners is that there is one feature of motor truck equipment which has long needed expert attention, says F. F. [illegible] of the U. S. Tire Company.

In so far as the tires themselves are concerned [illegible] [illegible]

Under the [illegible] a good [illegible] [illegible] arranged. What is the result? The truck must be laid up while these mechanical details are being looked after [illegible] services. His delivery system is impaired in consequence.

There is another objectionable feature in connection with this system of making tire replacements [illegible] the bearings are apt to be improperly adjusted and the parts damaged. Unsatisfactory truck service follows and eventually the owner will have a large repair bill for a general overhauling of the auto mechanism.

Hupp Corporation.

Among the latest branches to be established in this city is that of the Hupp Corporation at No. [illegible] Boylston street, which [illegible] This company is to handle two lines of cars, namely, the R. C. H. gasoline car and the Hupp-Yeats [illegible] will be [illegible] considerable attention.

MOTOR RACING ON MILE DIRT TRACKS

The history of automobile racing on mile tracks, especially the gruesome record of fatalities of the past season, proves beyond a doubt that the mile-horse track is totally unfit for the staging of motor car races.

Racing automobiles have developed such speed that few [illegible] [illegible] the edges of these [illegible] courses. [illegible] [illegible] protest [illegible] press and the public, but from manufacturers engaged in racing and others who have the best interests of legitimate motor car racing at heart. The constant recurrence of these fatalities [illegible] the public to form the [illegible] racing is [illegible] when [illegible] and it is realized that unless some steps are taken to put an end to racing on these dangerous and unsuitable tracks [illegible] of automobile racing will [illegible] stopped, either through force of public opinion or by direct legislation.

Creates Good Impression.

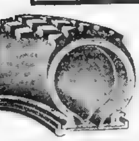
The Bergdoll "40" 1912 Model which has been on exhibition the past week at the salesroom of the Boston Agency, White, Ware & Leatherbee, 895 Boylston street, has created marked interest among [illegible] about Boston.

This car combines many of the most desirable features in modern motor car construction. The 4 x 6 motor used on this model has been received most favorably. The remarkable performance of the long stroke motors abroad and the lengthy tryout of representative foreign cars with [illegible] motor has led the Bergdoll Company to adopt it as a marked advance in motor construction. With our road [illegible] it is claimed the long stroke motor shows up to even [illegible] than on the smooth and well graded highways of the Continent.

No-Rim-Cut Tires

With Double-Thick, Non-Skid Treads

10% Oversize



Winter Tires

With Double-Thick Treads—

Deep-Cut Blocks—

Countless Edges and Angles

The most efficient non-skid device ever employed.

A separate tread, immensely wear-resisting, vulcanized to the regular tread.

The Ideal Tire

The control of this tire, in the past two years, has increased our tire sales by 500 per cent.

Over 700,000 have been sold to date. And the flood-like demand now compels a capacity of 3,800 per day.

All because this is the one practical tire which can't rim-cut. And because it is made 10 per cent oversize, adding 25 per cent to the average mileage.

The Added Tread

Since 1908 our experts have worked to add to this tire a perfect Non-Skid tread. The final result is now pictured here.

Forty formulas were tested for resistance to wear in selecting the one for this tread.

The extra tread was then made just as thick as the regular. It was made up of deep-cut blocks, which present to the road surface countless edges and angles.

The blocks widen at the base, so the strain is spread.

After three years of tests we are ready to say that here is utter perfection in a non-skid tire. Nothing else is so efficient, so durable, so economical.

Three Savings

The No-Rim-Cut tire with the Non-Skid tread offers these three advantages:

A double-thick tread—

A tire that can't rim-cut—

A tire 10 per cent oversize.

This new tread, in addition, reduces danger of puncture by 30 per cent.

Thousands have proved that to insist on these tires means to cut tire bills in two.

A Buick Statement

All Motor Cars Look Attractive in Advertisements, but —Upon Close Inspection — Very Few in the Moderate Price Class Have the Sturdy Real True Worth That Is Characteristic of the 1912 Buick Construction

It is the kind That Cannot Be Described in Print

The experienced buyer does not attempt to make his selection from advertisements—nor does he permit them to bias his judgment.

He takes into consideration the past record of the company whose product appeals to him.

He gives little time to new and untried models that are obviously brought out at cheap prices to meet competition.

He rejects the offerings of factories or agents whose financial resources are not ample to assure their permanency and whose equipment in this section does not bespeak their ability to take prompt care of their customers in time of need.

Service—as well as attractiveness, silent flexibility of power, complete equipment, thorough attention to details, up-to-the-minute design and perfect mechanical construction—is an important requirement.

83,000 Buick Cars of various models dating from 1904—3,500 in Massachusetts alone—is a record to which we point with no little pride. And not one of them worn out or discarded.

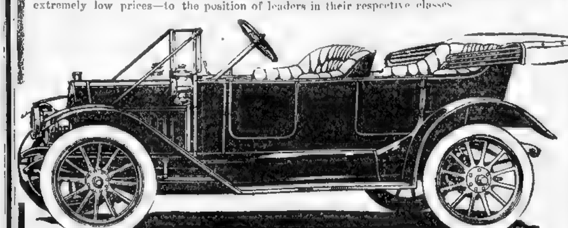
The Model "10" Buicks of previous years need no description. Every motorist knows that sturdier or more reliable cars were not built.

1912 Models "34" and "35"

Improved editions, so to speak, of the Model "10" retain the features that contributed to the success of that world-famed car and have, in addition, numerous improvements, such as a chrome nickel steel, three speed selective type sliding gear transmission, concealed and protected shifting and brake levers; full fore-doors, etc., and refinements that entitle them—at their extremely low prices—to the position of leaders in their respective classes.



At $850 for the Roadster and $1000 for the Above Touring Car NO Other Company Can Do More Than Advertise—They Cannot Prove.

THE COMMER TRUCK AT NEWBURYPORT

The Commer Truck

Under exactly the same conditions the Commer Truck, with a 5-ton load, made this run with 19 gallons of gasoline and 3 pints of oil.

"Trucks" vs. the Commer Truck

What a Commer Truck Did Thursday Over Boston Roads

On Thursday last, we put a Commer Truck over the stiff 120-mile route used last fall by the trucks in the Boston American Reliability Run. The Commer carried a 5-ton load.

The run was under the supervision of Mr. Kerrison, the same man who supervised the Reliability Run. Conditions as to road and load were exactly duplicated.

At the finish of the run it was found that the Commer Truck with its 5-ton load had consumed but 19 gallons of gasoline and 3 pints of lubricating oil, or 6.37 miles per gallon of gasoline and 40 miles per pint of oil.

Now note the vital significance of the gasoline and oil consumption in the case of the Commer Truck versus the best truck that carried a 5-ton load in the Reliability Run.

Figuring on a 200,000 mile basis, for that is the service you have a right to expect from a Commer Truck, the comparative costs show this astonishing difference:

SERVICE

We have two of the largest Service and Maintenance Depots in New England where we shall give free weekly inspection of all Commer Trucks

THE COMMER TRUCK

625 gallons of oil at 50c	312.50
	$5,336.13

THE OTHER TRUCK

3,125 gallons of oil at 50c	1,562.50
	$10,705.38

Commer saving . . $5,369.25

or enough to buy a new Commer Truck should one wear out at the end of 200,000 miles of service. But though many Commer Trucks have done 200,000 miles of service and though many Commer Trucks are seven years old, NOT ONE COMMER TRUCK HAS EVER WORN OUT.

★ ★

Commer Trucks will haul your goods at less cost than any other truck in the world, and our Engineering Department stands ready to prove this in your service and under your personal supervision.

arrangement to make the most use of it. If I lived upon that beautiful basin or convenient to it I would put my speed boats upon it in preference to any other body of water in the Metropolitan district.

The AMERICAN'S effort for a wider use of the basin meets with my full approval.

Mayor Moore's Praise.

Mayor Eugene H. Moore of Melrose said:

The AMERICAN deserves great praise for the manner in which it is popularizing the Charles River Basin, and the plans it has mapped out for the observance of Columbus Day night, by affording the people an opportunity to enjoy a motor boat show, is a step in the right direction. Such affairs conducted in this way by a powerful newspaper, have opened the eyes of the people to the fact that the basin is an ideal spot for races, etc. The future of the basin as a location for open air functions is assured.

Somerville Is Pleased.

Mayor Charles A. Burns of Somerville said:

"An undertaking such as outlined by the AMERICAN has a great deal to do in bringing to the attention of the people the delectation which obtains in viewing regatta, accruing to the city water sports on the Charles River basin. By advertising the splendor of the basin as a scene in which aquatic sports may be developed there, the AMERICAN is developing an enthusiasm that becomes contagious and reacts in such a way that the people will look favorably to other water shows on the basin from year to year.

Praise from Newton.

Mayor Charles A. Hatfield of Newton said:

The Charles River Basin is a magnificent water front. The people ought to be, and no doubt are, proud of such a place. I have received an invitation to attend the motor boat show to be held there on Columbus Day, maybe will attend and get a close range idea of the height of the fun for which the AMERICAN is responsible. I am glad the AMERICAN is popularizing the place and going forward in other undertakings giving a sporting impetus to the movement started and forwarded by such a enterprising newspaper.

Mayor Taylor Approves.

Mayor Charles F. Taylor of Medford said:

I certainly approve of anything which will make for a larger use of this magnificent body. To me it is incomprehensible that the citizens of the cities adjacent to it require any encouragement to which hundreds of motor boats are expected to take part, which will be a beautiful sight, and which will be essential to the success of the Motor Boat Show to be held in the Basin, AMERICAN Aug. 10 to 19.

Entries will be received at the office of the AMERICAN, 1 Park square, Boston, up to 10 o'clock on the morning of the day of the race. There will be no entrance fee.

Is Ideal Location.

Mayor William P. Connery of Lynn said:

I hope the city of Lynn will be largely represented in the motor boat parade on the Charles River Basin that I know will be a success. Lynn owns some of the finest motor boats on the coast, and Lynn men should bring home a number of prizes. It is quite a distance from Lynn to the Charles River Basin, but I think there will be a large gathering from Lynn to see the water carnival. I enjoyed that so much last year, and I am looking forward to such an event from the point of view of a spectator.

Impartial Judges.

The judges will be connected with no boat club, but will be selected from the ranks of well known yachtsmen, who are not interested in the contest. Mr. Parnell of the Boston Herald, Mr. Fitzgerald of the Boston Post and Mr. Burgess of the Boston Globe will be asked to act as judges.

Say to Be in Contest.

South Boston is represented among others by the well known motor boat Say owned by F. W. Gilkey, of 161 Dorchester street. She is 28 feet long, has a horsepower and has an enviable record for speed.

Among other well known power boats which have been entered in the contest are the Anabel, owned by W. A. Thomas of Highland park, 30 feet in length and a 6 cylinder 75 horsepower engine; the Say, owned by F. W. McFarland of 1503 Dorchester avenue, 28 feet long with a 4 cylinder engine; the Rose C., owned by H. H. Kalloped of 1075 Boylston street, Brighton, 24 feet long with a 4 cylinder engine; the Edith, owned by E. A. Wentworth of 1 Bigelow street, Brighton, 24 feet in length.

The various yacht clubs about Boston are not well represented in the list of entries as yet, but it is said that there will be a big fleet of yachts entering the contest.

On the other hand the parade is open to all motor boats, and it is expected that a large number of entries who do not belong to any of the yacht clubs will be received.

All entries which have already been received are from motor boats owned by members of the Boston Yacht club, Squantum Yacht club, Chelsea Yacht club, Whitehead Yacht club, Charles River Basin Motor Boat Club and numerous others.

Classes of Entries.

Prizes will be awarded to the most attractive appearing motor boats in the following classes:

Cabin boats, 20 to 35 in length.

Cabin boats, 35 feet in length and over.

Power boats, under 20 feet.

Speed boats, any size.

Best decorated motor boat.

Prizes will be awarded to each of the successful entries which have already been received. Any motor boats which desire to win this prize should enter in the parade.

All of these boats will carry a number prominently displayed on the bow of the boat so as to be visible from the stands and those in craft in the parade.

Anything to enter their boats in any of the classes will write to Central Navy Yard, Boston, AMERICAN Yacht Club, giving name and address and class in which your boat is qualified to enter.

There is no entrance fee required for any race except their motor boats. There is no age and competition for prizes absolutely free of charge.

As the boats have to pass under bridges an allowance for two feet clearance is made. This is a safe height to allow, although the measurement is figured in a good margin.

Form at 7:30 P. M.

The parade will form between the Cottage Farm and Harvard Bridges at 7:30 p. m. Contestants are expected to be in line and ready for the start. The procession will start at 8 o'clamp and will proceed slowly down the Boston side of the river under the shore, where thousands of people will be assembled to watch.

Seven lights burning on the bridges will signify the arches to be used by the procession as it passes under Harvard and the West Boston bridges. At the Dam embankment the procession will continue along, maintaining a distance of little more than twenty feet, until the Cambridge side is reached. The parade will proceed on the Cambridge side until it is well up toward the Cottage Farm bridge, when it will disband.

Sailing [illegible] motor boats not entered in the power [illegible] regattas, etc., the owners [illegible] pants of which wish to view the parade, will be obliged to remain in the middle of the Basin, giving clear lanes on the Cambridge [illegible] Boston sides for the progress [illegible] It matter whether bridge and [illegible]

MAYORS OF GREATER BOSTON LAUD WATER CARNIVAL MOVEMENT

The Mayors of the cities surrounding Boston have added to the words of praise and encouragement spoken by Mayor Fitzgerald upon the Water Carnival and Motor boat parade and the AMERICAN publishes to-day stories such by the Mayor of Cambridge, Lynn, Revere, Somerville, Everett, Medford, and Mine

Mayor J. Edward Barry of Cambridge said:

Let us have a motor boat parade which will eclipse anything ever seen in this part of the country. The Charles River Basin is one of the most beautiful stretch of water in the world and its location between two large cities make it accessible to all.

I am in favor of this sort of observance of Columbus Day. Columbus crossed the Atlantic in a frail ship no bigger than some of the motor boats which will be in the parade, and it is fitting that his day should be celebrated by a boating carnival.

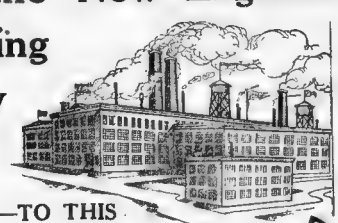
See the Epoch-Making Inventions That Have Transformed the New England Shoe-Making Industry



FROM THIS— —TO THIS

The United Shoe Machinery Company Is a Massachusetts Industry

It has a great factory at Beverly, which is one of the finest factories in the world, employing 5000 people, working under ideal conditions, with a weekly pay-roll of over $75,000.

It makes over 300 different kinds of machines, all used in the manufacture of shoes, many of which are sold outright, and most of which can be either leased or purchased, as the shoe manufacturer may prefer.

Sixty of these machines, which are used in the manufacture of every high-grade Goodyear Welt Shoe, may be seen in actual operation daily and nightly at the Chamber of Commerce Fair in the Mechanics Building on Huntington Avenue.

The shoes made on these machines at the Fair are women's Goodyear Welt Shoes of high quality.

The shoe manufacturer who leases all these costly and complicated machines in making women's Goodyear Welt Shoes pays for their use less than 4½ cents per pair of shoes.

By visiting the Fair you can learn exactly how this payment is divided among the different machines, and the terms upon which the shoe manufacturer enjoys the use of the machines.

You will learn that of all the shoes made in the United States over two-thirds are of other types than Goodyear Welt, and on these two-thirds the Company would receive less than 1 1-3 cents per pair if all its machines were used in their manufacture

You will realize something of the service which the Company has rendered the great shoe manufacturing industry of New England and will learn how the industry has expanded here since the Company was formed twelve years ago.

You will find experts in constant attendance who will gladly answer your requests for information and explain each operation

I DEVELOPED MY BUST

To the Man Who Has Quit Trying!

By HERBERT KAUFMAN

(Copyright, 1911, by Herbert Kaufman)

Ten fingers, one backbone, a whole mind and a doubt-proof heart are all that any man ever needed to do anything.

Why are you holding back? Why do you throw up the sponge? Why do you whine while there's hope to win?

It's always the right moment to make good. Age is no hindrance if your ability hasn't grown gray along with your hair.

If at any time in your life you had reason to think you could achieve something bigger, it's now. No generation ever enjoyed more privileges or suffered fewer restrictions.

Yesterdays never are as wonderful as tomorrows. The world keeps on. It progresses—it doesn't backslide.

Every year the number of trades increases—professions multiply—there are new ways, better ways of doing old things—shorter paths to old goals—higher wages for lighter labors—enthusiasm constantly finds wider range —ideas swing in a broader scope, and Imagination's wings beat with a bolder stroke.

What you regret can't compare with what you can get. Make a dare and seize your share.

You may have whatever your performance deserves. The only patent on possession is merit. If you're the better man, your inferiors must give way and give up to you.

Forget what you were—forget what you had, and come forward. Hope lies beyond the next hill—not behind the last.

Fears are far worse handicaps than years. If you are down, it's because you are down-hearted. If you are standing still, it's because you had rather hang back than hang fast.

You're afraid. You've lost your nerve. You simply won't try. Your mind runs to the past. You've made a rosary of your disappointments and sit counting your lost opportunities.

You can't long yourself along. You can't reclaim one dead hour. Your downfall wasn't advertised nearly so much as you seem to think.

A hundred million of us who never heard of you and never saw you are prepared to accept you at achievement valuation and pay market price if you can deliver.

You are an ass if you think that we all recollect your name and your shame and your blame. You're a fool if you think that all humanity has entered into a vast conspiracy of memory against you.

If truth be told, at no time in your obscure existence have more than a hundred or so persons ever known of you —nonentities aren't prominent. There are so many people and so few amount to anything—the struggle for existence is so hard—the fight for daily bread so tense and so many submit to the struggle, that we don't bother to recall failures. It's as much as a lusty brain can do to keep track of all the noted folks.

Come now—piece together the remnants of your self-respect—search for a spark in the ashes of your old ambitions and push out into the rising tide—it's a mighty bad wreck that can't supply enough timbers for a raft.

Rip the crepe off your face and face a fresh career. Even if you do repeat your defeat, you can't sink farther than the bottom, and you're there now.

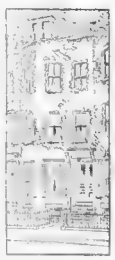
Auction Sale of Parkman Properties

By the City of Boston

Tuesday, Oct. 10, 1911, at Ten O'Clock

At the Real Estate Exchange, Kilby and Water Sts.

Buy at Auction — A Typical Bargain — Properties To Be Sold



Realty purchased in the auction market is the most secure investment, because its value is guaranteed by the highest authority. It is submitted after wide publicity to free and open competition, and the widest market is uncovered. The resulting prices must be honest. There can be nothing artificial about them. They are accepted by the courts and by experienced students of realty as bona fide and they form the correct index of real market value. The purchaser is assured his full money's worth.

PIANO SALE

DON'T PAY TRUST PRICES

FOR ANY MAKE PIANO

I have been telling the people for years that it is not necessary to pay luxury prices to the Piano Trust for pianos. A piano is no longer a luxury. I have taken it out of that class. I have made it as easy to secure a piano (by reducing the price and making the terms of purchase) as it is to secure any other household necessity.

I have educated the public on piano values to such an extent that the ... can now buy a piano for much less than ... three years ago. I am in receipt of letters daily from all over New England, ... the Piano Trust, and I am selling more pianos at lower prices than ever before. It pays to protect the public.

Don't buy any make piano till you see me

BIG COTTON CROP WEIGHS ON MARKET

Last Two Months' Decline Caused by the Selling of the South Alone.

By EDWARD LOW RANLETT.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The cotton market is under pressure of the largest crop on record and heavy sales for the short account from time to time have caused depression. Bulls have tried to sustain the market at periods when reactions were overdue, only to have these commitments sold out on general weakness which had no relation to speculative operations.

The greatest bear in the market has been the bale, and selling by the South has been alone responsible for the decline in the last two months. No bull movement, however powerful [illegible] which have passed through the [illegible] since the picking season began.

[illegible] spinners have been enormous buyers. Exports are largely in excess of last year, but even this was not sufficient to take the surplus offerings of Southern [illegible].

Estimates Reach 16,000,000 Bales.

Crop estimates have ranged recently between 14,750,000 and 16,000,000 bales. It is not contended that the crop is one of late growth or development. Texas is expected to [illegible] on its early growth and the cotton now open on the plant for its [illegible]. But Texas planted less than [illegible] the total acreage of the crop [illegible]

[illegible] report issued by the [illegible] was much more [illegible] in showing a loss [illegible] and that crop prospects during September, as [illegible] normal percentage of [illegible]

[illegible] two government reports.

Heavy Covering by Shorts.

The week's trading has included the [illegible] of an enormous short interest [illegible] at much higher prices. On Tuesday, October contracts sold at 9.74, December 9.87, January 9.71, March 9.86 and May at 10 cents. These were the [illegible] levels recorded on the present crop. A covering movement of important [illegible] sufficient to cause an advance of 25 to 30 points followed during the two succeeding days. The market was due for a rally, it was claimed and Southern spot holders were apparently working for an upturn. There was no genuine support, however.

[illegible]

The crop [illegible] would not work a grave injury to the [illegible]. Weather conditions have been ideal for [illegible]

ACTIVITY PLANNED FOR IN COPPER LIST

By E. A. WILKINS.

STATE STREET, Oct. 7.—The sharp advance in the Calumet & Hecla merger company stocks was not entirely maintained during the forenoon's two-hour session, yet coppers showed more strength than for many weeks. [illegible] toward a better market for these securities. First the cutting off of the Calumet & Hecla [illegible] then the declaration of an initial dividend of $2 on Ahmeek and the resumption of dividend payments by the Utah Consolidated [illegible] expected resignation of F. H. Broughton [illegible] straws that point which way the wind blows. It would not seem as though these events would transpire unless the principals could see well into the future.

A glimmer of optimism is appearing on [illegible] have their good days and their poor [illegible] but in the final summing up the former [illegible]

[illegible] is aided and abetted to some extent by the lack of public interest in the market, but does not accomplish much. The [illegible] and no new factors have appeared.

President's Trust-Busting Tour.

[illegible] strike on the Western railroads is waning for lack of public sympathy and the situation seems to be a mending one at the present time.

[illegible] as improving and the cause for present [illegible] to a peanut banana and as far as having any effect on the stock market. The market is an excellent trading one for the nimble trader, and brokers have been enabled to corral a few more commissions than of late.

Merger Abandonment Helps Coppers.

The abandonment of the Calumet & Hecla merger plan brings a rift in the [illegible]

[illegible] Very few copper shares are [illegible] technically the [illegible] upward while. It would not be surprising if something of this kind happened before long. Boston brokers have cleaned house pretty thoroughly and are planning for active times ahead [illegible]

$24,268 Owed Western Union by Politicians

President Vail Admits Cutting Off Republican and Democratic Debts For 1876 and 1880.

President Theodore N. Vail, of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, who is also president of the Western Union Telegraph Company, confirmed the statement made some days ago that the Western Union had carried political [illegible] as assets in its surplus account.

Mr. Vail's prompt admission is in line with his writing off from the Western Union books of some $13,000,000 of worthless assets. The amount of these [illegible] entered as such on the books of the company, is small and, according to President Vail, they are as follows:

"November, 1876, to March, 1877, Republican and Democratic Committees, accounts, $6,203.56.

"November, 1880, to June, 1882, Democratic National Committee, 1880 [illegible] on account of services $18,064.04."

It is very unusual for a corporation to [illegible] contributions in [illegible] usually they are made [illegible] "legal expenses" or [illegible]

[illegible] the differences between giving [illegible] campaign committee or giving [illegible] in services that are not [illegible]

The exposure is valuable to investors as proving that under the administration of President Vail the surplus of Western Union is a surplus and not a deficit. The size of the political contributions is immaterial. It is the principal that counts.

It is fortunate that President Vail believes in publicity, for without his prompt announcement of the size of these items [illegible] would have been justified in believing [illegible] represented a very large [illegible] written off. The [illegible] was revealed by the [illegible] and not by outsiders or [illegible] shows that Western Union [illegible] new and better days. [illegible] years old [illegible] he is one of the [illegible] business men in the world.

Brokers' Views

H. A. Brown & Co.—There seems to be [illegible] railway strikes that were feared have turned out to be of no consequence. There is a minor war between Italy and Turkey, but as the latter is not in a position to defend the territory in dispute and the powers have refused to come to her aid, the financial markets have paid little attention to it. There is also ground for believing that a saner condition of public sentiment is gradually coming into being in this country. This, after all, is the main factor in the situation and should be watched closely, for it will guide the large interests in their market movements. We have harvested fair crops of grains and a bumper crop of cotton, money is easy and general business is far better than one could be [illegible] rules in Wall Street and State Street.

[illegible] an appalling volume of depressing [illegible] was hailed as an indication [illegible] dustry would but emulate the excellent example of James J. Hill and give audible expression to their optimistic opinions, now stifled under a cloak of conservatism, they would be doing a sorely needed service. For after all the majority of financial interests resemble sheep in their desire to defer to the initiative of others more capable or self-assertive. Without a bell-wether aggressiveness is lacking.

DULNESS IN STOCKS AS THE WEEK ENDS

Only Two Issues Hold Attention Among Wall Street Brokers

By THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Stocks were dull throughout the session to-day, only two issues attracting attention. These were American Beet Sugar and Allis Chalmers bonds. Stock of the Beet Sugar Company advanced sharply to within a fraction [illegible] reached new low [illegible] 2 and the [illegible]

[illegible] sharp advance in sterling exchange [illegible] another rise in the Bank of England rate for the coming week. The [illegible] bank rate is due primarily to the enormous volume of American cotton [illegible]

[illegible] Sherman Anti-Trust law against the bankers who publicly conspired to advance the price of coffee and printed proof of their conspiracy in the shape of advertisements in the newspapers is not forgotten by Wall Street.

The investigation under way by Congress will compel the Department of Justice to take some action, for, however laudable may be the business enterprise [illegible] there is little doubt of its illegality.

Says Strike Has Failed.

The Harriman properties were quiet throughout the week owing to the strike on the system. The strike has already failed although it is still in progress. [illegible] they are violating the Sherman anti-trust law.

Great expectations were raised over a dividend immediately on American Beet Sugar common, but readers of this column have bought and are holding Beet Sugar stock on the definite promise of a dividend at the rate of 4 per cent. some time in the calendar year 1911. There is no promise that it will be declared on any particular date, but it will be declared in 1911. MORGAN CENSORS STOCK PLUNGERS

Great Financier Scores Frick for His Part in Bear Raid

By BOERSIANER.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—When [illegible] for big [illegible] to operate in the stock market. On the first [illegible] brought the answer [illegible] never. [illegible] instances [illegible] when the securities of a company are [illegible] is perfectly proper [illegible] for the custodian of a corporation to protect its credit and standing by supporting the values on 'Change. And if they are not permitted to do so by the charter then the officers [illegible] take it upon themselves to resort to protective measures. In the case of the United States Steel Corporation officers are allowed broad discretionary powers by the incorporated articles. They may buy and sell the company's shares and bonds at any time. They are privileged to convert bonds into stocks and vice versa.

J. P. Morgan's Idea.

This was J. P. Morgan's idea, and [illegible] advantage has been [illegible] phrase in the charter. The preferred [illegible] was reduced by $250,000,000 [illegible] the 7 per cent. [illegible] 5 per cent. fixed indebtedness.

Many a time the common as well as the preferred has been maintained [illegible] stress on the [illegible] company's treasury.

Yet Morgan draws a strict distinction between [illegible] the company's account [illegible] directorship [illegible] loyalty in periods of [illegible]

How far his principle is carried [illegible] was exemplified by the disposal of Heinrich Conried. Conried was the manager of the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York and had been at the head of the organization for years; had performed his difficult duties apparently to the satisfaction of his wealthy board of directors, of which Morgan was a member.

Cites Conreid Case.

In the panic of 1907 Conried lost control of himself. He became the loudest claimant in the line of depositors ranged on the front of one of the New York trust companies where he had $175,000 of his own money deposited. [illegible]

Morgan heard of Conried's dangerous [illegible] conduct and remembered it. [illegible] Mr. Morgan found fault with Conried's part in the Metropolitan Opera House. In a very short time Conried was deposed. Opera in New York lives by the sufferance of the wealthy class. Conried [illegible] point when he thought [illegible]

Another example, closer to national finance, is H. C. Frick. The last week there percolated to the street rumor of a serious dissention between Morgan and Frick. The former is said to have very [illegible] censured the latter for taking a [illegible] part in the bear campaign, especially in street stock.

Many a rising financier has been excluded from the Morgan directories by his speculative proclivities.

BOARD AGAINST INCREASE.

Reason for Failure to Increase Southern Railway Dividend.

There is no good reason for stating that the failure of Southern Railway directors to declare a dividend of 2 per cent at their meeting a few days ago was not due to the belief that the road's earnings and finances did not warrant a higher rate at this time. A few days prior to the meeting, when talk of further activities of the government against corporations was at its height [illegible] interest in the company said to us. "In view of recent developments, which need not be specified, the board may decide that a 2 per cent. dividend payment at this time is inadvisable," and it now appears that these developments to which he referred were the factors which weighed against the increased rate.

WHEAT OPERATORS HOLD GREAT CROP

Chicago Holds World's Largest Stock to Reap Reward of High Prices

By PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—Chicago can boast [illegible] largest stock of wheat not only [illegible] in the world. This wheat is being carried by people with ample financial backing and with ample backbone.

At one time the losses on this big wad of breadstuffs was enormous, but the price [illegible] was a great deal higher than the low levels of a month or so ago.

It would be an impossibility to locate [illegible] bear in the Western [illegible] enough money to make [illegible] against the present bull longs. All of the big speculators in the West may be seen on the bull side, or if they are not actively engaged in the market, they are not fighting the leaders and [illegible]

First Run of New Wheat.

With the first run of new wheat out of the way in the Northwest, and when [illegible] pretty well marketed [illegible] of conditions will be [illegible] among the farmers but [illegible] country elevator concerns of [illegible]. They will refuse to [illegible] the case [illegible] and those [illegible] grain will be obliged [illegible] millions of [illegible] their hurry in [illegible] before the treaty [illegible] United States and Canada [illegible] grain world believed that [illegible] party of [illegible] successful in the late [illegible] of this opinion the [illegible] is down to a low [illegible] the fear of the average trader [illegible] down deeply into the [illegible] known manipulators [illegible] Chicago [illegible] against the wheat crop [illegible] West and Northwest [illegible] at a standstill [illegible] Summer and Fall. The [illegible] wheat has been dull [illegible] but in corn and oats [illegible] fairly active on Eastern [illegible]

Canada's Enormous Crop.

While Canada has raised an enormous crop of wheat this year, the losses up there will doubtless surpass anything ever will be remembered that a great many heard of in a grain growing country. If farmers in our own Northwest and as far South as Iowa sold their high priced lands and bought cheaper farms in western Canada. This crop year is the first one for many of them and with the losses sensational [illegible] are likely to cross the [illegible] take up their stand in Uncle Sam's country.

The government crop report will make its appearance on Monday next and it is likely to prove a [illegible] document on corn. According to a report issued the past week by an accepted authority of Chicago, the [illegible] was shown over the entire corn belt since the report of last month was issued. Rains have been almost [illegible] over the corn country. Losses have been heavy in consequence and a great deal of poor corn will be seen, even [illegible] change for cooler and brighter weather is witnessed. The December corn is held here by strong people in the belief that there will be enough of this cereal to meet deliveries. Cash sales of corn are liberal from day to day with the [illegible] buyer.

There is a large open interest in the oats market at Chicago and on every dip in prices the strong arm is placed under the structure and any sensational break is checked. The cash trade in oats has been large for the East, the principal buyers.

Provisions are now on debateable ground with the bears in the majority. The situation in the hog market continues to control prices of the manufactured products and the run of hogs continues big from week to week.

English Hingham Gives New Hingham a Rock

"Hands Across the Sea" Ceremony Tomorrow

T[illegible] get the [illegible] site too, [illegible] of [illegible] English [illegible] and thereby hangs the story of how Hingham is going to observe the [illegible] of things—"hands across the sea," "blood is thicker than water," and so on, for the [illegible] is the gift of Old Hingham, in [illegible] of what you choose to call it, on the South Shore. For centuries the boulder was lying [illegible] u[illegible] to build a memorial to its first set[illegible] be [illegible] be a good token to send along across the water.

HINGHAM MEMORIAL TOWER.

Ambassador Bryce (at the top) will present the famous boulder from Hingham in England to Hingham in Massachusetts to-morrow. [illegible] Governor Long lives in Hingham. He and Mr. Hersey are on the committee planning the erection of the memorial tower.

Present Stone To-morrow.

So they crated it up and several months ago it arrived. Part of the time since it has been in storage in Boston, and more recently has been stored away in Hingham, its covering remaining intact. To-morrow afternoon it will be carried over to the State Armory building in the town, to be filed away as the chief exhibit at the big celebration to-morrow night.

On the surface it really does look like a lot of fuss to make over a mere stone, but just remember that behind its good name, Hingham has more than 275 years of great history, and the presentation of the stone to-morrow is a big step towards the realization of the project of Hingham's land working [illegible] erect a suitable [illegible] to the memory of the first settlers in the town.

The occasion of giving over the stone will be a memorable one, for there will be in attendance several men known in national and international halls of fame. There will be Rt. Hon. James Bryce, British Ambassador at Washington, who will present the boulder on behalf of the English Hingham. Walter Hersey, chairman of the selectmen of Massachusetts Hingham, will accept for the town. For the memorial committee, William L. Gifford [illegible] will [illegible] A reception to Ambassador Bryce will [illegible] the [illegible] to receive it.

Seventy-Five-Foot Shaft.

The memorial in itself is something unique and worth being put up in so historic a town as Hingham. It will be a "Tower and a Peal of Bells," as the committee has described it. The tower is to be a seventy-five foot shaft, with the belfry and chimes at the top. This design was picked out because Hingham, first of all, believes in building things that will be useful, and on occasions when the tintinnabulation of sweet-voiced bells is appropriate, as on the holidays, the old tower can ring out the [illegible] the townspeople. Thus in the long [illegible] a memorial will be what it [illegible] perpetual reminder to [illegible] nothing of every day value as well.

[illegible] construction has not yet [illegible]. The cost will be $15,000, and [illegible] the hustling committee has funds [illegible] than $1,500 of that amount, and [illegible] after more contributions. The [illegible] already been cleared on the site [illegible] "First Parish" on land ad[illegible] Hingham Meeting House [illegible] Burying Ground where [illegible] are buried. The [illegible] oldest place of [illegible] country, having [illegible].

[illegible] vantage point on a low hill in the centre of the town's activity, the tower will throw the sound of its bells over an area of six miles in diameter, which will include the harbor and the more thickly populated portions of Hingham.

Planned Memorial Three Years Ago.

The memorial idea was started about three years ago, the plan originating with Rev. Louis C. Cornish, rector of the First Parish. No sooner had the minister talked it over with other leaders [illegible] town than they quickly seized upon the suggestion, which soon resulted in the organization of an anniversary committee, with as head the movement to erect a memorial [illegible] the Summer of last year upon the 27[illegible] anniversary of the founding of the town.

The committee was made up of prominent men representing the town at large, the First Parish and others representing Hingham's sons who had gone away to blaze their careers elsewhere.

This was the committee:

For the town, Ira G. Hersey, Francis H. Lincoln, Hon. John D. Long, former Governor of the State, Walter Hersey, [illegible]; Walter T. Jones and William L. Foster, selectmen of the town.

For the First Parish: Rev. Louis C. Cornish, the rector; William L. Gifford and Frederick E. Newell.

Representing Hingham families living away from the town: Hon. John L. Bates, another former Governor of the State, Professor [illegible] Norton of Harvard, who [illegible] whose name is [illegible] committee, Hon. [illegible] of Philadelphia, W[illegible] secretary of the Old Dartmouth Historical Society; and Dr. Samuel A[illegible] Society.

Sent Literature Broadcast.

[illegible] that the committee members saw [illegible] Hingham people in the town and those who had gone away, were canvassed, until the memorial literature had gone from one end of the country to the other. The responses piled in. To date there have been [illegible], all of whose names will [illegible] and kept in the tower for all [illegible].

[illegible] first settlers came many years [illegible] they, too, were anxious and willing [illegible], and two years ago came the offer [illegible] old mount[illegible] crossed the ocean to accept, and [illegible] old town outdid itself to show him that old Hingham's latchstrings always hung outside the doors for new Hingham's children.

The town across the sea followed the [illegible]. This was a crown [illegible] of the bell that had hung in Old Hingham's bell tower for seven centuries and memories of which the first settlers must have brought with them to the shores of America. Later on the Mother Town came across with a third present—this was a panel out of the ceiling of the Old Hingham Church. The [illegible] staple and panel will find conspicuous resting places in the tower, and will be marked with bronze tablets suitably inscribed.

The stone was originally planned for the cornerstone of the [illegible]. The committee's idea now is to place it in one of the four walls, or in the memorial chamber, with a bronze tablet.

Dedication Next Spring.

The tower will [illegible] twenty feet square at the [illegible] gently tapering toward the top [illegible] story of the tower will be a belfry [illegible] feet square, with louvres on all four sides and surmounted by a pyramidal slate roof. Under the belfry is the high ringing-chamber with its long narrow windows. Below this is the committee room, and on the ground floor is the memorial room in which the [illegible].

The exterior of the tower is designed in Dutch brick and is rigidly simple in its general outline, depending for its richness upon carefully studied panels and vertical ribs and the superficial decoration. William Roger Greeley, graduate of Tech and associated with the office of R. Clipston Sturgis, is the architect. The dedication of the tower is expected to take place some time next Spring.

During their visit Ambassador and Mrs. Bryce will be entertained by Rev. Mr. Cornish and Mrs. Cornish in their home, which is in itself one of the historic houses in the town having been built in 1650 and having served for many years as the town's oldest tavern.

The Program.

Decorations in the Armory hall to-morrow night will be very elaborate. Arthur W. Young is the chairman of the committee in charge of this feature. Mr. Nash is chairman of the music committee, and associated with him are Mrs. S. Henry Hooper, Mrs. Alexander W. Rich, Henry W. Cushing and Charles E. Downey. Captain Freeman Hinckley is chairman of the general arrangements committee. With him on the committee are fifty representative citizens of Hingham, all of whom will serve as ushers during the evening.

"A mighty fortress is our God," opening chorus with 150 voices, under the direction of Frank Otis Nash of Boston. Second chorus, Kipling's "Recessional." Hon. John D. Long, presiding officer, makes address of welcome to Rt. Hon. James Bryce, the British ambassador. Ambassador Bryce presents ancient stone sent from Hingham, England for the Memorial Tower and Peal of Bells. Acceptance of the stone by Walter Hersey, [illegible] of the Board of Selectmen, on behalf of the town. Chairman Hersey then presents stone to the Memorial Committee. Acceptance by William L. Gifford on behalf of the committee. Singing of "America," by chorus and audience. Reception to His Excellency the British Ambassador, attended by contributors to the memorial fund.

The Committee.

The committee members who will act as ushers follow: William L. Barnard, Winthrop J. Cushing, Harry F. Doe, John Edson, Robert M. Fullerton, William B. Fearing, Arthur U. Hersey, Howard P. Hersey, Allan Hersey, Oliver Hall, Gustavus O. Henderson, Charles D. Hodges, John T. Hollis, Edward W. Jones, Albert Kimball, Clarence Knowlton, C. WONDERS OF EAST AT BIG EXPOSITION

Industrial and Educational Exhibition Revelation of New England's Progress.

To-morrow marks the second week of the four weeks' run of the New England Educational and Industrial Exhibition in Mechanics Building.

The exposition is a revelation in New England manufactures and industries. In the agricultural department college and experimental stations in the six New England States have large displays. A miniature cranberry bog is one of the typical exhibits. Modern farm methods and the implements used occupy much space. A pen of fowl, fancy pigeons, milking cows by electricity, a cider mill in operation, a big threshing machine, a four-row husker and shredder are among the features of the agricultural part.

Newspaper methods are illustrated right on the grounds. A newspaper "The Exposition News" is edited, printed and circulated in the printing department.

Old time spinning and weaving methods, early type telephones, and pictures of old-time transportation [illegible] shown as contrasts to present-day methods.

The telephone company has a big exchange in full operation, the Boston Elevated and the Bay State Railway have interesting exhibits, the former showing a section of elevated rail in miniature with a model of the big cars in operation.

In another department the building of aeroplanes is shown and the motor boat and automobile companies are well represented. A machine which weighs, fills and seals cartons of sugar is working all the time, and interesting crowds of people, and among the trade exhibitors everything from the making of flowers to a finished aeroplane is placed for the visitor to look over and observe without the waste of time and energy.

In the balcony, educational methods and systems are so fully represented that nothing appertaining to the education of young people is omitted, and the working demonstrations of several schools and colleges add to the value of these exhibits.

NEW HAVEN NOT TO MOVE.

Headquarters of Company Remain in Connecticut.

Official denial that the headquarters of the New Haven road will be moved from New Haven to Boston was given out yesterday. Asked concerning the alleged official statement that the transfer would be made immediately following the completion of the addition to the South Terminal station, the following official statement was made: "There is no truth in the report. The headquarters of the road will remain in New Haven."

LODGE AT SHOE DINNER.

Senator and Congressman Harris to Make Speeches.

The Boston Boot and Shoe Club will give a dinner at Hotel Somerset, Wednesday, Oct. 18. Addresses will be made by Senator Lodge, Congressman Harris, General President [illegible] of the Boot and Shoe Workers [illegible] and President Alfred W. Donovan. Congressmen Weeks, Peters, Roberts and Gardner have been invited.

Services for Professor Parsons.

Memorial services in honor of the late Professor Frank Parsons, founder of the Breadwinners' Institute and of the Vocation Bureau, will be held to-night at 8 o'clock at Civic Service House, No. 112 Salem street. The program will consist of musical selections by members of the Bloomfield family, a lecture on "Public Ownership of Monopolies," by Rev. Charles Fletcher Doyle, and talks by Miss Ida Freeman, A. M. Richards, Harry Glose and Philip Davis.

MISS BARRYMORE BETTER.

May Abandon Stage Tour, However, at Husband's Wishes.

Dinner to Judge Keating.

The members of the Charitable Irish Society will tender a reception and complimentary dinner to Judge Patrick M. Keating to mark his recent elevation to the Superior Bench of Massachusetts. Judge Keating is a past president of the society. The reception and dinner will be at Young's Hotel, on Saturday evening, October 21.

SUE CONTRACTORS OF FALL RIVER BRIDGE

Mayor Declares Million Dollar Structure Was Unnecessary

BRIDGE SETTLED BADLY

Officials Aroused, Declare Job Was Started to Give Work to Contractors

FALL RIVER, Oct. 7.—Suits to recover heavy damages from the contractors, and to ascertain the reason for the sinking of the new $1,000,000 Somerset bridge across the Taunton river [illegible] Mayor Thomas F. Higgins and other city officials. It is [illegible] will make public an amazing story of craft and [illegible].

Mayor Higgins charges that the Somerset bridge was [illegible] and says in fact that it was [illegible] contractors with jobs. [illegible] to reveal two [illegible] that will [illegible] the bills for the bridge.

First, why the bridge was built when it was not needed.

Second, what caused it to crumble and sink within three years.

Second only in importance as a piece of absolute wastefulness on the part of Bristol County officials, it is charged, was the erection of the county jail here ten years ago. It cost $110,000 to build and has cost about $50,000 to maintain since.

Here was nearly $200,000 of the people's money paid out and not a single prisoner has ever darkened the doors of this stronghold. If Fall River must have such a jail, under such circumstances, many citizens declare, it is time some of the people who are responsible for a gross misuse of the people's money should be put into it!

Frank M. Chase, a county commissioner, who lives in this city, declared that there had been no graft in the building of the [illegible] bridge [illegible] men who [illegible] fifty cents a day."

First: Mr. Chase said he didn't know what made the bridge sink and then he blamed it on the "teredo worm." The teredo worm, he says, ate the piles.

Mayor Higgins and other city officials are greatly interested in these big expenditures because Fall River [illegible] of the county tax.

Henry F. Burt of Taunton, Democratic candidate for county commissioner, is one of the leaders in the investigation of the Somerset bridge and the county jail scandals. He said:

Didn't Need a New Jail.

"The jail was built despite the fact that the house of correction at New Bedford was perfectly adequate to house all the prisoners at that time. There was no demand for the new institution. It was built simply to make room for a political satellite of the county commission and to give a soft job to a firm of contractors [illegible]."

Mr. Burt also charges that there was graft connected with the Somerset bridge, and he says the investigation will reveal an amazing story of political graft and jobbery that will arouse the entire county.

Mayor Higgins of Fall River insists that the Somerset bridge was unnecessary. It is charged that it was erected simply to give a job to contractors. The Mayor says that the Slades Ferry bridge, 500 yards from the new bridge, was perfectly adequate to all needs.

It is expected that the hearing in the courts will reveal names, places and amounts of money that will fairly upset Bristol county.

Mayor Higgins declared to the Sunday AMERICAN that he did not desire to make any direct charges of graft at this time. He said he was determined to see that the people of Fall River got a square deal.

"Everything, we hope, will come out when the suit is heard in the courts," he said. "When a bridge that cost so much as the Somerset bridge sinks so soon after it is completed by the contractors it indicates that there was something wrong. We want to get at the facts.

Tried to Settle Quietly.

"The county commissioners wanted to settle the matter quietly. They said they would have the bridge repaired so that it would be in perfect condition. They objected to a suit being brought. Finally we got their consent, but they wanted to have their own counsel handle the case.

"As the city of Fall River has to pay the bills I naturally insisted that we employ our own counsel. The commissioners finally agreed to permit us to do so. I cannot say at this time just when the suit will be filed."

"Do you believe there was graft connected with the work on the bridge" the Mayor was asked.

"I have no charges to make at this time," was the reply. "But it is said that—well, I guess I had better not say anything about it just now."

"Will you say that you do not believe there was graft?"

"No, I will not tell what I think. It is too early yet."

"What do you think of the county commissioners?"

"They are a supreme body. They do about as they like."

The Mayor cited the case of the house of correction and jail built at a cost of $140,000, but never used since to house a single prisoner. The institution has cost nearly $50,000 for its maintenance.

Protest by the Mayor.

"I understand that Mr. Rollins of the firm of Holbrook, Cabot and Rollins, which built the bridge has been engaged to do the repairing," he said. "I protested to them against the work being given to the firm, but they told me it was not being done by the firm, but by Mr. Rollins, personally. Again I protested against having anyone connected with the firm do the work, but I guess the commissioners disregarded my kick, for I understand Rollins is to do the work."

"We pay for the work, but the county commissioners seem to be the whole thing," the Mayor added, with a cynical smile.

Mayor Higgins, who is a lawyer, is regarded as a fighter, and the people of Fall River are confident he will win over the county commissioners.

The county commissioners are Frank M. Chase of Fall River, John I. Bryant of Fairhaven and ex-Mayor Richard E. Warner of Taunton. [illegible] Chase and Bryant were on the commission when the bridge plans were perfected but Mr. Warner was elected in 1908.

EXODUS FROM NEWPORT

Wealthy Cottages Are Leaving for Homes in the City.

NEWPORT, Oct. 7.—The usual Fall exodus of the wealthy Summer residents here has begun. To-day Mr. and Mrs. William Walter Sherman left for their Fifth avenue residence in New York. They were accompanied by their daughter Miss Mildred and Lord Camoys, whom she is to marry on December 5. It is understood that Lord Camoys, immediately after the wedding, will take his bride to England, where they will live at the Camoys family seat, Sponor Park, Oxfordshire.

Saugus Town Officials Are Accused of Waste

"Inequitable Taxes" Blamed for Highest Rate

Maurice F. Cunningham, lawyer of Saugus, who charges town officers with incompetency, inequitable valuation of property and "family tenure of office."

JAMES N. ROWSE

James N. Rowse of Cliftondale, a progressive.

Charges Made That the "First Families" Are Favored in Filling Offices.

SAUGUS people who think they are carrying an old-man-of-the-sea on their backs in the guise of the highest tax rate in the state, and who have been saying what they think of some of the town officials since the Sunday AMERICAN printed the results of an investigation of the town a week ago, were stirred still more deeply yesterday when startling charges were made against some of those who administer the town's affairs.

The charges, which came from the lips of Attorney Maurice F. Cunningham, laid the blame for the high tax rate on "inequitable valuation of property and the peddling out of money by reason of long [illegible] for which there are no proper returns." He said that no business concern could survive such management.

The lawyer also declared that certain officials had been incompetent and had really killed out what industrial life had once flourished in Saugus.

Says System is All Wrong.

He charged that some officials had been retained in the town employ because they were descended from the "first families" and in some instances simply to permit them to gain a livelihood and keep them out of the poorhouse. He scored office holding by birthright and "continued family occupancy."

Attorney Cunningham declared there is considerable property in the town that is not assessed at all. He assailed [illegible] assessors of the town for alleged lax methods.

The tempest raised in Saugus after the [illegible] "Is there graft in Saugus?" in the AMERICAN last Sunday has swept the town from end to end—Saugus, East Saugus, Cliftondale, all being caught in the general storm. Yesterday the struggle developed much bitterness and some excitement, particularly between Chairman Ernest L. Noera of the Board of Assessors and James N. Rowse of Cliftondale, manager of a business concern in Boston. Their statements and counter-statements furnished Saugus one of the most interesting chapters in the story of the efforts of the taxpayers to discover what is really the matter with Saugus.

Attorney Maurice F. Cunningham said:

Need of New Men.

"I must confess that as a product of the town of Saugus and a former member of the board of assessors, I am somewhat reluctant to give any additional impetus to the cyclonic condemnation of the assessors' department which followed the announcement of the $25.60 tax rate, said to be the highest, or one of the highest, in the State. I personally congratulate myself that, owing to my earning a modest income and at present having only small real estate interests in town, I escape the direct result of this excessive rate. But my sympathy goes out spontaneously to many of my fellow-citizens upon whom the burden of such a rate will rest heavy.

"I however have full confidence that the old town will rise inspired by the illustrious citizenship of many of its former sons and regain its place of honor and distinction among the towns of this Commonwealth. A generation ago Saugus pointed with pride to the stability of its citizenship and the number and variety of its industries. But the sons of worthy sires have not proven themselves to be so sagacious and shrewd as their fathers. As a result the industries of the town have mostly failed and the management of its industrial affairs has been necessarily entrusted to a class [illegible] who are inclined towards incompetency and were chosen and retained by reason of their lineal descent from some of the first families without due regard for their fitness and in some instances for the general admitted purpose of providing livelihood and thereby preventing them from directly becoming town charges.

New Ideas Squelched.

"Not the least to suffer in that regard has been the assessors' department. No special salary was or is at present paid. The minimum statutory limit of $2.50 per day is the remuneration paid to the incumbents of that important office who are called upon to raise $150,000 to $175,000 per year by taxation based on a fair and equal equitable valuation of the property.

"It has often been said that the lowest priced help is the highest priced in the end and the present results in this department would indicate some justification in the application of this rule.

"Occasionally there has been a variation of the established practice and an alien has been selected who had the audacity to suggest some desirable changes, but he has been promptly squelched and in the main Saugus has remained true to her traditions of staying with those who by birthright and by long and continued family occupancy of town offices have been taken to have acquired a prescriptive right to continue in their respective positions.

"The assessors' department in most towns and [illegible] is recognized as one of the important departments, demanding the highest efficiency in its officials. Yet for [illegible] up to 1906 the valuation [illegible] of each property in the [illegible] was not learned by the public from the records but was a matter of personal knowledge of their individual assessors.

Property Not Taxed.

"If he was absent it would be necessary to go out into the highways and byways to get the desired information. The list of property was entered on an absolute valuation book, was copied from year to year without any attempts at a revaluation. Many items were lost in transit so that at the present time there is some considerable property in the town not assessed.

"In 1906, through the persistency and courage of Charles W. Amerige and [illegible]nzo [illegible] in overriding the desire of their associate, Levi G. Hawkes, who had previously assumed the keep of all books and records in his vest pocket, an up-to-date street book and card system of valuation and information was established by the late M. J. McCafferty, so that all information pertaining to the valuation of property in the future would belong to the town rather than to the individual assessors. In 1906 and 1907 the property of the town was revalued on an equitable basis, with no favorites, as before.

"What has been the result of his stewardship? But generally outside of a very limited territory the valuations were not lowered materially, but have been allowed to remain the same and have not kept up with the actual increase in value by reason of the rapid growth of the town, and its good fortune in being located in the centre of several large and rapidly growing cities and towns, all of which have a normal tax rate.

"I [illegible] I believe the [illegible] of the [illegible] tax rate [illegible] the town is first inequitable valuation and second, a general peddling out of money by reason of long established custom for which there are not the proper returns and under which no private business concern could survive.

"I have however sublime confidence that, inspired by the illustrious citizenship of the Sweetsers, the Halls, the Newhalls, the Oliver's and the Hawkes of past generations, and—coming down to our own day—of the late Arthur B. Smith, the old town of Saugus will rise triumphant out of her present difficulties and regain her position among the progressive and up to date towns of this Commonwealth."

Mr. Rowse said:

"I don't care to discuss Saugus affairs, for I have not been active in town matters. I want to say it is a good old town and the best there is. I don't hesitate to advise [illegible] for a good home place [illegible] Saugus.

"I know Noera better than he knows himself because I am not blinded by conceit. I have taken the injuries he has [illegible] to stand for his insults.

"Persons who live in glass houses should not throw stones. I may be undesirable as a citizen in the town, but I have kicked like a steer, as he puts it, when I was struck in the back. But I have never aroused a disturbance that necessitated the calling of the police, so it must be admitted that at least I have kept within the bounds of the law. No one has yet called me a coward, neither have I been accused of trickery.

"Noera says he will resign. But will he? Stop kidding; there's not a chance in the world. It would take courage to resign in his position. In my opinion he does not know the definition of the word. He values his office more than the president does his, and well he might, for I don't believe he could be elected to any other and I will credit him with the brains necessary for his agreeing with me in this.

"Of one thing I feel sure that if he could be induced to resign the town would greatly benefit. I fear few realize the tremendous sacrifice he is making in remaining in office and it is possible in my opinion that we are not returning value received for his valued services.

First Cry of Graft.

"When the first cry of graft in our town was made, I never thought I would be called on to play the part of the yellow leg in a miserable transparent subterfuge. Yet had I given a fraction as much thought to this man as he has devoted to me I would have realized that with his limited intelligence, I was liable to be called upon to serve some such purpose as this at any time.

"I had lived in the town but a few weeks when I was urged to attend a meeting at which this person was to speak on the question of taxation and valuation of property. He spent the greater part of his time berating a man whose shoes he was not fit to unlace. Among other things, I recall distinctly his saying that as soon as he knew he was elected he changed the lock on the assessors' door so that nothing could go out and nothing come in. After the meeting a clergyman asked me if I had ever [illegible] the speaker, and I replied 'No, and most positively I decline to do so.'

"That was the beginning. A little later a gentleman, Mr. Towle, called at my house and told me he was in a peculiar predicament. He had bought the bowling alley not far from the square and said that this person had presented a petition to the board of selectmen signed by a number of ladies and gentlemen protesting against the granting of a license to operate the alleys. Mr. Towle asked me to help him. I told him I was not long in the town, but that I stood for the square deal and would do my best for him. Frankly, I did not care for this job.

Secret Society Blackball.

"The next thing the chagrined self-appointed leader caused was the granting of an injunction to stop the issuing of a license. Later in the court at Salem the injunction was dissolved and the license granted.

"The next disagreeable contact I had with this person was the outcome of his placing a bronze clock in the window of a store to be disposed of by a sale of tickets at twenty-five cents each, the proceeds to be used as a scholarship fund. An article came out praising the donor, saying the clock cost $45. I regarded this as a grand stand play. There may have been a little spite on my part. I wrote to the selectmen suggesting that this clock gambling be stopped. He was notified and the clock was removed. I found out the clock had been offered to him for $12 and that he himself had made a return offer of $10 for it.

"By the way, I guess the only loser in the [illegible] episode was myself, for I bought two tickets.

"I was urged by a friend to join one of the secret orders [illegible] allowed [illegible] after [illegible] was blackballed. Fully [illegible] who did the blackballing were tools in Noera's hands.

"Noera's political comparison is bubbling over with comedy, the difference between the positions sought being those between office boy and manager, himself seeking the former.

"What political fighting I have done even my worst enemy will admit was in the open. This will always be true of my fighting.

"Noera says I was drawing $75 a week. That was true. It is also true that at the present time I am not drawing $2,000 per annum. I was taxed on a $5,000 income at the time to which he has referred. But I was making but $3,000. Now where did he get that extra $1,100 from?

"It is indeed an interesting journey from a little barber shop on the South Shore to Saugus, especially by an indirect route. I have played only deuces; that's all one needs to catch his jack. If he wants more history, I will give it for the asking. I may be a four-flusher, but my hand now is all trumps. It's his bet and if he makes it I will raise him. That's all."

Town Aroused by New Statements Following Expose by Sunday American.

Besides [illegible] something to say about Mr. Rowse [illegible] Chairman Noera, chairman of the board of assessors of the town, touched a bit on the tax rate and the disclosures the Sunday AMERICAN made a week ago.

American Gives Facts.

"Since the Boston AMERICAN'S article on Saugus affairs came out," said Chairman Noera, "the people out here have learned something. That article taught them something. It was of educational value and gave us reasons why the tax rate should be so high. It should be an incentive to town officials in other places to learn how to curtail expenses, how to bring manufactures into a town and a good substantial crowd of residents."

Mr. Noera warmed up as he talked of Mr. Rowse.

"As to any connection I may have with [illegible] I beg to [illegible] to him in my office [illegible] nor myself ever considered him anything but a joke in the town and he has long ago been blacklisted by us.

"As [illegible] political aspirations in the town are concerned I have nothing whatever to say about him, but he has announced himself a candidate for various offices and the results are well known to every newspaper reader.

"I have never spoken to him in my life. I don't want to, either. Four years ago was the first time this man's name reached my ears. About that time he moved to Saugus and took up his residence in the Charles Bond [illegible] square. He was not long [illegible] friends came and told [illegible] Rowse was going to drive [illegible] politically, in business and in every other way.

Feeling Runs High.

"I appeared to be surprised but knew where such talk came from. Rowse first became acquainted with a man named Maurice Cunningham who is a real estate man and an attorney. He lived near Rowse. I have been informed that this man Cunningham told Rowse that in order to get prominent and well thought of in political circles he must start immediately a crusade against me.

"I am glad I don't know him personally. I wouldn't walk on the same side of the street with him. If I saw him coming up the road, I'd refuse to pass on the same side with him. I wouldn't stay a minute in any dwelling house where he was. He is so far beneath me and my friends that we never discuss him."

DINNER TO DRUGGISTS.

British Delegates to Convention Act as Hosts.

Sir Thomas Robinson, former Lord Mayor of Dublin, R. A. Robinson, ex-President of the Pharmaceutical Association of Great Britain, and former president of the London County Council; Edwin Thompson, proprietor of a large chain of stores in Lancashire and Yorkshire; George Carpenter, one of the leading merchants of Bristol, Eng., and C. W. Sutherland of Glasgow, one of the leading chemists of Scotland, representing the English delegation to the recent convention of the United Drug Company, gave a complimentary dinner at the Hotel Somerset last night to the officers of the company.

SOCIAL SEASON FOR ELKS.

Boston Lodge Plans Season's Entertainments.

Wednesday evening the Boston Lodge of Elks will inaugurate the social season with a ladies' night at its home on Somerset street. The evening's entertainment will consist of whist and dancing, with vaudeville from the leading theatres. On Columbus Day, October 12, the [illegible] Home will be opened to visiting [illegible] and their friends who may [illegible] in the city. Sunday evening [illegible] M. J. Murray, a mem[illegible] will deliver the first of the Sunday lecturing Talks, speaking [illegible] "Patriotism and A[illegible]."

The entertainment [illegible] under way plans [illegible] November [illegible] on the evening of the State election, November 7.

WOMAN'S BRANCH FAILS.

German Alliance Objects to New Auxiliary.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Recommendation that a woman's branch be formed was rejected to-day by the National German-American Alliance [illegible] tion. Mrs. E. J. Dornhoefer, president of the Women's Auxiliary in her report favored the formation of the woman's alliance that would work in conjunction and on an equal basis with the [illegible]. The proposal was rejected by a large majority vote of the convention. The discussion of this report and the receiving of reports from others of the standing committees occupied the business session to-day. The social events to-day included a visit to the White House and a banquet.

John E. Redmond Pays a Warm Tribute to Hearst Papers:

Irish Leader Talks at His Wicklow Home on His Hopes for Home Rule Triumph—Refers in Terms of Grateful Appreciation to the Value of American Public Opinion

IN the great wave of public education on the question of Ireland which is now sweeping through Great Britain, the full resources of the library, the press and the platform are in full and vigorous play.

Never in all her many-sided national life has Ireland had "the ear of the world" as she has at this hour. Able writers and powerful speakers, Englishmen, Scotchmen and Welshmen, are studying the history and telling the story of Ireland's misgovernment to the attentive and sympathetic millions of their own people.

A few days ago Mr. John L. Eddy went over from the London office of the Hearst News Service to Ireland with the purpose of interviewing the Irish leader at his home in Wicklow. Mr. Eddy's mission bore fruit in an extremely interesting talk with the man who is now charged by the Irish people with the supreme conduct of their national affairs. It is a frank and fearless expression and its every sentence is of paramount importance in this critical stage of the Irish struggle for autonomy.

The great and wide-read organs of liberal British public opinion are printing pages of articles on Ireland. Reynold's newspaper, one of the journals of England with a circulation large enough to be a Hearst circulation in America—meaning millions of readers—has as one of its leading features in its latest issue, the following article from the pen of Mr. Redmond:

He deals with the question "Are the Irish lawless?"

No more logical or convincing statement has ever been written in defence of any people. The article is so important and its argument so complete that the Sunday AMERICAN, despite the enormous pressure on its space, prints it in full to-day, and with it the interview with Ireland's leader, obtained by Mr. Eddy. In his Reynold's article, Mr. Redmond says:

By JOHN E. REDMOND.

A favorite argument with the opponents of home rule is that the Irish people are too lawless to be entrusted with the management of their own domestic affairs.

This objection, even if it should be sustained, could not be held as conclusive against Ireland's right to national self-government, because that right is founded on the laws of God, of nature, of nations, and of justice, and cannot, on any pretext whatever, be either alienated or usurped without a violation of those laws.

But are the Irish lawless?

Webster defines the term "lawless" as "not subject to law, unrestrained by law," and it is in this sense that the term is applied to the Irish by the opponents of home rule.

The Facts of History.

That there is nothing inherently lawless in the Irish character can be clearly established by the facts of history, and by the testimony of eminent British writers at various periods in the connection between England and Ireland. Indeed, it is the contention even of the Unionists to-day that the Irish would be perfectly "loyal and law abiding," but for the influence of "professional agitators."

Sir John Davies, an Englishman, who was Attorney-General in Ireland in the reign of James I., says:

I dare to affirm that in the space of five years last past there have not been found so many malefactors worthy of death, in all the six circuits of this realm, which is now divided into thirty-two shires at large, as in one circuit of six shires—namely, the western circuit in England! For the truth is that in time of peace the Irish are more fearful to offend the law than the English, or any other nation whatsoever. (P. 200.)

Lord Chief Justice Coke, a contemporary of Sir John Davies, writes:

Of the Kingdom of Ireland, I have been informed by many that have had judicial places there, and partly of my own knowledge, that there is no nation in the Christian world that are greater lovers of justice than they are, which virtue must be accompanied by many others. ("History of Ireland," p. 353.)

And John Bright, speaking at Limerick in 1[illegible] more than two centuries later, said:

There is nothing I believe more firmly than this: That if there be a people on the face of the earth whose hearts are accessible to justice, it is the Irish people.

Now what was the nature of the law and of its administration which successive British governments imposed upon the law-abiding Irish people?

The Elizabethan wars so exhausted Ireland that, according to Lord Grey, one of her lieutenants, "little was left for Her Majesty to reign over but carcasses and ashes!"

The story of Ireland, from the reign of Elizabeth until the Act of Union, is thus summarized in a speech delivered by Lord Clare, in the Union debates in the Irish Parliament in 1800:

What was the situation in Ireland at the Revolution? And what is it at this day? The whole power and property of the country has been conferred by successive monarchs of England upon an English colony, composed of three sets of adventurers, who poured into the country at the termination of three successive rebellions. Confiscation is their common title; and from their first settlement they have been hemmed in on every side by the old inhabitants of the island, brooding over their discontents in sullen indignation.

The penal code, which was in operation until 1829, and is not yet fully repealed, was hardly calculated to inspire respect for the law.

Edmund Burke said of it:

It was a machine of wise and elaborate contrivance, as well fitted for the oppression, impoverishment and degradation of a people, and the debasement in them of human nature itself as ever proceeded from the perverted ingenuity of man.

Hallam the historian, says of it —

To have exterminated the Catholics by the sword or have expelled them like the Moriscos of Spain, would have been little more repugnant to justice and humanity, but incomparably more politic.

In an Irish legal case, in 1759, a Catholic was reminded from the Bench that:

The laws did not presume a Papist to exist in the Kingdom nor could they breath without the connivance of the legislature.

Now this being the attitude of the law towards the Irish people for practically over 200 years prior to the Act of Union, it is hardly to be wondered at if occasionally they were guilty of acts which were "lawless" or worse.

Goaded By Tyranny.

The fact of the matter is, that whatever lawlessness has existed in Ireland has been due to the system of tyranny and oppression maintained in that country by England, and the Irish people have been taught by long experience that no amelioration of that system, no concession to justice or right, could ever be obtained from England without a resort to methods either of lawlessness or of violence.

The history of British rule in Ireland prior to the Act of Union affords ample proof to this. Since the Union, the accumulation of such proof has been overwhelming.

In England, once English public opinion is convinced, reform is carried. But in Ireland, no matter how unanimous Irish public opinion may be in its favor, reform is delayed until English public opinion, which knows practically less about Ireland than about the North Pole, has also been convinced of its wisdom or its necessity.

John Bright, speaking at Rochdale in 1867, said, referring to the great Repeal meetings held by O'Connell:

Those meetings were held to condemn certain things, that were evil in Ireland, to demand remedies, even to insist that there should be a repeal of the Legislative Union between the two countries, for many thought that only an Irish Parliament could abolish the miseries of Ireland; but there is not one of you that can point to any single great measure of justice which has been given to Ireland in consequence of those great meetings. The grievances were not remedied. The demands of the people were not conceded. Nothing has been done in Ireland except under the influence of terror.

Ireland's Wishes Ignored.

What has been the position of the Irish people in regard to the law and its administration since the Union?

In the first place, Irishmen, though represented in an Imperial Parliament, had practically no influence in the making of the laws, their voice and vote being almost invariably overborne by the overwhelming and, so far as Ireland was concerned, ignorant and prejudiced British vote in the House of Commons. From 1829 to 1886, no less than fifty-nine Irish Land Bills introduced by Irish members into the House of Commons were rejected or passed abortive.

In the second place, the Irish people had no influence in the administration of the law, which was in the hands of men hostile to them in race, religion and politics. "All history teaches us that it is not in human nature that men should be content under any system of legislation and Parliaments such as exist in Ireland," said John Bright in 1869.

In the third place it is doubtful whether for one single year since the Act of Union in 1801 has Ireland been governed by the ordinary law. Seventy-one Coercion Acts have been passed in eighty-seven years, the last being the Balfour Act of 1887, by which Ireland is declared for all time a criminal country.

It is in these enactments alone, said Lord Brougham, (Speeches, Vol. IV.), that we have ever shown our liberality to Ireland! She has received penal laws from the hands of England almost as plentifully as she has received blessings from the hands of Providence! What have those laws done? Checked her turbulence, but not stilled it. The grievance remaining perpetually, the complaint can only be postponed. We may load her with chains, but, in doing so, we shall not better her condition. By coercion, we may goad her on to fury; but by coercion we shall never break her spirit. She will rise up and break the fetters we impose, and arm herself for deadly violence with the fragments.

Every measure of reform carried for Ireland since the Union has been the consequence of the fruit of lawlessness or violence or both. Appeals to the reason or justice of the British Parliament have invariably been futile. It was only when, as Parnell said, "Ireland knocked at the door with a naked hand," that her claims received any attention.

Catholic emancipation, one of the bribes held out by Pitt to the Irish Catholics at the time of the Union, was delayed until 1829, and only conceded through fear of civil war, as was openly declared by the Duke of Wellington.

Ireland, says Lecky, alluding to this period, was on the verge of revolution. The whole mass of the people had been organized like a regular army, and taught to act with the most perfect unanimity . . . and the Ministers, feeling further resistance to be hopeless, brought in the Emancipating Bill, confessedly because to withstand it would be to kindle a rebellion which would extend over the length and breadth of the land. ("Leaders of Public Opinion in Ireland," pp. 247-8.)

As with Catholic emancipation, so with the tithe system, which compelled Irish Catholics, numbering seven to one of the population, to pay tithes to an alien Church. Parliament refused redress, and then, in 1830, the peasant war against tithes began. For five years the country was drenched in the blood of peasants, police and military. Then, in 1833, Thomas Drummond refused police or military aid to collect the tithes, and eventually, in 1838, the Tithes Commutation Act was passed.

"The Intensity of Fenianism."

Take again the Disestablishment of the Protestant Church in Ireland. Mr. Gladstone's testimony on this point is conclusive:

Speaking in the House of Commons, in April, 1868, in reply to Mr. Hardy, Mr. Gladstone said:

The right honorable gentleman says, "Why did you not deal with the Irish Church in 1869, when you asked for the suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act?" My answer is, for a perfectly plain and simple reason: in the first place, circumstances were not ripe then as they are now. Circumstances, I repeat, were not ripe in so far as we did not then know so much as we know now all [illegible] respect to the intensity of Fenianism.

Eleven years afterwards, at Dunkeith, in 1878, Mr. Gladstone said:

What happened in the case of the Irish Church? That down to the year 1865, and the dissolution of that year, the whole question of the Irish Church was dead; nobody cared about it, nobody paid attention to it in England. Circumstances occurred which drew the attention of the people to the Irish Church. I said myself, in 1865, and I believed that it was out of the range of practical politics. When it comes to this—that a great gaol (Clerkenwell) in the heart of the Metropolis was broken open under circumstances which drew the attention of the English people to the state of Ireland, and when, in Manchester, a policeman was murdered in the execution of his duty, at once the whole country became alive to Irish questions, and the question of the Irish Church revived. It came within the course of practical politics.

The Land Act of 1870 was one of the other measures which followed "the intensity of Fenianism" as exhibited in the Manchester rescue and the Clerkenwell explosion.

And as with the Land Act of 1870 so with the Land Act of 1881.

Mr. Gladstone, speaking in the House of Commons on March 2, 1880, said:

Suppose I am told that, without the agitation, Ireland would never have had the Land Act of 1881, are you prepared to deny that? I hear no challenge upon that statement, for I think it is generally and deeply felt that, without the agitation, the Land Act would not have been passed. As the man responsible, more than any other, for the Act of 1881 as the man whose duty it was to consider the questions day and night during nearly the whole of that session—I must record my firm opinion that it would not have become the law of the land if it had not been for the subsidence with which Irish society was conducted.

Lord Salisbury, speaking in the debate on the second reading of the Land Bill of 1881, said:

He (the Irish tenant) knows perfectly well that he has bluffed and he has not got because he has moved your convictions, but because he has moved your fears.

Agitation Again Successful.

In 1886 Parliament rejected Parnell's Tenants' Relief Bill. The years of campaign agitation followed, and in 1887 the Tory government passed the Land Act. Agitation again succeeded where an appeal to justice had failed. And the same is the history of concessions to Ireland down to the present day.

Lawless the Irish people are not, but lawlessness has existed in Ireland and will continue to exist until the reign of justice has been established in the country under a system of self-government which will create a respect for the law and a sense of responsibility for its maintenance.

Judged by normal standards, Ireland is the most criminous country in the world. Agrarian crime, which sometimes reached abnormal proportions in Ireland, was due to a land system of which Mr. A. J. Balfour said in the House of Commons, on May 4, 1908:

I can imagine no fault attaching to any land system which does not attach to the Irish.

Agrarian outrages in the past are therefore no proof of the "lawlessness" of the Irish race. They are the consequences of oppressive laws, which would inevitably have produced similar results in any country in the world. These laws have been largely reformed.

Half the people of Ireland to-day own the land they till. Land purchase is progressing. The congestion in the West is being relieved, and except in a few isolated cases from which no deduction can be made, agrarian outrages have disappeared.

Mr. A. J. Balfour, in a fervent speech, recently declared that:

But the government of Ireland under the Act of Union is the very antithesis of this.

The first essential of a free and well-ordered country is respect for the law and confidence in the administration of justice, and, if, in any country, you find a deep-rooted and widespread dissatisfaction in the law, and a rooted distrust in the administration of justice, it argues either that the people are a benighted race, utterly unfit for freedom or civilization, which is not the case of Ireland, or else that the Government under which those people live is a wicked and intolerable oppression.

There is a rooted and almost universal distrust in the administration of justice in Ireland. This distrust is the worst and greatest of all marks of bad government, and is the greatest of all arguments in favor of Home Rule.

"Foreign Laws" Create Distrust.

What is the origin of this distrust? That is the important question. It springs, no doubt, to some extent from the fact that the laws under which we live, in Ireland, are foreign laws, made by a foreign Parliament.

It springs also largely from the fact that many of these criminal laws are not only tyrannical and oppressive, but are special laws for Ireland, that could not be passed for England. But, most of all, this distrust springs from the manner in which the criminal laws are administered in Ireland, and from the character of the tribunals who administer them. Foreign laws, coming to Ireland, as Gladstone said, "in foreign garb," can never command respect of the people. It is the same all over the world.

Englishmen would not respect laws

[illegible] story of Mr. [illegible]

By JOHN L. EDDY

[illegible] Redmond in his Summer home [illegible] Wicklow Mountains. The house was built as barracks for British troops in the rebellion of 1798, and was afterward occupied [illegible] by Charles Stewart Parnell [illegible] statute was unveiled in Dublin [illegible].

As I drove up the [illegible] green valley I passed the home of Billy Byrne, who was hanged for his part in that ill-fated uprising of a century gone. My Irish driver pointed [illegible] proudly [illegible] Stars and Stripes [illegible] ner of the grim old barracks.

And why is that flag there? I asked. Whose place is that?

"It's Redmond's," he replied. "He always has an American flag flying at this end and an Irish flag at the other."

But where is the Union Jack? I asked.

Don't know," said the driver. "I don't think [illegible] British flag. I never saw one flying there anyhow."

Redmond [illegible] wearing knicker[illegible] jacket [illegible] received me at the door. There was no sign of a servant about. The castle is large and grim enough to support the pomp of a duke, but [illegible] is in [illegible] falling to fall.

Redmond, with his wife and daughter, occupies only a few middle rooms, living there through the Summer months in the utmost simplicity.

Naturally one of the first subjects we mentioned was the Canadian elections, for the London news[papers] [illegible] penetrate slowly to this mountain fortress, were still full of rejoicing at the victory which they deemed the British Empire had won in Canada over American conspirators."

"What effect [illegible] reciprocity have upon the [illegible] treaty between Britain and the United States?" Mr. Redmond asked.

I told him [illegible] the American people [illegible] considerable caution in approving [illegible] of the treaty.

"Do you think [illegible] together Mr. Taft [illegible] defeated in his scheme for reciprocity. Now, if his [illegible] treaty with Britain should also fail [illegible] him in [illegible]?" Mr. Redmond asked.

I told him [illegible] the prevailing opinion.

American Sympathy Important.

"So far as the fight for home rule in Ireland is concerned," Mr. Redmond said, "the result of the Canadian elections will have no direct effect. Mr. Borden, the new Premier of Canada, is in favor of home rule, just as Mr. Laurier was. Open sympathy of our friends on the other side of the water [illegible]. The British people are extremely [illegible] to public opinion in the [illegible] and in the British colonies."

Mr. Redmond's [illegible] looking for [illegible] A few [illegible] suddenly to have occurred to [illegible] looking at me intently, speaking with great deliberation [illegible] said:

"If the home rule question were settled [illegible] Irish people [illegible] satisfied with the relations between Ireland and Great Britain [illegible] would favor the arbitration treaty."

Redmond's eyes [illegible] his right [illegible] smote his palm.

Getting home rule for Ireland would not only preserve peace between the United States and Britain, it would make [illegible] the peace of the whole world."

He didn't say [illegible] friends of [illegible] should [illegible] desire for [illegible] to grant home rule. He didn't say just it in so many words, but I couldn't [illegible] feeling that the [illegible] of such [illegible] on the part of the United States [illegible] Canada's [illegible] reciprocity [illegible] crossed his mind for the first time.

We turned to Ulster, where Sir Edward [Carson] is holding [illegible] organizing a [illegible] against a [illegible] government [illegible] saying things which if uttered [illegible] rulers would be denounced as treason [illegible] a portion of the [illegible] Belfast at which action was taken to establish a provisional government for Ulster, to come into operation [illegible] of the passage of [illegible]

[illegible] Irish movement [illegible] said Redmond [illegible] an Irishman. He doesn't [illegible] a London lawyer. He proposes [illegible] government for Ulster, and a [illegible] the Nationalists. When [illegible] people with him talk of Ulster [illegible] about two counties out of [illegible] the ulsters of [illegible] that Belfast is Ulster.

"This talk about two Irish [illegible] one in Ulster and one [illegible] is the biggest nonsense in the world [illegible] are standing out for the [illegible] minority to rule. They are [illegible] in Ireland and they are [illegible] the whole United Kingdom. We [illegible] want to quarrel with them [illegible] We want to bring them [illegible] They have [illegible] and [illegible] to the country. There [illegible] people. There's no length we [illegible] to conciliate them.

"They're only a sixth of the whole people but they want to rule [illegible] They've got used to [illegible] holding all the offices, having all the honors. They've been governing. They're the privileged class. Everyone of them was provided for before he was born, you [illegible] and they don't want to give it up.

"But they can't accomplish anything [illegible] talk about civil war and priest [illegible] most they can hope to do is to get up a few riots [illegible] They're trying to fight home rule on the question of the Pope in Rome. If I had to wage a political battle on such a wretched religious cry [illegible] that I [illegible] nothing to do with it. But they're desperate, they're playing their last card.

"We're going to get this home rule bill passed inside of two years. Under the veto [illegible] lords have power to reject home rule twice, but the strength of our position is that if the bill is passed over the heads of the lords twice, the third time they [illegible] nothing to say at all. I [illegible] surprised, however, if it was [illegible] the other side may [illegible] concessions and compromises [illegible] pass it, but we're not counting on [illegible] it over with so [illegible] We're prepared to fight on two years longer.

People Have Already Voted.

[illegible] the men in the North trying to [illegible] their campaign?' I asked. "They know the government is pledged to give Ireland home rule. The present campaign looks [illegible] American very much like [illegible] conducted after elections have been held."

[illegible] Redmond replied, "The election [illegible] and the people of the United Kingdom have voted in favor of [illegible] that the Ulster men refuse to [illegible] by the [illegible]. Bye-elections are being held all the time. Fifty bye-elections [illegible] the next two years [illegible] up for final vote. Suppose [illegible] elections should show a change [illegible] on the home rule question? That would place the government in a very serious position.

"By the way, [illegible] the result of that election in Kilmarnock? That was the first election since the passage of the veto bill. The chief issue was home rule. Mr. Gladstone especially made it so, and more votes were polled there for home rule than were ever polled before. We must keep [illegible] at work. You never can tell what [illegible] may happen in the next two years to precipitate a new general election. All of which shows how important it is to keep up the fight."

I called Mr. Redmond's attention to the railroad strike which was fast failing and apparently for the very reason that it had been ordered in England. Men didn't like the idea of being ordered to quit work by English union officials, and they refused to come out.

Yes," said Mr. Redmond, "and do you see what a quiet strike it has been? Compare it with the rioting and shooting of mobs by soldiers that they had in England only a few weeks ago. That doesn't look much like a non-law-abiding population in Ireland, does it?"

"But there may be trouble yet," I ventured. "It is usually a losing strike that is most riotous. Men become desperate and lose self-control."

"But there won't be any trouble," Redmond replied positively. "I have no hesitation in saying it. I know the Irish people. I tell you they've been maligned. They're by nature the most peaceable, law-abiding people in the world."

It is a fact that the present strike, which seems now to be on its last legs, has been the quietest in the United Kingdom's recent history. Not one act of violence has been reported in either the Irish or British press.

I called Mr. Redmond's attention to Conan Doyle's recent conversion to home rule.

Better Times in Ireland.

Yes," he said, "it is a sign of the times; and did you notice that letter from Sykes, Unionist M. P.? He is against home rule, but he is disgusted with the antics of the Ulster men like Carson, who are talking rebellion and separate government. Oh, the people are coming to our way of thinking. It is only a question of prudence and patience now and we shall have what Ireland has been fighting for over a century.

"You will see better times in Ireland, too. Ulstermen are having much to say about the British capital that will not be invested here under home rule. Why, it is just the other way about. There are great quantities of capital right in Ireland now only waiting to come out of its hiding places for the prosperity that will follow home rule."

"A cloud covered the top of Mount Lugnaquilla and rain threatened as I sat out over the macadam road that the British soldiers had built for the purpose of chasing the Irish rebels.

"The only good thing they ever did for Ireland," Redmond said.

As the wheels of my Irish jaunting car ground into the pebbles Mr. Redmond called out:

"I want you to thank Mr. Hearst for all he has done for us. American public opinion is our greatest asset and Mr. Hearst and his newspapers have done more to mould that in our favor than any other single cause."

Autumn Lures Society to the Hills

Carnival of Sport in the Berkshires

Boston Fashionables Who Are Not Abroad Remain In the Country.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Enjoy! enjoy! enjoy!

That's the song the October woods are singing. And only the leisured may listen.

Surprisingly large this season is the [illegible] ment of society yielding to the [illegible] of the boisterous beauty of the hills. Lenox and other Berkshire haunts of the elect are in royally festive array for the Autumn carnival of sports.

The welcome of the woods is cordial. Every hillside flaunts gorgeous banners of scarlet and crimson and gold. The world of nature is fairly reeking with [illegible] The tang of the Autumn air seems to go to the head and so has [illegible] devotees of the season a devil-may-care madness, making it seem that the strain of gypsy blood even [illegible] staid of New England's aristocracy [illegible] Hills are ringing with the glad [illegible] the fair Dianas of the Chase and [illegible] ing of the hounds, while the [illegible] hunters' horns re-echo constantly [illegible] out the Hollands. The golfers [illegible] their share to the excitement, while [illegible] seems to hold its own and to [illegible] steadily increasing its popularity.

Returning from Europe.

Those who are not in the hills [illegible] at this time are either on the ocean [illegible] ward or are so busy with preparations to sail for the other side for a [illegible] respite before the beginning of the strenuous season in town.

Among those to return this week from an extended trip abroad are Mrs. Horatio N. Slater and her debutante daughter, Miss Esther. The Slaters during their sojourn have been touring extensively on the Continent and toward the latter part of their stay spent some time in Paris [illegible] supply of frocks for the gayeties of the coming season. Upon their return the Slaters will spend some time in New York and upon their return to Boston will temporarily reside in the artistic bungalow which has been built upon the grounds of their Readville estate. It is considered the most perfect bungalow in the State. "Pinebank," the beautiful Slater estate at Readville, is at present in the hands of decorators and repairers, being put into perfect condition for the many gayeties of the Winter. It is there that Miss Slater is to make her formal bow and other entertainments have already been planned to follow there after.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard [illegible] are about to return from Europe, where they spent the Summer. They are not to open "Tanglewood," their estate in Lenox, but will be for the present at their town house in Beacon street.

Miss Ethel Lawrence, daughter of Bishop and Mrs. William Lawrence, who has been abroad for some time, is planning to remain abroad all Winter. Bishop Lawrence and his family returned from Bar Harbor, where they spent the Summer, on Monday, and are established for the Winter at their town house in Commonwealth avenue.

Storers Back From Europe

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Storer, their daughters, Miss Emily Storer and Miss Lydia Storer, and their son, Robert Treat Paine Storer, have also returned from their trip abroad early in July and during their absence their cottage at Manchester [illegible]

WEDDINGS THE BIG AFFAIRS IN SOCIETY

Prominent Young Women Will Be Brides at Coming Ceremonies.

And still they come! Brides without number, brides young and brides beautiful, brides of wealth and undisputed social position, in fact, brides of every known type are making things decidedly merry in the smartest circles these days and weddings hold first place on society's calendar.

Among the prominent weddings yet to come will be that of Miss Harriette Woods and Norman Sturgis. Miss Woods, who is an especially pretty and interesting girl, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Woods (Harriette Cotton Smith) of Chestnut street and Cohasset. She was among the debutantes of two Winters ago when her striking beauty made her the belle of the year. She is tall and slender with especially pretty coloring and will, no doubt, make the most picturesque of brides.

Mr. Sturgis is a son of Dr. and Mrs. William Sturgis of Colorado Springs, who belong to the well-known Boston family of that name.

Jenney-Brewer Wedding

Cards have been issued by Bernard Jenney, Jr., of Carlton street, Longwood, for the marriage of his daughter, Miss Mary Frances Jenney, and Francis Andrews Brewer, to be celebrated at the Jenney residence on the evening of October 19 at 8 o'clock. After the ceremony and a bridal tour, Mr. and Mrs. Brewer are to reside on the Brewer estate, where they are to receive on the afternoons of Wednesday, January 17 and 31, from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ware [illegible] of New York City, formerly of Brookline, have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Gertrude, and Joseph Edward Patterson on October 11. The ceremony will take place in Brookline.

Another [illegible] to the ever-lengthening list is Miss Martha Brewer of Marlboro street, whose marriage to Arthur W. Rice will be among the [illegible] and most important of the season. The engagement was announced last Summer while Miss Brewer was at Marion.

December 5 has been set as the date for the wedding of Miss Mildred Sherman and Lord Camoys. Though a New York affair, the wedding is naturally of much interest to the fashionables here on account of the wide acquaintance of the bride. The ceremony will likely take place at the home of Mrs. William Watts Sherman on Fifth avenue.

Mrs. Bufford Issues Cards

Mrs. John Henry Bufford has issued cards for the marriage of her daughter, Alice Beatrice, to Malcolm Tucker Curtiss, on Monday evening, October 16, at 8 o'clock, at Trinity Church. A reception at the Somerset will follow the ceremony. After the honeymoon the young people will reside at No. 35 Spooner road, Chestnut Hill.

Another interesting bride of the near future will be Miss Margaret Crocker, whose engagement has recently been announced to Delano Wight. Miss Crocker is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George G. Crocker of Commonwealth avenue and Cohasset. She is a sister of Courtney Crocker, whose engagement was announced last Winter to his cousin, Miss Clara Ballard Crocker.

Mr. Wight, who is a lawyer, is a Harvard man and a grandson of Colonel W. W. Clapp.

The marriage of Miss Carla Graham of Beacon street, whose engagement to Harold de Wolff Fuller was only recently announced, will take place. Mr. Fuller is a Harvard man, class of '08. The Fullers will make their home in New York.

Thousand Cards Out.

More than a thousand invitations have been issued for the wedding reception, on the 17th, of Miss Martha Hope Fuller, daughter of Mrs. Alvan Bond Fuller, and Oscar Lawrence Halsey. The ceremony, which takes place at 8 o'clock, will be witnessed by the families and most intimate friends and the reception which follows at 8.30 will be a large and brilliant one. Mr. and Mrs. Halsey are to make their future home in St. Louis.

An October wedding of wide interest will be that in New York on the 26th of Miss Nathalie Morrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David M. Morrison, to Alan B. Farmer, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis G. Farmer of Boston. The ceremony will take place in the Church of the Messiah. The attendants chosen are the Misses Hopeton Atterbury, [illegible].

Malcolm Farmer of Philadelphia will be the best man and the ushers will be H. Bertram Whitman, Matthew Bolles and Nathaniel Batchelder of Boston, Putnam M. Morrison and William J. Tonge, Jr., of New York.

A small reception will follow the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents on East Forty-ninth street.

These women are only a few of thousands of living witnesses of the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases. Not one of these women ever received compensation in any form for the use of their names in this advertisement—but are willing that we should refer to them because of the good they may do other suffering women to prove that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a reliable and honest medicine, and that the statements made in our advertisements regarding its merit are the truth and nothing but the truth.

Columbus Day

Boston to Have Brilliant Parade with State, Civic and Church Dignitaries to Review the Marching Thousands

If the skies be bright next Thursday the streets of Boston will afford to all her citizens a spectacle worth going many miles to see. In honor of the immortal Columbus, to whose memory the holiday has been created, music and marching men, fluttering banners and national standard will all be joined in one grand display of national enthusiasm.

The chief marshal, Lieutenant-Colonel John H. Dunn, will start the parade at twelve o'clock, sharp.

Behind the chief marshal and his staff will come the military escort, headed by its band discoursing national music.

The line will move over the following route:

Beacon and Hereford streets, Beacon to Tremont streets, Tremont to Court streets, Court to Washington streets, Washington street to Temple place to Tremont street, Tremont street to Boylston street, Boylston street to Park square.

There will be four reviewing points. The first will be at the State House, where Hon. Eugene N. Foss, chief executive of the State, with other State officers and guests will review the parade. The second reviewing point will be at a point on Tremont street about opposite West street, where Most Rev. William H. O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston, with guests, will review the column. The third point will be at the reviewing stand of Mayor Fitzgerald, which will be on Tremont street (on the Common side) at a point between Mason and Boylston streets. The final review will be by the chief marshal and staff at Park square, and immediately thereafter the marchers will disband.

WHERE PARADE WILL MAKE UP.

The first division will be made up of the military escort, [illegible] the United States soldiers, bluejackets and marines from the forts and warships in Boston. Directly after them will march the Ninth Regiment, M. V. M., under Colonel John J. Sullivan. Then will be seen the battalions of the English High School regiments that are to participate. Other military organizations will be the Catholic Total Abstinence Regiment, which will parade for the first time, and the uniformed companies of the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

The civic divisions will be led by the Italian societies of Greater Boston. Next will come the Holy Name Society of the Boston diocese.

Following the Holy Name Society [illegible] the third division [illegible] voted to the Massachusetts [illegible] Order of Foresters. Then will come [illegible] division, made up of Boston [illegible] and miscellaneous or unattached [illegible]. In this division also will [illegible] Catholics of Boston.

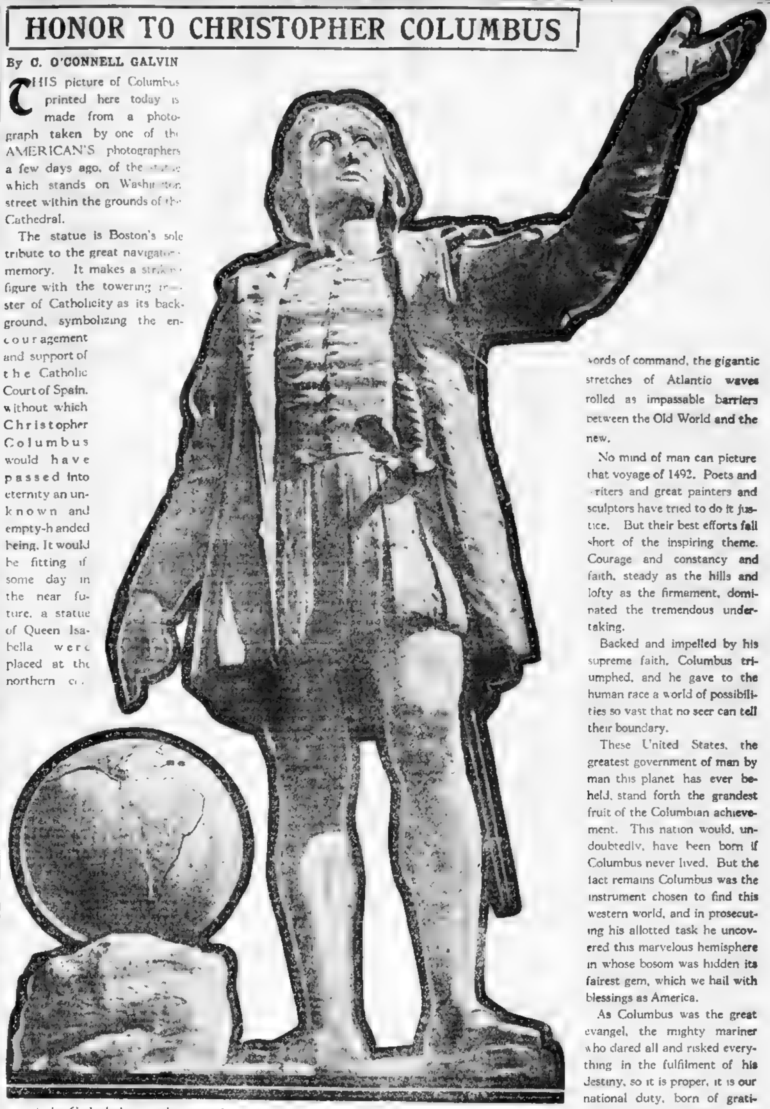
HONOR TO CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN

THIS picture of Columbus printed here today is made from a photograph taken by one of the AMERICAN'S photographers a few days ago, of the statue which stands on Washington street within the grounds of the Cathedral.

The statue is Boston's sole tribute to the great navigator's memory. It makes a striking figure with the towering minster of Catholicity as its background, symbolizing the encouragement and support of the Catholic Court of Spain, without which Christopher Columbus would have passed into eternity an unknown and empty-handed being. It would be fitting if some day in the near future, a statue of Queen Isabella were placed at the northern corner of the Cathedral, to make happily complete in imperishable bronze the tremendously fateful voyage which gave birth to America.



An eminent orator declared at a banquet held in Boston some years ago that more things have happened for the benefit of humanity since the battle of Waterloo than in all the cycles of years preceding. The speaker was in error. He should have gone back much farther in the world's history and then he would have said that (always excepting, of course, that one Event in Bethlehem 2000 years ago, at which all heads are bowed in reverence), humanly speaking, more things have happened for the uplift and progress of humanity since the discovery of this continent by Christopher Columbus than in all the centuries before.

Wonderful and awe-inspiring was the idea that lay hidden in the brain of Columbus on the golden morning of October 12, 1492, when he turned the prows of his caravels westward across the uncharted and unfathomed seas. Up to the moment when Columbus turned to his chief navigator and spoke his first words of command, the gigantic stretches of Atlantic waves rolled as impassable barriers between the Old World and the new.

No mind of man can picture that voyage of 1492. Poets and writers and great painters and sculptors have tried to do it justice. But their best efforts fall short of the inspiring theme. Courage and constancy and faith, steady as the hills and lofty as the firmament, dominated the tremendous undertaking.

Backed and impelled by his supreme faith, Columbus triumphed, and he gave to the human race a world of possibilities so vast that no seer can tell their boundary.

These United States, the greatest government of man by man this planet has ever beheld, stand forth the grandest fruit of the Columbian achievement. This nation would, undoubtedly, have been born if Columbus never lived. But the fact remains Columbus was the instrument chosen to find this western world, and in prosecuting his allotted task he uncovered this marvelous hemisphere in whose bosom was hidden its fairest gem, which we hail with blessings as America.

As Columbus was the great evangel, the mighty mariner who dared all and risked everything in the fulfilment of his destiny, so it is proper, it is our national duty, born of gratitude, to honor his name as his anniversary occurs each year.

Next Thursday in most of the great States of this republic many thousands of men will walk in serried ranks in honor of Columbus. Business will be suspended and all the people will enjoy a holiday. It is well for our national spirit and well for the fervor of American patriotism.

MISSION FOR YOUNG WOMEN

Services Open To-night at St. Augustine's Church.

The first week of the mission being conducted in St. Augustine's Church, South Boston, will close this afternoon with the papal blessing and benediction. Several hundred confessions have been heard and the record set by the married women of the parish, in point of attendance, is a favorable prediction for the success of the mission. This evening at 7.30 the mission for the single women of the parish will begin. The third and last week will be for the men. The mission is being conducted by the Passionist Fathers of New Jersey.

CHOIR MEMBERS MEET.

St. Peter's Association Plans an Attractive Program.

An attractive program is being arranged for the coming season for the members of St. Peter's Choir Association. Meeting House Hill. At the first monthly social, held on Wednesday evening, the report of the secretary showed a flourishing condition. After an entertainment by the members and guests, there was a collation. The officers installed were: Miss Mabel M. [illegible], president; Thomas A. Horan, vice-president; Lulu Cunningham, secretary, and Edward C. Stumcke, treasurer.

ORCHESTRA TO HAVE THIRTIETH BIRTHDAY

Public Rehearsal Next Friday Afternoon Will Be One Full of Much Significance.

The Symphony Orchestra at its next public rehearsal and concert on Oct. 13 and 14 will celebrate its thirtieth anniversary. On Friday afternoon, Oct. 21, 1881, in old Music Hall, the first public rehearsal was given and on the following evening the first concert. The orchestra consisted of sixty-five local musicians with George Henschel as conductor.

The programme comprised Beethoven's Overture, "Dedication of the House", Haydn's Symphony in B flat (No. 12 B & H), the Ballet Music from Schubert's "Rosamonde" and Weber's "Festival Jubilee" overture. The soloist was Miss Annie Louise Carey, who sang as her first number the "Che faro" aria from Gluck's "Orfeo" and the big aria from Bruch's "Odysseus." The general admission to the rehearsal was twenty-five cents and the prices for the concert on the following evening were fifty and seventy-five cents.

Twenty pairs of concerts and rehearsals were given that season and the public rehearsals were rehearsals in fact as well as in name, as Mr. Henschel did not hesitate to stop the orchestra and go over parts of the music on which they were at work.

Since that time the orchestra has given a total of twenty-nine hundred and fourteen concerts. Henschel was the conductor for three years and Bernard Listemann concert-master for the first four years. Mr. Henschel was succeeded by Mr. Gericke who came from Vienna to hold the post of conductor for five years. Then came Nikisch for four years, Paur for five years, Gericke again for eight years, Muck for two years and Mr. Fiedler has now been with the orchestra three years.

Bernard Listemann as concert-master was succeeded by Franz Kneisel who held the post from 1885-86 until the end of the season of 1902-03. He was succeeded for one year by Mr. Abos and then came Willy Hess who held the position for five years. One year he was away on a leave of absence and his place was taken by Carl Wendling of Stuttgart. The present concert-master, Anton Witek, is now beginning his second year in this place.

While it would have been possible to reproduce at this concert the first program with the exception of the soloist, for Mrs. Raymond (who was Miss Carey) has long since retired from public singing, Mr. Fiedler deemed it better not to do so and he has taken three works that have been the most popular with the patrons of the Orchestra since it began.

The first number will be the "Eroica" symphony of Beethoven, the second the "Unfinished" symphony of Schubert and the last number will be the Academic overture of Brahms. There will be no soloist.

COUNTESS TO DANCE.

Countess de Swirsky, the Russian classic dancer, is to appear at Jordan Hall accompanied by an orchestra of Symphony players, on Tuesday evening, October 10, and Thursday afternoon, October 12, at 8.15 and 3 o'clock respectively.

Mlle. de Swirsky is known as the greatest interpretive dancer of to-day. She is also regarded as a musician of high rank, and this art combined with her first one of suggestive interpretation of the master composers makes her programmes unique. Her whole body is said to be alive with music, as vibrant as a sounded string. Her program consists of the brilliant highly-colored Slavic dances of Dvorak, the tender Peer Gynt Suite and the classic dance "Tanagara," and many others.

One of Mlle. de Swirsky's most remarkable achievements is the classic dance "Tanagara." There lived in olden times in a province of ancient Greece a type of women renowned for beauty and their accomplishments. They were the Tanagara. They brought music, poetry and above all, dancing, to such high perfection that the greatest dancers of the ancient world became known by that famous name. The Countess, reviving the classical dances, brings back the "Tanagara" to modern life.

CZAR'S PLAYERS HERE.

Imperial Russian Court Orchestra Will Give a Concert.

An unusual event will be the concert in Symphony Hall on Sunday evening, October 29, by the Imperial Russian Court Balalaika Orchestra, M. W. W. Andreeff, conductor, which is touring America by special dispensation of the Czar. The Orchestra will be assisted by a quartet of grand opera stars from the Imperial Opera House of St. Petersburg and Moscow, who will sing a number of Russian folk tunes as well as selections from the various operas.

MARY GARDEN IN CONCERT.

Will Be Heard in Symphony Hall Evening of October 22.

A concert will be given by Mary Garden, formerly of the Manhattan Opera Company of New York, in Symphony Hall Sunday evening, October 22. Besides arias from the many operas in which she has appeared, Miss Garden will sing several songs and undoubtedly include some Scotch folk songs.

Miss Garden will have the assistance of Paul Morenzo, a Spanish tenor, whose beautiful voice has won for him unstinted praise. The sale of tickets will open at Symphony Hall on October 18.

Reception at Worcester Formally Opens Season of Association.

Things in the club world are simply humming along and almost every day is filled with important club events.

The Worcester Woman's Club will formally open both the club and the social season next Wednesday, when the opening reception will be held in Tuckerman Hall of the clubhouse. There have been numerous small affairs, previous to this opening, but after this reception society will awaken in earnest. The reception will be given to the new members of the club and to old members as well. The hall will be elaborately decorated and the guests will be received by the president of the club, Mrs. George A. Slocomb, and the president of the clubhouse association, Mrs. Charles C. Baldwin, who is also acting president of the clubhouse corporation, as well.

At this meeting year books will be distributed and the club members will be afforded an opportunity of inspecting the list of lectures, musicales and classes that have been arranged by the committees in charge of the Winter's work.

Waltham Club Lectures.

The Waltham Woman's Club is planning for a busy year and at present members of the club are seeking to aid new names to the club list. Eighteen have already been added. The civic committee, which has charge of the plans for the "public night" of the club has arranged for a lecture on "Representative Government versus Democracy," to be given by Professor Charles Zueblin on the evening of January 29. Professor Henry C. Newell of Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., is to lecture March 1 on "The Education of the Mountain Whites in the South," and on April 5 George E. Morris, drawing instructor in the Waltham public schools, will speak on "The Varieties of Mushrooms."

The club has announced its delegates to the committees of the State Federation as follows: art, Mrs. Fannie M. Dill; civics, Mrs. Mary E. The first meeting of the Walpole Woman's Club will be held on Monday, October 9. Miss Mildred Sheldon Bass will read "Esmeralda" and Miss Grace Turner will sing. Tea will be served.

The second "Nature Walk" of the Thought and Work Club of Salem was held at Marblehead on Monday.

The Tuesday Club of Marlboro begins the twentieth year of its organization, making a special study of Charles Dickens's works. A reception was held at the home of the president, Mrs. James W. Melvin, yesterday afternoon. Calendars for the work of the coming season were given out.

The first of a series of whist parties to be held by St. Mary's parish will be held in St. Anthony's School hall, Tuesday evening, October 11.

The Colonial Club opened the season at the home of its president, Mrs. E. F. Green.

RETREAT CLOSES TO-DAY.

Big Crowds Attending Services in South Boston.

The week's retreat for the men of SS. Peter and Paul's parish, South Boston, will be brought to a close this afternoon. It has been largely attended and much gratification is expressed by the pastor, Monsignor Patterson. The retreat is being conducted by the Dominican Fathers.

OLD COLONY UNION HOLDS CHILDREN'S DAY

Exhibit of Gardening and Other Work to Be Made at Bourne Town Hall.

BOURNE, Oct. 7.—Next Wednesday is to be observed by the Old Colony Union, the leading women's organization of Cape Cod, as children's day. The program consists of exhibits at the clubhouse at Bourne of children's efforts in gardening, poultry raising, basketry, sewing and manual training. This work has been carried on by members of the union for the past two months and the children have been induced to take up more time with these studies. Prizes will be awarded to the best gardens, manual work and the like, and the affair will be in charge of Mrs. Lillian Small, the secretary of the union.

The Old Colony Union was organized this season by the women of Buzzards Bay, Bourne, Sagamore, Monument Beach and Bournedale, the villages of the town of Bourne. Mrs. James A. Garland, who is well known in the State for her generous work in this line, was instrumental in organizing the union and has donated several looms to be distributed through the village to promote the arts and crafts work. All the necessary tools and benches are provided the young people for such work. The members of the union are making an effort to benefit the women of the entire village, and at the clubhouse they may bring their jellies, preserves and fancy work where they will be sold and they will share the profits.

The clubhouse which has just been completed stands on the main highway to the Cape near the Bourne railroad station and on the bank of the well known Cape Cod canal. It is to be open the year round and tea and light repasts are served afternoons.

MARQUETTE COUNCIL PLANS ANNUAL BALL

One of the most important functions in connection with the celebration of Columbus Day will be the annual ball of the Pere Marquette Council of the Knights of Columbus in Bethesda Hall, Broadway, South Boston, the night before the holiday. Fourteen years ago this month the Pere Marquette Council was instituted. Its 240 members are prominent in the social and business life of South Boston and Dorchester.

Deputy Grand Knight Edward F. Martin is the chairman of the ball committee. Associated with him in the work of making the ball a success are James P. Delahunt, [illegible] of the council, Francis L. Co[illegible], [illegible] J. Carter, John J. Powers, [illegible] A. [illegible], Fred Sullivan, [illegible] F. Fitzpatrick, Edward T. Lambert, Dr. George A. Sullivan, P. G. K., Richard J. Dwyer, P. James S. McKenna, P. Joseph McMahan, James P. Manning, Daniel J. Driscoll, John T. Colton, Edward J. Rooney, John H. Newman, Dr. George A. Sullivan and Richard J. Dwyer, all former grand knights of the council, will form the reception committee. Prominent among the invited guests will be State Deputy O'Brien, State Secretary Louis Watson, District Deputy Edward J. Sullivan and many of the chair officers of the councils in Greater Boston.

Pere Marquette Council is one of the most progressive in the State. It was this council that founded the Columbus day nursery in South Boston, and it has a bowling league of its own, whose fourth season will soon begin.

C. T. A. TO PAY HONOR TO FATHER MATHEW

Societies of the Archdiocese to Observe Birthday of Irish Temperance Apostle.

The societies comprising the Roman Catholic Total Abstinence Union are making extensive plans for the celebration on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week to celebrate the birthday of the Rev. Theobald Mathew, the famous Irish apostle of temperance, whose work is well known to all interested in the history of Ireland.

That the spirit which actuated Father Mathew to combat the evil of intemperance is still alive, will be demonstrated by 4,000 pledged abstainers, men and women, on this anniversary. Practically every Catholic total abstinence organization in eastern and western Massachusetts will unite in the observance.

Among the Boston societies to observe the day will be St. Patrick's Total Abstinence and Literary Society of Roxbury, St. James Ladies' Total Abstinence Society, St. Joseph's Total Abstinence Society of the West End and St. Valentine's Total Abstinence Society of the Church of the Immaculate Conception. The Roxbury organization will hold its annual ball in Intercolonial Hall, Wednesday evening, and has invited some of the foremost temperance workers in the State. The committee of arrangements is headed by President John F. Cahill.

Picture Shows for the Poor

The monthly moving picture shows to aid the charity fund of St. Mary's parish, North End, will be held in St. Mary's Theatre as heretofore. An excellent program is being planned, made possible by donations from various friends who realize the worthiness of the cause and the educational value of high class vaudeville entertainment.

IRISH COUNTY CLUBS MAKE STAGE PROTEST

Council Committee to Request Immediate Withdrawal of Offensive Play.

One of the most important meetings of the Central Council held for many months was attended by representatives of the thirty-two county clubs in Sever Hall. After a spirited discussion a committee was appointed to wait upon the management of a local theatre and request that certain plays now being produced be immediately withdrawn, as they were objectionable to the Irish race and in no manner did they typify conditions in Ireland. The committee was directed to have a special meeting of the council called if necessary, when further action would be taken.

Peter A. Conray tendered his resignation as president of the Council, owing to a removal to another city. The resignation was tabled until the annual election as a tribute to Mr. Conray. In the meantime one of the vice presidents will preside at the meetings.

A committee was also appointed to visit the meeting of the Westmeath Club at [illegible] and request that all former and present members of the club be present if possible. It was also voted that each club give a portion of the receipts of each ball to be held this season to the fund being raised for the benefit of a former officer who is at the present time quite ill and unable to work.

Cavan Club Meeting.

The Cavan Club will meet to-night in Paine Building to make preliminary arrangements for the annual ball. James Winn, Patrick Smith and Bernard Winn are the committee.

The Antrim Club will meet to-night in Conant Hall, Roxbury. A large class of candidates is expected to be present for initiation. The social features this season [illegible] lectures, concerts and smoke talks. All former residents of Antrim are cordially invited.

Everything is in readiness for the whist party and social to be held in Roxbury [illegible] Warren street [illegible] Columbus night, under the auspices of the Queens County Club. Handsome souvenirs will be given the winners at whist. The lady members will have charge of this feature and the male members will have charge of the dancing.

Arrangements [illegible] for the dancing party to be held in Paine Hall on November 24, in aid of the benevolent fund.

Gaelic League Men to Talk.

Representatives from the Gaelic League will be present and address the Knights of St. Brendan, in Sever Hall, this afternoon. Jeremiah Carroll, formerly president of the association, will also give an address. A musical concert will be provided. President John McCarthy will act as toastmaster.

The regular meetings of the Mayo Ladies' Association will be resumed in Pilgrim Hall, No. 694 Washington street, commencing next Thursday evening. Miss Nora Barnicle, the president, and her energetic associates, will inaugurate the season with a large class initiation to be followed by a characteristic "Mayo [illegible]."

Because of the splendid meeting of the Wicklow Club held last Sunday, the officers feel greatly encouraged and they have planned to repeat the social session after the regular meeting next Sunday evening in Pilgrim Hall, No. 694 Washington street. William O'Leary will preside.

Thanksgiving Eve Dance.

Thanksgiving eve has been selected by the Langford Club for the next big reunion and dancing party in aid of the emergency fund. Paine Hall will be prettily decorated that evening as the members of the Langford Club are very particular regarding all details. The lady members of the association will act as aides that evening [illegible] the gentlemen will [illegible] [illegible] Waterford will hold [illegible] Wednesday evening [illegible] the above three clubs will be present that evening.

Everybody that came from Tyrone now living in the vicinity of Greater Boston is anxiously awaiting Thursday, November 9, when the annual reunion, concert and ball of the County Tyrone Association will be held in Paine Hall. A handsome souvenir will be given each guest that evening. President James Harvey is being assisted by a large corps of aids.

The Mayo Men's Benevolent Association will hold its annual ball in Paul Revere and Talbot Halls on Wednesday evening, December 6. Roscommon will hold its reunion just one week later in the same hall. Both affairs will be among the largest of the season.

In order that every detail will be faithfully carried out the Kilkenny Men's Association, one of the big Irish county clubs of this vicinity, will commence preparations for the annual ball to be held in Paine Hall early in February at the meeting next Sunday afternoon at No. 164 Canal street.

A meeting of the Tyrone Club will be held in Knights of Honor Hall, Main street, East Cambridge, on [illegible] night. A social and dance will be held after the business session. The officers and members are gratified to learn that W. A. Redmond, M. P., representing East Tyrone in the House of Commons, will be present at the annual ball on Thursday evening, November 9, in Paine Hall.

A. O. H. REFERENDUM ON MARCH 17 PARADE

Divisions Already Voting Declare for Turning Out on Erin's Great Day.

A referendum vote is now being taken by the various divisions in Suffolk County as requested by the County Board, regarding the St. Patrick's Day parade. All reports must be in the hands of County Secretary William T. Fleming by October 31. Every division to date has unanimously voted to parade, and it is expected that the majority in favor of celebrating the feast day of Erin's patron saint with a street pageant will be very large. County President Richard Dwyer has requested the early return [illegible] vote [illegible] favorable, [illegible] given to make the parade [illegible] the best seen in Boston for years.

Seventeen new military companies will be fully uniformed and equipped for the parade. The members expect to have the co-operation of companies from Norfolk, Essex and Middlesex Counties.

Division 50 will have a smoketalk and entertainment in Odd Fellows' Hall, No. 6 Warren street, on Sunday evening, November 5. Charles E. O'Donnell, Thomas Burns and John J. Walsh are the committee. James J. Daniels and Charles E. O'Donnell will represent the division at the convention of the United Irish Societies in Hibernian Hall on Sunday afternoon, October 29. The division voted to parade St. Patrick's day and appointed John J. Curley, Cornelius Mungovan, John T. Nearey, John Geohegan, Joseph F. Donovan, Bernard F. Morgan, Michael Sherry, T. B. Foley, M. D., Thomas Linnenane, Patrick Burns, John J. Lynch, Martin Downey, Martin Burns and James T. Kenney a committee to make all arrangements for badges, banners and other details.

New Year's Eve Ball.

The annual ball of Division 37, Charlestown, will be held in Hibernian Hall, Union street, on New Year's eve. President George Long has the assistance of a committee of fifty.

Auxiliary 5 of Roxbury will meet in Bradley Hall next Wednesday evening to make final preparations for the big initiation and exemplification of the several degrees of the Suffolk County Ladies' Auxiliary in Faneuil Hall next Sunday afternoon.

Division 18 of Roxbury will [illegible] this afternoon to vote on the question of parading St. Patrick's Day. A [illegible] of candidates will be obligated by President Malachi Craven. During the literary exercises a number of prominent members will address the gathering.

Recent additions to the roll of Division 58 of South Boston has made this organization very strong. A feature of each meeting held on the fourth Sunday afternoon is the presence of a number of popular speakers who give very interesting talks to the members. Benjamin F. Fitzpatrick is president of this division.

New England Organizer George H. Sheehan has just returned from an extended trip through Vermont, where he was in the interest of the A. O. H. While there he conferred with State President Dr. Mahoney and former State President James Burke of West Rutland, both of whom are zealous workers for the organization. Mr. Sheehan will visit Connecticut this week and will co-operate with State President Philip J. Sullivan of Thompsonville in recruiting the ranks of [illegible].

Drapes Charter 30 Days.

All Suffolk County divisions have been requested to drape their charters for a period of thirty days as a further mark of respect to the memory of the late County Treasurer Cornelius J. Coughlin.

The annual concert and ball of Division 6 of South Boston will be held in Hibernian Hall, E street, on Thursday evening, November 16. The proceeds will go to the sick benefit fund. Handsome decorations and an interesting souvenir will be provided by the committee in charge.

The splendid degree corps of Franklin will confer the several degrees on a class of thirty-five candidates at the meeting of the new Medfield division next Sunday. County President Slattery of Norfolk county will be present and deliver an address.

The dramatic class of the division in [illegible] will produce the comedy "The Doctor" in Town Hall, Wednesday evening, October 17.

The card of dances at the annual party of Auxiliary 41, to be held in Hibernian Hall, Union street, Charlestown, on Thursday evening, November 9, will have a number of novelties. Electrical effects will be used for the first time during the grand march. State and county officers will be present to participate in the exercises.

A. O. H. Diamond Jubilee.

At the recent meetings of the Middlesex, Norfolk, Plymouth and Essex county boards it was unanimously voted to devote all energy to the request of National President James J. Regan, who has asked for a 25 per cent increase in membership to fittingly celebrate the diamond jubilee of the A. O. H.

Division 29 of Roxbury will meet this afternoon in Vernon Hall. After initiation of candidates, President James W. Gibbons will introduce a number of speakers and entertainers who will furnish the program during the literary session.

MRS. W. J. O'BRIEN, PRESIDENT OF THE DORCHESTER GUILD

MRS. WILLIAM J. O'BRIEN.

Mrs. O'Brien asks women to promote work of the organization.

The first meeting of the Dorchester Guild will be held on Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Women's Clubhouse, Centre street. Questions of importance will be discussed with a view to enlarging the work and providing means for its continuance.

The guild is one of the most prominent charitable organizations in the Dorchester district. Its membership is composed of the most active and representative women, who have given their personal support and attention to its affairs. The amount of good accomplished has proved the worthiness of the cause. The constantly increasing demands necessitate untiring effort on the part of the members who have proved their qualification for the task.

The monthly matinee whists will be continued on the third Friday of the month. They have proved a popular diversion and a means of substantial assistance to the enterprise.

An invitation is extended by the president, Mrs. William J. O'Brien, to all charitably inclined Catholic women to become members and assist in the work of relieving misfortune and distress. The [illegible] will be glad to hear from [illegible] [illegible] prominent help by the hour, day or week, which will in return, provide self-support for industrious women.

The increasing demands upon the treasury of the Guild requires untiring effort on the part of the executive committee and members. "To meet this demand the one day sale has been announced," says the President, Mrs. M. M. Cunniff. "Since its establishment the work has broadened and grown to an extent far in excess of our most sanguine hopes. It is our desire to make the coming year the most successful in the history of the guild. One way to assist in this great work is to become an honorary member. Another way is to interest one's friends in the coming sale."

EAST BOSTON PARISH FETE.

House-Warming Next.

Work is progressing satisfactorily on the new parish building of St. Eulalia's parish, South Boston. Indications point to the completion of the assembly hall during the coming month, when a formal gathering of the parishioners will be held as a "housewarming" party.

LATE HOURS PUNISH THE FAT FOLKS

It is the wisdom of ancient days that the fatter you become the quicker you weary. One sits out more dances than formerly, the flesh grows weaker after 1:30 a. m., in exact ratio to the lengthening of the waist measure. Fat is robbing you of fun, just at a time when you have the leisure and the cash for it.

You may reduce that fatty overplus, and so revive your flagging energies, if you will, in the simplest way. You can take off a pound of it a day, if you wish, without causing weakness, or wrinkles, or calling upon exercising or dieting for help. For years fashionable fat people have been using the famous Marmola Prescription. ½ oz. Marmola, ½ oz Fl. Ex. Cascara Aromatic, 3½ oz. Peppermint Water. Now these same proportions have been combined, most elegantly, into a tablet, the Marmola Prescription Tablet [illegible]

Danderine

Grows hair and we can prove it

Hair Becomes Soft, Fluffy, Lustrous and Beautiful Immediately After a Danderine Hair Cleanse

Get a 25 Cent Bottle Now and Forever Stop Falling Hair, Itching Scalp and Dandruff

A little Danderine now will immediately double the beauty of your hair—No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Try as you will after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or a loose or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few week's use when you will actually see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting all over the scalp.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and prove to yourself tonight—now—that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it, if you will just try a little Danderine. Real surprise awaits you.

FARR'S GRAY HAIR RESTORER

"Like Mother—Like Daughter."

Many a mother as she glances at her daughter's youthful hair thinks of her own—gray and faded.

And yet, it's wholly for her to say whether she will allow gray hair to make her look older than she feels or feel older than she really is.

It GRADUALLY gives gray hair the life and natural color that properly belongs to it—not the color near to what it was, but the actual original color. It does not merely cover up the grayness, as do hair dyes that guarantee to "instantly change the color of the hair." It restores the color so gradually and uniformly its use cannot be detected, leaving the hair soft and fluffy. It is clear and pure as water and pleasant to use. Once the hair has returned to its natural color, it is a simple matter to keep it so. It can be washed, shampooed and curled as often as you wish, and the color will not be affected.

To Appreciate Our Good Fortune To-day and to Look Forward with Hopeful Confidence to the Wonderful Possibilities of the Future We Must Know What Humanity Has Been in the Past. Here Is a Picture That Tells the Story of the Beginning of Human Life on This Planet. Think How Far Man Has Travelled Since the Day When This Was a Picture of the Highest Living Being on the Surface of the Earth!

Copyright, 1911, by the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner

THE picture on this page is one used by Elisee Reclus to illustrate his magnificent historical and geographical work "L'Homme et la Terre."

This is a picture of the early life of human beings—HALF human beings—on this planet.

As these two creatures are, so YOUR ancestors once were.

These are the creatures that lived far back, in the days when thinking and planning were first born on earth. These came before the man that talked. Their language was a series of grunts and whistlings at the best. And they differed from the animals only inasmuch as they relied for safety and attack on their minds as well as on their teeth and their muscles.

* * *

There is no intelligent man who teaches the contrary of the statement that human beings more or less developed have lived upon this planet for hundreds of centuries. The religious mind no longer accepts literally the statement that the earth has existed for six thousand years only. Monuments and writings actually in existence are more than six thousand years old, and no educated man doubts that the world itself is tens of millions of years old. A single geological age in its development has lasted millions of years. And the short time during which men have been on the planet, probably not more than two or three hundred thousand years at most, is but a day in the life of the earth, old beyond our powers of conception.

* * *

It is interesting to think that if you could go back through your line of ancestors, from father to father and from mother to mother back through the tens, hundreds and thousands of centuries, you would come to creatures such as these, and find in them the ancestor from whose savage condition we have all ascended to the place that we now hold.

The man is sitting at ease after a full meal on the meat of some lower animal, or of some like creature of his own kind. The woman sits nursing her child. The man in one hand holds a large sharp flinty stone and in the other the dry, polished bone of an animal.

His mind is on the next fighting expedition, or hunt for food.

The mother has her mind on the small red-haired creature, nursing at her breast. Already you find the division of labor between man and woman—the man taking as his share the work abroad in the world, the killing and the fighting, defending his family from outside enemies; the woman taking as her share the work at home, in the cave, or on the platform up in the trees, developing her instincts of caution, of jealousy, protecting the individual child.

* * *

Here you see mankind in its beginning. What a picture! What thought this truthful representation of our early life on the planet calls up in the earnest man!

Look at those bodies—the great jaws, the heavy teeth, the low forehead, the huge arms, the small legs, very little used as yet.

See how small the thumb is that rests upon the polished bone. It took tens and hundreds of centuries to develop the thumb of man, which in the gorilla is as small as a man's little finger. It was only when man began to think, began to make tools, and weapons that his thumb began to develop.

Before that time the thumb was only a hook, to go under the branch when the long, heavy fingers went over it. But as the brain began to develop, the thumb began to develop. It had to do work for each of the four fingers. And now you may partially judge of a man, and of the number of generations of thinking behind him, by the size of his thumb as compared with the size of his fingers.

And notice the hair on the heads of these two primitive half human beings. Already the mother's hair is longer, and thicker.

The father's hair is short.

The father and mother developing in different directions. The mother kept her hair long and used it to cover up and protect her nursing child. The father kept his hair short, that the enemy might not seize it.

* * *

We print this picture of early half human life not so much with the idea of talking about it ourselves, as with the idea of making you THINK ABOUT IT.

Remember that in this couple you see life as it was. And as you look at them you see everything that they possessed in the world. They had no clothes, no shoes, no houses. They lived in some cave, blocked perhaps at night by a big stone, rolled by the man's powerful arms. Or they lived on a raft out on the water safe from animals that could not or dared not swim, or on a platform up in the trees.

The whole earthly possessions of this couple are the sharp stone and polished bone, which the man uses to kill animals, and the child to which the mother devotes her time and thought.

* * *

Think how the human race has developed since those days. Think of the wonderful accomplishments of the human mind.

Think how those bodies have changed. The forms have grown erect, the arms have become shorter, the legs longer. The jaw has gone back, and the forehead has come out.

Think of the thousands of years of slow, gradual, hesitating development and progress. Think of the brutality, the ignorance of that day, and think of the marvels that have been accomplished by the descendants of this half human mother and father.

They ran about the earth in search of prey, or hid in the caves. It was not easy for them to walk erect, and to rest themselves they often dropped on all fours, that the powerful arms might carry the body's weight. What they did with their bodies we still do with our minds. It is difficult for our minds to walk erect, that is, to think nobly and on high subjects. How often we mentally drop on all fours, to rest the mind from erect thinking and contemplation!

* * *

These ancestors of ours had invented nothing. The man perhaps had learned to throw that stone which no other animal could do. And he had learned to use the heavy bone as a weapon. No other animal did that. The mother had perhaps a spark of thought that made it possible for her to save the skin torn from some animal and put it over her child in the coldest weather!

Farther than that they had not got along the road of human accomplishment.

Think what has been done since. Think what wonderful ideas, inventions and scientific conquests have been born in the brains descended from that law forehead in the picture.

These creatures had not even formulated the lowest form of religion. There was yet before them all the horrors of superstition, all the dreadful crimes committed in the names of all the abominable gods that savage paganism could invent and worship.

* * *

Above all, as you look at this picture and realize how much man may rely upon himself, how far he has traveled dependent upon his intelligence and his own efforts, do not fail to believe the unlimited possibilities of man's development in the future.

Suppose that you, an unseen spirit, had looked upon these two creatures sitting on the edge of some inland body of water three hundred thousand years ago.

Suppose you had seen the ill-shaped bodies, the brutal heads, and heard the shrill whistling and grunting of these brutes, displaying only a spark of primitive thought.

How hopeless you would have thought their condition and that of their descendants forever! How preposterous it would have seemed had any one said to you that the descendants of these animals would conquer the earth, talk across the ocean without wires, fly through the air propelled by the force of gasoline taken from the earth's depths, sail their boats beneath the ocean, talk and print and write and think in man complicated languages!

The least of men's accomplishments to-day you would have declared impossible had you seen this early man and early woman, beginners of the life of humanity on the planet.

How much has been accomplished, what wonders have been done by those that have descended from these primitive creatures!

How can you fail to have absolute confidence in the power of man when you see this picture? How can you fail to feel enthusiastic in hope and belief in the future of humanity?

* * *

If this couple, through their descendants, have conquered the earth and the air and the sea, conquered the kingdom of science, learned to count and measure and weigh the stars, all within the period of time which is but a day in the life of the planet, what shall not men accomplish during the many hundreds of thousands of years that stretch out before him on this earth?

* * *

Readers, this picture of man in the beginning is very different from the picture of man as he is to-day. And man to-day, compared with the man who will live on this earth in the future is as these half human beings compared with modern man.

This couple represent thought or this earth, when they lived. We represent thought and dominion on this earth to-day.

As we have risen above these creatures morally, scientifically, intellectually and physically, so those who are to come will rise above us. Three hundred thousand years from now, a picture of that which we call civilization to-day will seem as monstrous, uncouth and dreadful to enlightened and developed human beings as this picture seems to us. In that fact lies the hope of humanity, the highest encouragement to good work by men and women.

MONTGOMERY—How do you do, young man?

DUMMY—How do you do?

MONTGOMERY—Where did you get that bicycle you had yesterday?

DUMMY—I borrowed it

MONTGOMERY—From whom?

DUMMY—I don't know, the fellow wasn't around at the time

MONTGOMERY—I see the doctor says your brother has a pronounced disease.

DUMMY—Yes, but I can't pronounce it. Say, what's the difference between a "thought," a "motor car," a "sigh" and a "donkey"?

MONTGOMERY—I don't know

DUMMY—A thought is an idea(r), a motor car is too dear, a sigh is oh, dear, and a donkey is you, dear

MONTGOMERY—Feels a little like rain to night

DUMMY—There'll be no rain to night

MONTGOMERY—How do you know, are you a weather prophet?

DUMMY—Only when the baby swallows a pin, then I know there'll be a squall.

MONTGOMERY—Say, George, what facilities have you in your village for extinguishing fire?

DUMMY—Well, it sometimes rains. Did you see the baby we passed in the carriage this morning? That was my sister

MONTGOMERY—How did you know?

DUMMY—I recognized the nurse

MONTGOMERY—George, Sunday morning when you went to church, to prove your generosity, your father gave you a quarter and a penny to put in the box. Now tell me, which one did you give into the church?

DUMMY—Well, you see, it was this way, the preacher said, "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." Now I knew I could give them a penny more cheerfully than a quarter, so I gave them a penny

MONTGOMERY—Did you enjoy yourself while you were in Paris?

DUMMY—No, I couldn't make anybody understand me until I was there about five days. At about 5 o'clock one morning I heard a rooster crow

MONTGOMERY—Of course, you were angry being aroused at such an hour.

DUMMY—No, I said, "I'm glad somebody speaks my language," and went to sleep.

MONTGOMERY—Say, young man, how old are you?

DUMMY—Oh, sometimes I'm under twelve and sometimes over fifteen

MONTGOMERY—Sometimes under twelve, and sometimes under fifteen? What do you mean?

DUMMY—Well, when I'm travelling on trains I'm under twelve, and when I go for beer I'm over fifteen

MONTGOMERY—See here, young man, your brother is a downright faker

DUMMY—Why is that?

MONTGOMERY—He sold me some hair tonic and guaranteed that it would take the bald patches off my head. Instead, the blooming stuff has done away with every hair on my head

DUMMY—Well, it did the work, didn't it? It took away all the bald patches. I know how I can make a two cent stamp do the work of a five cent stamp

MONTGOMERY—Well, how's that?

DUMMY—Use three of them. I was standing in the Grand Central Station this morning, when a big gage man stepped on a lady's dress. "You clumsy man, why don't you look where you are going?"

MONTGOMERY—What did the man say

DUMMY—He said, "Beg pardon, madam, but I can't take care of two trains at once"

MONTGOMERY—I heard the doctor say this morning that your brother is dying by inches

DUMMY—Well, he's 6 feet 2, so he's good for a week yet

MONTGOMERY—I thought you were employed by a contractor

DUMMY—So I am.

MONTGOMERY—Well, a friend of mine informs me you are employed by a pork concern

DUMMY—So I am, I put the tights on the sausages

MONTGOMERY—What kind of a ring is that you have on your finger?

DUMMY—It's a turkeze ring

MONTGOMERY—Excuse me, young man, you mean turkwoise

DUMMY—No, turkeze.

MONTGOMERY—I said turkwoise.

DUMMY—Well, let's ask the orchestra leader "Say, leader, in order to settle a wager, will you please tell me the correct pronunciation of the stone in this ring, TURKEZE or TURKWOISE

ORCHESTRA LEADER The correct pronunciation for that ring is glass

DUMMY—What nationality are you?

MONTGOMERY—I'm English and proud of it

DUMMY—What have you to be proud of,

MONTGOMERY—Look at the grand navy we have! Look at the magnificent standing army we have!

DUMMY—That's all they do is "Stand." See what a handful of Boers did to you.

MONTGOMERY—You don't mean to say for one moment that you are in sympathy with the Boers. They never came out in the open and fought, they hid behind rocks and trees.

DUMMY—Well, they didn't have anything on the English. Didn't you hide behind the Irish? Say that postman's got the sack.

MONTGOMERY—Yes? what for?

DUMMY—To carry his letters in MONTGOMERY—How is your mother, George? You know I remember your mother as such a dainty and pretty girl, and they say she has turned out a fine cook.

DUMMY—She's turned out a dozen of them within the last three months My mother sent me over to Mrs. Smith's house the other day, and I says, says I to Mrs. Smith, "Mother wants to know if you will lend her a cruet, as sister's young man is coming to dinner"

MONTGOMERY—Well, what did Mrs. Smith say?"

MARSHALL MONTGOMERY, the famous ventriloquist, appeared by Royal command before King George at Windsor Castle last week, and here's the funny dialogue that amused the court. Published by permission of Mr. Montgomery.

DUMMY—She says, "Tell your mother I am very sorry I can't, because mine's torn; besides all the buttons are off."

MONTGOMERY—Say, George, suppose your father owe your mother ten dollars and then took five dollars back, what would that make?

DUMMY—Trouble

MONTGOMERY—Remember that horse your father sold me the other day?

DUMMY—Yes.

MONTGOMERY—Why, he's stone blind.

DUMMY—I know it

MONTGOMERY—Well, why didn't you tell me before I bought it?

DUMMY—Why, the fellow we got him from didn't say anything about it; I thought it was a secret. Why didn't your friend give me that position this morning?

MONTGOMERY—He wasn't satisfied with your references

DUMMY—Neither was I, but they were the best I could get.

MONTGOMERY—I hear that your baby brother was quite seriously hurt yesterday. What happened to him?

DUMMY—Why, a fly bit him on the top of his head and I killed it with a shovel

MONTGOMERY—Why do you consider women superior to men in intelligence?

DUMMY—Well, a bald headed man buys hair restorer by the quart, doesn't he?

MONTGOMERY—Yes

DUMMY—Well, a woman doesn't waste time on hair restorer—she buys hair.

MONTGOMERY—George, baby's crying, run upstairs and fetch her nightgown.

DUMMY—I don't want to.

MONTGOMERY—Oh, if you are going to feel that way towards your little sister, she'll put her wings on and fly back to heaven.

DUMMY—Well, then let her put on her wings and fetch her nightgown.

An Orgy of Divorce in the Season's New Plays

(We May Get Tired of Divorce If We Continue to Get It in Such Nauseating Doses—Says Alan Dale.)

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

"The lesson taught is that marriage is little more than a joke, that men and women marry just to get divorced."

SO FAR, if it is not too early to generalize, the blessed young season seems determined to beat divorce into our noddles—divorce in each and every one of its fifty-seven varieties. If a stranger from another planet visited our playhouses at the present moment, he would surely surmise that nothing on this poor old earth mattered except divorce. He would learn that it was funny and sad, humorous and pathetic, necessary and unnecessary, moral and immoral, curable and incurable. He would end up in a hopeless muddle, and wonder where on earth he was. In which respect he would not be very much unlike ourselves. We don't quite know, after sampling all these divorce plays, what our real feelings on the matter are. But we do know that the good old simple love story that used to serve as a distraction has gone to the wall. In its place are the plays that deal with the demise of love that was once thought eternal.

Playwrights are racking their brains at present to invent some new divorce twist—if it can be humorous, they like it all the better. One play has made of the automobile a co-respondent ("Speed," at the Comedy); another has freighted a lady with the tumultuous ideas on the threadbare question of equality ("Modern Marriage," at the Bijou); a third actually has nothing better to offer than peevishness ("What the Doctor Ordered," at the Astor)—and so on. Always divorce as the panacea for everything.

Since Sardou wrote "Divorcons" (goodness knows how many years ago) it would be interesting to know how many variations have been played upon his theme—the idea of the deep-rooted and unchanging love of the divorced ones. One star alone, after appearing in "Divorcons," produced two new plays on the same theme. It seems, to judge by the theatres, that there is nothing else to live for except divorce.

Heroes love—to marry and divorce. Heroines marry—to divorce and love somebody else. It is a sort of germ in the air. Now is the time for any young playwright who has anything new to offer on this topic to rush it into the managerial sanctum for all it is worth. Let him not be fool enough to imagine that he has anything new until he has seen all the plays on the subject. To see them all will keep him busy for a long time. The stage is in great need of some new excuse for divorce—and there's money in it! Preferably let it be humorous. We are supposed to prefer to laugh at divorce rather than to sorrow at it.

As a laugh-maker it has taken the place of the old theme of marital infidelity. You know the sort of play I mean—all the husbands inventing excuses to absent themselves from their wives and lying their way out of the difficulties. That has been popular for years, and years, and years.

Usually a father and son-in-law have been the sinners and a wife and daughter the sinned against. The two men had high jinks with a couple of girls, while presumably on some utilitarian trip, and in the last act they all met and had it out! How we used to laugh at that!

Managers brought us that sort of thing by the ton-weight, all "imported" from Paris, where infidelity is considered a gorgeous scream. We got tired of it after we had laughed ourselves sick. We began to think it immoral—when we had got enough of it. We even objected that it wasn't American!

That put managers in rather a bad box. They had to give us something that was American. So we got divorce. We may get tired of divorce—we certainly shall if we get it in such nauseating doses as we are doing just now—but at least we can never complain that it isn't American! O, it's American, right enough.

Divorce has at any rate given the native playwright a chance. He made a poor job of infidelity, because that is something that is—shockeeng! We mustn't be shocked. We may be bored, and often are. But at least let us be "clean and wholesome." Divorce, of course, judging by modern criticism, is quite "clean and wholesome."

I was amused at the ingenuous stupidity and poverty of idea in the latest play, "What the Doctor Ordered." To be sure, divorce only loomed. It did not materialize. But it was very "clean and wholesome." The married couple merely disagreed because they were irritable! They threw things at each other. They smashed dishes. They refused to speak to each other and wrote their views on a blackboard. I imagine that this sort of play was meant to please women, which I can't imagine that it will ever do. It certainly cannot please men unless they be loitering idiots.

At least, if we must have divorce, let us look the matter squarely in the face in itself, divorce is really not a joke. This is hard to believe, but it is a fact. Divorce is the result only of certain conditions, and they are not always particularly edifying. The idea of making divorce "clean and wholesome" is absolutely idiotic. The notion that plays founded on divorce may be presented for the delectation of the Young Person is a very short-sighted notion.

Even the Young Person must think occasionally. The Young Person is never credited with thinking. Divorce is a topic heavy with thought. It can never be made "clean and wholesome." Even such an absolutely inane, illogical, rough-house and makeshift affair as "What the Doctor Ordered" is not edifying for the young idea. So it is better to avoid classifying any play dealing with divorce possibilities or probabilities as "clean and wholesome."

Of course, we are awful humbugs. You know we are. We like to skate over thin ice, and we hate to have it crack. If we can only avoid that. As long as thought can be avoided we are satisfied. As long as there is nothing to discuss a play is diverting. Personally, I wouldn't give a thank-you for a cartload of plays that you can forget as soon as you leave the theatre. I demand, as my inexorable right, something to think about. I go to the theatre to replace my own thoughts, that I don't want, with those of the playwright, which I do want.

I'm not referring to musical comedy, of course. That is mere vaudeville—just something to tickle the ear and the eye. In the case of the comedy that isn't musical we have a right to expect a certain amount of intelligence.

It does seem odd that the divorce play as such a rage, doesn't it? And have you noticed that in nine cases out of ten it concerns childless couples? Playwrights as a rule don't dare to display mothers and fathers as divorce candidates, except in very serious plays of "psychological" trend. No, the humorous divorce plays nearly always concern the stupid people who live in city-hops or boarding houses and are too mean to have children. So as far as real divorce goes, these plays are nil. They solve nothing. Sociologically the childless couples cut no ice in the community. Whether they live together or whether they don't is of no real consequence. Even Cyprienne, in the original "Divorcons," would have been impossible if she had been a mother.

It is astonishing to me that ministers, who talk so much and say so little, don't find some interesting matter in this question of divorce as the funny theme of the stage. They talk about such silly things. They rush into print because Mr. Astor gets married. They air their views on aviation as a Sunday pastime. The people to whom they preach go in shoals to the theatre and laugh themselves sick on the subject of divorce. These ministers say nothing. They leave it all to dramatic writers. They are too busy, or too indolent, or too brainless to bother. Yet they could spear plenty of notoriety if they handle the subject properly, and, I take it, they are not averse from that.

Divorce must soon die a natural death, as far as the stage is concerned. It must die of sheer old age. It is getting to be a good deal of a nuisance when it is handled by every Tom, Dick and Harry. Also, most divorce plays end happily—which impairs their value. An audience has to be sent home with pleasant thoughts, therefore real life is modified and monkeyed with. Divorce on the stage is but a fantasy. It has no real meaning at all.

However, we shall have many more divorce plays before the mania is spent. That is why I say to the budding playwright: If you have any new ideas, send them in and make hay while the sun shines. Managers always play a game of follow-the-leader. If one produces a successful divorce play, all the others will try to follow. There have been several successful divorce plays, and that is why everybody is trying to produce them just now. When some other theme catches on, as it assuredly will do, then ta-ta to divorce. Watch out for that other theme.

On the stage the divorcing couple invariably love each other dearly, and this is so frightfully obvious to the audience that it is incredible. Sometimes three spoken words would set everything right, but those three spoken words are delayed until it is time to go home and the "evening's entertainment" is over. This is the case in nearly all the divorce plays. So, you see, they really mean nothing. Divorce is just a pretext because it IS popular.

The lesson taught to the "rising generation" is that marriage is little more than a joke, that men and women marry just to get divorced, that they soon tire and meet other people they like better. Years ago this would have been considered dreadful. In early Victorian days it would have been regarded as excessively immoral—in the days when the novels of Ouida were looked upon as the blankest kind of written iniquity. The early Victorian days are dead and gone and we have progressed! Now we laugh at all that sort of thing, and as long as certain matters are not discussed we call these plays "clean and wholesome." It doesn't matter about the ideas as long as words are not used to express them. Speech is the thing that we "Playwrights as a rule don't dare to display mothers and fathers as divorce candidates."

"The good old simple love story that used to serve as a distraction has gone to the wall."

HOW WILL IT BE?

HOW will it be when one of us alone
Goes on that strange, last journey of the soul,
That voyage on which no comradeship is known?
Will our dear sea sing in the old sweet tone,
Though one sits stricken where its billows roll?
Will space be dumb, or from the mystic pole
Will whisperings of love be backward blown?

When our united lives are wrenched apart,
And day no more means sweet companionship;
When fervent night and lovely, languorous dawn
Are only memories to one sad heart,
And but in dreams fond kisses burn the lip,
Dear God, how can this same fair world move on?

IT HAD been the affectation of the wealthy men composing the Foam Island Duck Club to exist almost primitively when on the business of duck shooting, in contradistinction to the overfed luxury of other millionaires inhabiting other more luxuriously appointed shooting boxes along the Chesapeake.

The Foam Island Club went in heavily for simplicity, so far as the two-story shanty of a clubhouse was concerned, but their island was one of the most desirable in the entire region and their live decoys the most perfectly trained and cared for.

Marchie, washing his tingling fingers and visage in icy water, rather wished, for a moment, that the club had installed modern plumbing; but delectable odors from the kitchen put him into better humor, and presently he went off down the creaking and unpainted stairs to warm himself at a big stove until summoned to the table.

He was summoned in a few minutes by the same slender girl who had greeted him, and she also waited on him at table, placing before him in turn his steaming soup, a platter of fried bass and smoking sweet potatoes, then the inevitable broiled canvasback duck with rice, and, finally, home-made preserves—wild grapes, exquisitely fragrant in their thin, golden syrup.

"Has the shooting been pretty good?" he asked pleasantly.

"It has been."

"What do you think of the prospects for to-morrow?"

She said gravely, "I am afraid it will be bluebird weather."

It was a new but graphic expression to him, and he often remembered it afterward, and how quaintly it fell from her lips as she stood there in the light of the kerosene lamp—slender, self-possessed, in her faded gingham gown and apron—the shapely, noble finger of one little weather-stained hand resting on the edge of the cloth.

Letters to an Employer--

TO DEAR JARR'D—I was not at the office today, as perhaps you noticed. I know that it often upsets business if the stenographer is away, as then the letters sent out might be correctly spelled and the recipients be unable to read them.

However, I know you will not be angry, because I had a very important reason for being late.

Just think! As I was passing Tracy's I saw a large ostrich plume, worth at least $29, for sale at $28.94!

I knew there were some important letters to be mailed, but I simply couldn't let a chance like that go by.

Your own business nets yourself and friends 52 per cent a week, and here was a chance for little me to make 6 cents—at least not to make it, but to pay that much less.

So, of course, although I am not quite as astute a financier as you are, I am practising to become one.

MADELEINE.

P. S.—Do not let Hazel use my typewriter when I am not there.

M.

TO DEAR JARR'D—I have not been to the office now for two days. This does not seem very industrious on my part, but I have a very good reason.

On my way to work I noticed a lovely suit for Fall. It was $37.50 last year, and this year it is only $38.40. It is a nobby little suit, and I know that I will look nice in it. The tailor has it almost fixed up now.

This business life is hard work. I was in the office one day this week and might have had to work all day, but I read an ad in the paper about a sale of umbrellas worth $1.20 for 35 cents.

Of course, I had to rush out and buy one of the umbrellas. As I had no money I took some out of the safe. The bookkeeper can straighten this out all right, however, by entering so much less on the books for that day.

MADELEINE.

P. S.—Hazel is a punk stenographer, and I am pretty sure she uses peroxide on her hair. You don't see any real blonde stenographers.

M.

TO DEAR JARR'D—I was in the office yesterday morning, but I had to go away for the day trying to get a hat like one of the women customers was wearing.

It was a large hat, ...

Note—Description omitted for lack of space.—Ed.

I chased all over town after it, but could not find one exactly the same. However, I got a much more becoming one—$49. I got some other little things and told the store people to charge them up to the office under the head of stationery, which was the nearest approach to lingerie that I could think of.

Hazel is entirely too fresh. When I was trying to call you up this afternoon she replied:

"Who is this? Jarr'd is not in—he told me so himself."

MADELEINE.

P. S.—Can't you have Hazel fired?

M.

I SEE Mr. Hearst has offered $50,000 to the aviator who will cross the country. Why, there are men in Congress who would double-cross the country for that.

I HAVE a scrap book full of nice notices, saying that they "wished Charlie Case would return to New York." There are some from Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia—nearly every place.

WHEN I was a boy working as delivery boy for a butcher I fell in love with a girl where I used to call. After a while I decided I would propose to her, so I dressed up and put a lot of cologne on myself. I knew she liked cologne, because when I called at her house one day I heard her say to her mother:
"I wish that boy would use cologne."

CHARLES CASE.

"THERE was a terrible accident up to our house last night. As I was sitting in the parlor I happened to look out and I saw the kitchen sink."

JACK WILSON.

* * *

"WHAT'S the trouble now?"
"I asked my wife to sew a button on my trousers, and when I told her she wasn't doing it right she threw the trousers into the fire."
"Well?"
It isn't well. If a man has any right to anything it's to his own trousers."

From "WHAT THE DOCTOR ORDERED."

* * *

"ARE you selling something to remove wrinkles?"
"Yes, I have here"—
'Give me one; I have to press my skirt."

"AND now we come to the eternal question."
"Which is?"
"What'll you have?"

MONTGOMERY AND MOORE.

"WHEN I marry I want a man who will wash the dishes, do the laundry, clean the house, run the errands, and stay at home every night."

EVERY ONE A LAUGH—Stories That FRANK FOGARTY, THE DUBLIN MINSTREL, Has Told About O'Brien

KERRIGAN met O'Brien's son, Dinny Dinny was carrying a tin pail in his hand.

"Where do yez be goin' wid the pail, Dinny?" asked Kerrigan

"I'm goin' down to the shop with this pail of beer to me father," answered young O'Brien

"Pail o' beer, is it! Say, didn't your father take the pledge?" asked Kerrigan in much surprise. "Oi thought he'd quit drinkin'."

"Sure, he's quit drinkin'. He just dips his bread in this," replied young O'Brien

* * *

MRS. DEMPSEY came into Mrs. O'Brien's kitchen, crying, and hold ng a dish-towel over her left eye

"Sure, what ails ye, Mrs. Dempsey?" asked Mrs. O'Brien, as she pulled the towel away and discovered that Mrs. Dempsey was nursing a black eye. "Sure, dry yer tears, and don't cry, Mrs. Dempsey; it might have been a great deal worse."

"That's right, Mrs. O'Brien," sobbed Mrs. Dempsey. "I might not have been married at all."

* * *

O'BRIEN took his wife to the theatre. They had just seated themselves when O'Brien turned to his wife and said:

"Illen, was that bay rum in that blue bottle that I found on the washstand before we left the house?"

"No, Dan." said Mrs. O'Brien; "that was mucilage."

O'Brien gave a start and said:

"Thin it's no wondur-r-r Oi can't git this hat of mine off"

* * *

TIMOTHY DOWNEY had been off on a ten-day spell of high flying He came home very much shattered in nerves and took to his bed.. Mrs. Downey sent for the doctor in great alarm

The doctor came, looked Downey over and prescribed a few quieting powders Calling Mrs. Downey to the bedside, the doctor said:

"Give Timothy two of these at one time, Mrs. Downey, if he begins to say that he sees snakes"

Mrs. Downey promised to carry out the doctor's orders. About 1 o'clock in the morning she got the doctor on the phone and said:

"You'll have to come right over, Doctor. Timothy is in a very bad way."

The doctor came, looked at his tossing patient, and then discovered that the powders were still on the dresser, untouched

"Didn t I tell you to give two of these powders to Timothy when he began to yell and see snakes?" he asked, with a touch of anger

"Sure, I'd have done so, Doctor, but Timothy said nothing about seeing snakes. He kept talking about seeing red, white and blue turkeys with straw hats on th.m"

* * *

O'BRIEN once worked as clerk of the Oakland Golf Club. One day a chappie came up to the desk just as O'Brien was opening up for the day, and addressed O Brien in no calm tone

"See heah, you," he began, "I've been walking around heah for the lawst three hours, waiting for some one to pay some attention to my wants. My name is Reginald Beardsley Keshitt Wehhington Fawkes, and I want to know what time I'm going to play!"

O'Brien looked up and took in the fellow with an ice-like stare.

"Well, since ye ask," he began, "you'll play at tin o'clock under the name of O'Reilly!"

* * *

O'BRIEN was walking down a road toward the woods with a gun on his shoulder and a dog following closely at his heels, when an auto came whizzing along The dog became rattled, got directly in the path of the machine and was run over and killed. The owner of the auto stopped the machine and hopped out.

"By George, old man," he began, addressing O'Brien, "I'm so sorry about this You don t know how I feel about breaking up your hunting trip. Here's a $10 bill, and I do hope that it will repay you for the loss of your dog. Take it, old man, and believe me when I say that I'm heartily sorry for having killed your dog, and especially for breaking up your hunting trip. Is $10 enough?"

"Oh, to be sure," said O'Brien, as he pocketed the crisp bill, "but ye didn't break up any huntin' trip of mine.

I wasn't goin' huntin'."

"Not goine hunting!" yelled the auto'st, in surprise "Well, what were you doing, then, on the road with a shotgun and a dog?"

O'Brien took a little hitch in his belt and said:

"Sure, Oi was goin' down to the woods yonder to shoot the dog"

* * *

O'BRIEN sat on the fence of a large duck farm, watching the short-legged birds waddle about. A city chap came along with a gun and an empty game bag.

"What'll you take to let me have a shot at the ducks, old man?" asked the young chap.

"Twelve dollars," answered O'Brien quickly

"Here's the five," said the hunter, as he handed O'Brien the bills, and then he put his gun to his shoulder and blazed away. When the smoke cleared, twelve big, fat ducks were lying bowled over on the water.

"Well, old top, I think you got the worst of that $5 bargain"

"Not me," replied O'Brien, pulling on his pipe

"Why, how's that?" asked the hunter

"Because," said O'Brien, "they're not my dooks."

* * *

"O'BRIEN," said Kerrigan, in great excitement, "Oi saw Hinneasy kissin' your wolfe this mornin'."

"Sure, that lumnix would kiss ANY WAN," replied O'Brien

* * *

O'BRIEN was the proud possessor of a brand new silk high hat. At the wake of his dearest enemy he had guarded it carefully, and as a consequence was strolling home with the tile unscathed. As he passed the site of a building operation, a lady acquaintance nodded pleasantly. With an ostentatious wave of the hat, which exhibited it to excellent advantage, Dinny bowed. At the same moment a brick sailed down from an upper floor and bounced from his bared skull. Upon coming to, he inquired anxiously for the hat. A bystander restored it unharmed. Dinny felt the egg-size lump on his head occasioned by the impact of the brick, and then regarded his undamaged tile. "B' Gorry," he sighed in satisfaction, "it's lucky it is I saw the loidy in toime!"

NOT FOR HER FACE VALUE.

"HOW do you know he married her for her money?"

"I've seen her."

"HAVE you anything to say, prisoner, before sentence is passed upon you?" said the Judge.

"No, your Honor, except that it takes very little to please me."

HE MIGHT HAVE HIT A BEHEMOTH.

"ARE yez th' young man what sold them things t' me yisterday?" asked Mr. O'Leary, dumping a bag of little round balls on the spothecary's counter.

"I am," replied the clerk. "What's the matter with them?"

Mr. O'Leary looked at him a moment in stern silence.

"Well," said he finally, "if yez can show me a man that can hit a moth wid wan o' thim Oi'll say nawthin' aboot th' pitchers an' th' lookin'-glass me an' th' ould woman broke."

SORT OF A HAIR-O-KNOT, EH?

EDNA from an airship fell—
Fell right on her head!
When they found her, strange to tell,
Edna wasn't dead!

She was bruised and she was sore.
She was jarred a bit,
But she fell on her pompadour,
And there was lots of it!

THE LEAST SHE MIGHT DO.

"WILLIE, after I have spanked you I want you to sit down and keep quiet."

"Aw, say, Ma, let me stand up, won't you?"

THEN, OF COURSE, HE WON'T APPEAR IN SOCIETY FOR A WHILE.

WILLIAM COLLIER was in a very jovial mood. While standing with a circle of friends in front of Wallack's Theatre the other day one fellow remarked, "I saw Jack yesterday, and it seems things are not prosperous with him; his collar and cuffs were black."

"He's in mourning, you know," chirped Willie, smilingly.

"Lost his wife?" inquired one, anxiously.

A TALE OF 1920.

He was a poor tramp! (Come to think of it, who ever saw a rich tramp?)

He was a thin tramp. (There, nobody ever saw a thin tramp.)

His clothes were tittered and tattered.. Here a titter and there a tatter. It was tit for tat all over him.

There wasn't a button, string or pin to be seen. They seemed to be held together by faith. He could easily undress himself by standing in a stiff breeze.

His hair was the color of wet straw, and long, and looked as if it had been combed by an aeroplane propeller

He walked calmly along until he got to a big house. Fearful of dogs, and being an old sailor, he pulled a spy-glass from his pocket and looked over the fence for an approaching bark.

There being none in sight he walked up to the back door and knocked.

He told his tale of woe. After listening attentively, the Big-Hearted Lady said:

"You say you wore wealthy ten years ago?"

"Yes, mum, and I've got proof, too," and digging down into his pocket he pulled therefrom, as evidence of his possessing wealth at one time, a beamsared, crumpled RECEIPTED BUTCHER'S BILL.

AND HE MIGHT HAVE GOT HIS "FINIS."

DE STYLE—I bought my wife a cook book alphabetically arranged.

Gunbusta—And I suppose the first thing she made was "Assorted Asparagus"?

De Style—No; as usual, she wanted to see how the book ended, and I got "Zestful Zwieback."

GOLD BRICKS, MEBBE.

OLD SILAS, from up-State, was visiting the Museum of Natural History. As he paused before a case an attendant volunteered:

"That collection of stuffed birds is worth thousands and thousands of dollars."

"Ye don't tell me!" exclaimed Silas. "What be they stuffed with?"

A CURIOUS metal box was recently unearthed in a cathedral town. It was not known what the thing was until on being opened they found in it three buttons, a piece of tin and a strip of paper. They then knew it was an ancient collection box.

HER WHAT?

DE STYLE—What did Miss Soubrette do when you told her that the explosion had broken all the glass along Broadway?

GUNBUSTA—She immediately went to her trunk to look at her diamonds.

A LITTLE OFF-STAGE HUMOR

FLORENCE—Didn't you ever wish you were Gaby Deslys and had a real king right under your thumb?

FAY—No, I haven't suffered for want of a king lately, but if I'd had another queen in my hand last night I'd have more money this morning

FLORENCE—So you got into that poker bunch upstairs?

FAY—No, they got into me—for eighty-five

FLORENCE—Was that fresh little blonde there?

FAY—Yes, but she's a brunette now.

FAY—No, her druggist.

FAY—Well, her husband has rats that are just as bad, only they're farther inside.

FLORENCE—And look at the way she burns up money. Has she ever laid anything away?

FAY—Only her first three husbands. She says they all died such easy deaths.

FLORENCE—Yes, it must be easy for a man to die when he's leaving a woman like her

FAY Still, they'll meet her later on in the other world.

FAY—She is just determined to vote. She says she thinks she has a perfect right.

FAY—Believe me——.

FLORENCE—I'd like to, but I can't.

FAY—When did you ever catch me lying?

FLORENCE—Don't talk to me—don't you lie around the flat all day?

FAY—Come, now, you ought to be more serious. Why don't you pay more attention to the inner life?

FLORENCE—What's the use? I can watch the inner life of a dozen families from my bedroom window any time I please.

FAY—I know, but it is so hard to undress in the dark.

FLORENCE—The least one can do is to pull down the shade.

FAY—Yes, but that's often only a blind.

FLORENCE—Still, I do think that the world is getting better and better every day

FAY—No doubt of it. Why, out in St. Louis they're even taking oysters off the restaurant menus because the mayor thinks they're too raw.

FLORENCE—Yes, and they've stopped those awful Salome dancers. The district attorney told the judge he just wanted to present the bare facts in the case, so he made them do their dance in court.

FAY—And yet the newspapers seem to contain nothing but tragedies Just look at these headlines: "Didn't Know 'Twas Loaded," "Stepped Backward from Moving Car," "Feasted on Toadstools—Five Dead"

FLORENCE—And here are some even sadder ones "Wed on Twelve a Week," "Thought Brick Was Ready

The Courtenay Sisters

Talk Things Over in Their Dressing Room

Gold," "Died in His Mother-in-Law's Arms."

FAY—Things will be better when women get a vote

FLORENCE—Then you believe that the hand that rocks the cradle should rule the world?

FAY—I think it certainly should stand a better show than the hand that rocks the boat.

FLORENCE—Isn't this awful? After breaking all records an aviator fell 10,000 feet!

FAY—Quite a come-down for him, wasn't it?

FLORENCE—Do you know, I believe I'll take a trip in an aeroplane.

FAY—I wouldn't if I were you. You're up in the air most of the time now.

FLORENCE—I saw a funny thing on a car last night. A big, burly prize-fighter refused to pay his nickel. The conductor—a little shrimp of a man—wasn't a bit afraid He stepped right up and hit the big fellow in the eye and made him give up his money

FAY—Which just goes to show that only the brave deserve the fare!

FLORENCE—Father was out with the boys last night. What can he do for a big head?

FAY—Has he tried a larger hat?

FLORENCE—There ought to be some way of avoiding these "mornings after"

FAY—The only way I know is to avoid the "nights before"

FLORENCE—I hear you've shaken that Pittsburgh fellow of yours. What was the trouble?

FAY Oh, he was an awful piker. One day he wired me "Can't send check. The boss has canned me, "and I wired right back: "Serves you right, you lobster."

FLORENCE—And yet you thought at first that he made a noise like a full cash register,

FAY—But I soon found out that every key was broken except the "No Sale"

FLORENCE—Your new sweetheart is a great bohemian, I understand.

FAY—Oh, yes, he can eat in the dirtiest restaurants without losing a bit of appetite, and he's not at all fussy about clean collars.

FLORENCE—Does he come from a theatrical family?

FAY—Yes, indeed. His father was tearing paper for the snow storm scene in "The Two Orphans" twenty years ago

FLORENCE—And will he make a good husband?

FAY—Well, I'll tell you—he's the sort of fellow who would never kick about buttoning his wife's waist even if she were as tall as the Singer Building

FLORENCE—Do you think a woman should insist upon her husband being able to express his love on paper?

FLORENCE—Are you thinking seriously of marriage?

FAY—Well, we're engaged.

FLORENCE—Then it can't be that you're thinking SERIOUSLY of it.

FAY—If I do marry, I hope I don't get such a piker as you've picked out for a husband. That man was so mean that when the doctor told him he had only a month to live he stopped smoking cigarettes for fear he'd croak before he could redeem the coupons

FLORENCE—Tell me the difference between a piker and a boob.

FAY—A piker's a man who has money but won't spend it. A boob is a man who has money and wants to spend it but doesn't know how. There's always hope for a boob, because he can be taught.

FLORENCE—I'd like to be governess to a boob with about a million.

FAY—Me, too.

Our History of the World

By A. JOSH, Doctor of Gravity, Fellow of the Rollicking Geographical Society Encyclopaedic Explorer, Etc., Etc., Etc

PUBLISHER'S NOTE—This instalment of our amazing history of the world contains considerable different information than any other historian ever had the nerve to offer.

CHAPTER XIII EUROPE.

STANDING in Africa, on the shore of the Mediterranean Sea, Europe, like Sheridan, is only twenty miles away.

It is the third grand division of the globe in size, the sixth in real importance, the first in it's own importance and considerably in advance of the first in the matter of panhandling tourists.

Europe contains a lot of mortal kings, and the German Kaiser. With the exception of European Turkey, where divorces and affinities are unheard of, the Christian religion prevails.

Europe is considered the most highly civilized section of the earth. There are the fortune seekers in England, the Apaches in France, the blackhand gang in Italy, the yodlers in Switzerland, limberger cheese in Germany, nihilists in Russia and a number of other evidences of a high grade of civilization.

One can scarcely imagine as he sees to-day a dappy English gentleman screw his monocle in his eye and remark, "I say, old top, wot bally day is this?" that this same Englishman was descended from a long, pink-haired, tusked savage who roamed the Devon fens and fought over the wishbone of an ithasaurian.

But such is the case. To-day we have Scotch, Irish (and rye). Also the Welshman, Englishman, Frenchman, Spaniards, Portuguese, Italians, Danes, Scandinavians, Germans, Swiss, Russians, Greeks, Dutch, Turks and American heiresses scattered all over Europe.

CHAPTER XIV.
GREECE.

GREECE, being the first settled section of Europe, is worthy of brief mention. Despite its name, the people do not live on the fat of the land there to-day.

As the historians have blamed Noah for about everything, so do they declare it was his son Japheth, who first settled in Greece. Others say Cecrops, an Egyptian, founded Athens, but, be that as it may, Greece was once a very classy neck of the woods when the girls ran blithely about the Grecian bends with bandeaux of flowers and purple kimonos.

Cadmus came from Phoenicia and built Thebes. He taught the alphabet and the manufacture of metals, but he made his greatest hit in teaching the people the cultivation of the vine.

Soon after they began to have Greek dances the thing to keep the dancers interested and attracted to their own country, foreign vaudeville managers and moving picture men were offering them such fancy salaries.

Then it was Cadmus invented the vineyard and its product, and when the dancing girls hit the wine they were quite satisfied to remain in Greece.

One of the noted men of Greece was Lacedaemon. He ruled in Sparta, ordered children reared at public expense, taught courage and endurance and forbid the drinking of intoxicants.

Poor Lacedaemon, he never had a drink and finally, realizing what he had missed when he became old, he committed suicide.

CHAPTER XV.
GRECIAN PHILOSOPHERS.

THE Grecian philosophers were men who pretended to be wiser than mankind in general. To-day the world is chuck-a-block full of such men.

Thales, born about 700 years B. C., was considered the wisest of the seven wise men of Greece, who flourished more or less about that time. It was Thales who was looking at the stars and fell into the mud. There are many modern philosophers who occupy the front row and look at the stars until they, too, tumble into the mud.

Epimenides was a philosopher who, when young, took a nap in a cave and did not wake up for fifty-seven years. When he returned to his village there was quite a change. Of course, Washington Irving, who wrote "Rip Van Winkle," never read of Epimenides.

Democritus was the giggling philosopher. He saw nothing to shed tears over—he was not married—and he laughed so much people thought he possessed that rich nutty flavor.

Socrates was so wise it hurt him. He overtrained and drank of the hemlock cup by request. It was a bitter endin.

Diogenes was a crank, although the early Greeks thought he was a philosopher. He lived in a tub, but as it was not fitted with hot and cold water he could not be termed a sanitary crank.

But, alas! all was not sunshine in fair Greece, even in those wonderful days, for they had many poets, even as we of this age.

There was Homer, who used to wander about the country singing his verses, but there is no record that he broke up homes. Pindar, another poet, also composed odes of remarkable beauty, but he disliked Homer and knocked him on every opportunity.

Thus, as far as we know, Pindar was the first baseball player, and all the authority we have for this is the fact that he knocked a Homer.

CHAPTER XVI.
GRECIAN MYTHOLOGY

GREECE, as the student is doubtless aware, was the home of mythology.. Mount Olympus was located in Greece, and from its heights Jupiter, with his wives, his affinities, his sons and daughters and relatives, used to descend to earth on all sorts of pleasant outings.

Jupe was the original electric kid and used to do stunts with lightning. He was the Edison of his time, but Thomas A. has stolen his thunder.

Juno was Mrs. Jupiter. She was statuesque, full of dignity and pride, but possessed of a marble heart. She was about as lovable as a kippered herring. Did Jupiter divorce her? Or even abuse her? He did not; he merely made love to Latonia, and the wonderful twins, Apollo and Diana, were born to them. It was just the same in those days as to-day—if a man cannot have a few smiles and love-pats handed him at home, he is going where they will be handed to him.

Diana was the virgin huntress. If a moving picture man had ever met her after one of her famous hunting trips, with her nine nymphs, he would have gone delirious with joy.

Venus, the handsomest of women, fell in love with Vulcan, a common blacksmith. It is suspected by this that she must have been previously married to some society swell.

Ceres was the Dr. Wiley of the golden era and served more kinds of breakfast foods than could be found outside a Grand Rapids furniture factory.

Vulcan, the blacksmith, had a splendid business repairing chariots, being the only mechanic at that time, but even at that he lived in comparative poverty with the mechanicians of to-day, who can run up a bill of $382.54 for removing a grain of sand from the carburetter of a six-cylinder touring car.

Bacchus was the god of wine. He used to hit the grape with all the fervor of a trust magnate's son trying to make the Great White Way look like Sahara. His lady companion was Bacchante, who dressed quite becomingly in a bunch of grapes, according to a fa-

TONNEAU TALK

Bright Humorous Lines from the Dialogue of "SPEED," Lee Wilson Dodd's Comedy at Collier's Comedy Theatre.

OWNING a nice place like this carries obligations with it. Garage oblige!

ALL mankind at present is divided into two classes—automobile owners and spongers.

MY toast is to man—the home-maker. Yours, I suppose, is to speed—the mortgage-maker.

I WON'T marry a man who knows less about machines than I do. And pride forbids me to marry a chauffeur. No, I have taken a veil—the automobile veil, you understand.

SURE, I don't blame ye, lad, for being tired of practising. When your pa bought the first car it was bad enough, but since your ma made him buy the big wan, and got her a showfoor-a-why, you're deserted entirely. Ye're an otymobile orphan.

I TAKE a mild, sweet, clinging little woman to be as hard as a rock. You self-reliant women, when is only one thing mushier, and that is a self-reliant man in the same condition. It takes a minor poet in love to strangle his mistress.

WE'LL have a run home in the moonlight. Nothing like letting her out at night down a good bit of road. All the kids in bed, all the dogs chained up, nothing to kill but tramps. It's a great tonic after a heavy dinner.

I'D forgotten you had a family. So sorry. But I can never remember people's children. It's all I can do nowadays to keep from running over them. I've given up stowing down for chickens—but dogs and children! One has to draw the line somewhere.

THE Government ought to forbid automobile catalogues. They are much too fascinating for a poor devil who wanted to be a locomotive engineer and was forced by a unfeeling parent to become a lawyer. They are a continuous temptation to bankruptcy.

A COUNTRY house without an auto is like a table without knives and forks. It is mere savagery! Country life couldn't go on another day without gasolene. If you can't talk car you might as well not know how to play cards. Socially.

"US BOYS"—The Latest Adventure of the "Malgumated Lege"

By Tom McNamara

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

The ... seat series between the Wild Cats and the Umperiners started off yesterday in a free-for-all, go-as-you-please obstacle race. Everybody, including the members of both teams, fans, mascots, bat carriers, water carriers and ground keepers, entered—not from choice, but because "shrimp" Flynn wanted to escape meeting Mrs. Olsen, mother of Ike Olsen, who was to have made his debut in yesterday's game as Little Chief Meyers, full-blooded Indian and catcher for young Marquard, the mainstay of the Wild Cats.

The game was postponed.

It seems, as they sometimes say in the newspapers, that Ike Olsen is not an Indian. But as he was signed by "Shrimp" Flynn, manager and captain of the Wild Cats, as a catcher under the name of Chief Meyers he had to become one. "Shrimp" has hopes of landing the pennant in the world's series, and will have no other than an Indian catcher on his team. Becoming an Indian is a easy task, according to "Shrimp." All that has to be done is to paint the face and hands with red ink, stick a feather or two in the hair and drape a potato sack or anything that looks like a blanket around the shoulders.

Under "Shrimp's" instructions Ike did all this, and added an extra touch by walking pigeontoed. He rehearsed all Friday afternoon in ... [illegible].

Ike was certainly a great Indian then, but when it came time to go home to supper, he found that he was a better Indian than he wanted to be, as the red ink, part of the makeup, would not come off, and, as he was getting hungry he had to beat it home looking like a half breed. He found that his mother was not a bit in sympathy with Indians or in fact anything in that line.

Instead of sitting down to supper, Ike had to go into the bathroom and wash his face with soap and water till he almost drowned himself, then he was sent to bed without any of the feast of corn beef and cabbage which his mouth was watering for.

Yesterday morning when he woke up, despite the scrubbing he had gone through the night before, Ike was still an Indian. His mother kept him in bed till yesterday afternoon, then escorted him to the grounds.

She wanted him to introduce her to "Shrimp" Flynn, but she was a little late.

There will be a game to-morrow. Full reports in Tuesday's paper.

C. L. U. BOARD HEARS COMPLAINT THAT CITY MEN ARE UNDERPAID

Twenty different trade unions with men employed by the municipality have filed charges with the Boston Central Labor Union that their members are not getting the current rate of wages paid by private employers. Their grievances will be taken up, collectively, by a special committee of the Central Labor Union at Wells Memorial building, to-morrow night.

In several instances, especially in the mechanics' trades, the men say they are paid from 25 cents to $1.50 a day less than the prevailing rate. In others, it is charged that the city authorities are openly discriminating against union men. Ninety per cent. of those recently laid off in a certain department are said to have been trade unionists, while almost all the non-union men were kept at work.

The members of the different unions declare that they were given to understand that their grievances would be looked into, and adjusted if the cost would not be more than $30,000 a year. Mayor Fitzgerald is said to have given them a definite promise to that effect several months ago.

It is also charged that the Mayor refuses to keep his promise, claiming that if he gave the men in question the increase in wages demanded, all other city employers would put in similar requests. He now states that he thought the $30,000 asked would cover all the men working for the city.

No actual threat of strike accompanies the call for the meeting tomorrow night, but the officers of the interested unions declare that some decided action will be taken, nevertheless.

John Mitchell, former president of the Miners' Union; John Hays Hammond, ambassador to the coronation of King George, and Governor Plaisted of Maine, will be the speakers at the Mitchell ... event at the Free Home for Consumptives on Quincy street, to-day. There will be a band concert during the afternoon and evening and refreshments. William H. O'Brien, president of the C. L. U., will be master of ceremonies.

* * *

Cigarmakers' Union No. 97 has a very attractive exhibit at the Chamber of Commerce exposition at Mechanics' Hall—a miniature cigar factory, to show the cleanly conditions under which union cigars are made. Edward Broders, president of the union, is in charge of the exhibit. Philip Meckelberg and Frank Vetton are assisting in the work. Miss Mary Hurstack of Strippers' Union is doing the stripping.

* * *

The executive committee of the Massachusetts State Branch of the American Federation of Labor, meets at Wells Memorial building this morning. John J. Fenton, vice-president of the organization, in a special interview given the AMERICAN earlier in the week, has stated his intention to introduce a resolution providing for the questioning of all candidates for public office on the matter of women working in foundries.

* * *

Massachusetts State Council of Sheet Metal Workers, meets in general convention at Carpenters' Hall, Worcester, this afternoon and evening. James F. McCarty, E. F. X. McCarthy and E. J. Griffin will represent Boston Sheet Metal Workers' Union No. 17. The Boston local will hold a special meeting at Paine Memorial hall to-morrow night to take further action on its proposed new wage scale.

* * *

Edward Flore of Buffalo, national president of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes and Bartenders' Union, will address the Boston Bartenders' Union meeting at No. 380 Harrison avenue this afternoon. Starting to-day, this local will meet on the second and fourth Sundays of each month during the Winter season.

* * *

Every local of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters in Greater Boston that has passed on the question to date, has voted in favor of demanding a slight increase in wages June 1 next. A referendum is being taken on the question throughout the entire district, which has 6,000 members and twenty-seven local organizations.

* * *

Stationary Engineers' Unions Nos. 16 and 264 have voted to demand higher wages for all down-town engineers on November 1 of this year. The new rate calls for $4 and eight hours, and a three shift agreement for plants operated on a twenty-four-hour basis.

* * *

Forty new members have been admitted into the Boston Patternmakers' Association during the last month, as a result of a series of smoke-talks instituted by that local. This craft is now a 90-per-cent organization locally, and the union is still growing.

* * *

John J. Driscoll, business agent of the Carriage and Cab Drivers and Chauffeurs' Union, is in receipt of numerous complaints from the members of that organization on the two-meter method of determining fares. It is a common thing for passengers to complain of overcharges, he says, because the fares are registered on one meter and the "by time" on another.

* * *

All barbers' unions in the State will meet in annual convention at the Hotel Marlboro in this city October 22-23. The Boston locals will tender their visiting craftsmen a banquet while here. Chas. H. Mallen, president of the Boston union, Charles E. O'Donnell, secretary, J. F. Donovan and J. J. Dwyer make up the committee in charge.

* * *

Charles A. Cullen of Worcester, international vice-president of the Painters' Union, has completed a two-week organizing visit in this city and is now doing similar work in the Middle West. He will return to Boston for a longer stay next month.

Cable Splicers' Union has started its Winter schedule of meetings, to be held on the first and third Wednesday evenings of each month, at Wells Memorial building. The local is planning to run a series of social nights this season.

* * *

Boston & Maine Freight Clerks' Assembly, K. of L., No. 1766, meets at the old Ancient Artillery Club House on Main street, Charlestown, to-morrow night. After this the regular meetings will be held on the second Monday night and the fourth Sunday afternoon of every month until further notice.

* * *

Stable and Garagemen's Union No. 387 holds a special meeting at No. 987 Washington street at 3 o'clock this afternoon for the purpose of more thoroughly organizing all the garagemen of Boston and its vicinity. All night and day stable and garagemen are urged to attend, as business of importance will come up for action.

FITCHBURG FAIR THIS WEEK

Governor Foss Will Attend Festivities on Opening Day.

FITCHBURG, Oct. 7.—The second annual Fitchburg fair, under the auspices of the Worcester North Driving Association, will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, October 11 and 12.

On the opening day Governor Foss will attend. Major Thomas L. Walsh, a member of the Governor's staff, has been detailed to escort the Governor while in Fitchburg. Governor Foss is expected to arrive in Fitchburg at noon. He will be met by Major Walsh and Mayor M. Fred O'Connell. From the station the party will go to the Johnsonia Hotel, where there will be a dinner and an informal reception. After dinner the Governor will be escorted to the fair grounds. There will be horse racing both days.

MINISTERS WILL MEET.

Federation of Churches to Hold a Session To-morrow.

The Federation of Protestant Churches will hold a meeting to-morrow in Park Street Church. Dr. G. W. Tupper, State Secretary of Immigration for the Y. M. C. A., will speak on "America's Stamp on the Immigrant," and the Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann, rector of Trinity Church, will treat the theme "The Social Service of the Church, and How It May Be Helped by the Federation of Churches." All the Boston ministers will attend this gathering and there will be no Monday meeting of the ministers otherwise than this.

NEWFOUNDLAND REUNION.

Annual Social and Dance to Be Held Wednesday Evening.

Those who come from the rocky coast of Newfoundland will hold their annual social and dance in this city, at the Paine Memorial Hall, Wednesday evening. The affair will be under the charge of the Newfoundlanders' Mutual Benefit Association, which now numbers more than three hundred members and last fiscal year paid out over $1,500 in sick benefits.

William B. Simerville, president of the association, will be glad to get in touch with all those who were born in Newfoundland living in this city, and get them interested in this movement to keep up the reminiscences of the land of their birth.

TRAINING SCHOOL OPENS.

Large Registration At Bennet Street Industrial Institution.

With the largest registration in its history, the evening classes of the North Bennet Street Industrial School will open to-morrow night. The evening work this year at this institution will include bench work, woodturning, cabinet making, ... and drawing, printing, ... basket making, pottery, stone carving, dressmaking and cooking. Situated in the heart of the North End, this institution has for many years been of great help to the young men and women of that section. It has enabled the students to increase their value in the trades in which they are engaged during the day. An unusual number of the students last year have reported increased wages and better positions as a result of this training.

Campaign Snapshots of the Candidates, Some Statesmen and Plain Politicians

By A. POLITICAL SHARPE

The two temporarily successful characters in public life, says John Cole, are the positive faker and the negative statesman.

John ought to know. "Yes," said one politician I repeated the Cole remark to, "he ought to know sure enough. He rose to be speaker, but he had a big fall when he tried to capture the Republican nomination for Lieutenant-Governor."

I wonder if he meant to be sarcastic in that remark about my friend from Andover.

"Mike" O'Leary, executive clerk at the headquarters of the Democratic State committee, is the dandy little predicter. This is what he said the other day:

"We are going to re-elect Governor Foss; we will elect Walsh Lieutenant-Governor, a majority of the House, Senate and Executive Council and probably most of the county officers."

"How are you going to do all that?" he was asked.

"How? How are we going to do all that, you ask?" replied Michael. "Well, I'll tell you how. We are going to do it by refusing to have a campaign fund. It is about time money was eliminated from party politics, don't you think? Anyway, the people will take care of our campaign, all right."

You remember what Billy Barry used to say in "McKenna's Flirtation" when he received high toned compliments: "I wonder now was that solicitude or irony?"

Tinkering with Primary Law.

There will be attempts to tinker with the new direct primary law at the next session of the Legislature. Chairman Minton of the election commissioners has pointed out some defects and there are others. Even if the Democratic Progressives should secure party standing, they cannot so arrange next year, unless the law is changed. They did not get enough voters in the primaries to insure the taking out of nominating papers. They only enrolled about 300 voters in the State, and it takes 1,000, distributed over four counties, to nominate candidates for the State ticket.

But that is not all. How are new parties coming into existence? Enrolled voters cannot sign for them. The would-be new party papers can only be signed by people who have not taken enough interest in politics to go to the primaries, and that kind of people does not care to put its name to a nomination paper, don't you know. It isn't good form, that is, unless it should be in the case of some professional uplifter, who had to get a nomination in that way and had the money to pay canvassers.

But the funniest thing about the showing of the Progressive Democrats in the primaries was the way some of the more practical politicians among the Republican candidates for office took advantage of their presence.

"Oh, see whose here," said the P. R. P.'s, meaning the practical Republican pols. "Welcome to our primary, you are just the boy we have been looking for. Where have you been keeping yourself?"

And the P. R. P.'s stepped right up and shook hands with the progressive ... and nominated a dozen or ... Republicans as Progressive Democrats for the House in close districts. Of course some of the canny and ambitious Democrats who would have nominations, walked off with the Progressive colors and won the privilege of trading or staying on the ballot to the injury of the regular Democrat chances.

But just think of it. Tilton Bel and Luther Greenleaf, Republicans, are nominees on the Democratic Progressive tickets in Ward 20! Greenleaf has been in the habit of saying harsh things about the Democrats. If he still feels that way, and, if he would have people think he practices what he shouts, he ought to bustle right into town and discard that Progressive nomination.

Harry Atwood, defeated as a Republican candidate, gets by with one as Progressive, someone having written his name in. And Representative James Hart, in the same ward, 24, gets a Progressive handle along with his Republican nomination. If I were Harrison H. Atwood I wouldn't be a political claim jumper.

"Jimmie" Meets Governor.

"JIMMIE" REYNOLDS of the Tariff Board and former secretary of the Republican State Committee some years ago when he used to invite Governor Foss to shut the door from the outside when he couldn't stay long, had a pleasant little session with His Excellency up in Pittsfield the other day.

"How are you, Jimmy?" said the Governor, clapping James on the back.

"The same to you and many of them," replied the tariff expert as he ... to see if at ... What is the meaning of all this exuberance of spirit, 'Gene, old boy?"

"Oh just a little tariff business, just a little business trip, you know, just happened to drop in, that's all," said James, just like that. You know the manner.

"Yes, just so, just so, James," slyly remarked the Governor, "but when you see Murray over at Stockbridge give him my regards and tell him we are going to win. So long James."

And it is said that Mr Reynolds did take a run over to the Red Lion Inn at Stockbridge to see his old friend, Allan Treadway, president of the senate, and, accidentally did run across Murray, the same being Senator Crane.

Governor Receives Dickens.

GOVERNOR FOSS received Alfred Tennyson Dickens a few days ago at the State House and told the distinguished lecturer that he was a great lover of his brilliant father's books. Major "Bob" Green of Brookline did the honors. What character in Dickens's works, do you suppose, the Governor told the author's son interested him most? Barnaby Rudge? Nope. Oliver Twist? Nope again. Mr. Pickwick? Well, some, but not the most. Give it up? Well, it was Martin Chuzzlewit.

"Well, what do you know about that?" exclaimed a well known Boston politician, "that's a new one on Martin Lomasney, ain't it. Do you suppose he will stand for the Governor giving him the dickens in that way? Martin Puzzlewit. Huh! That's some nickname, all right."

Goetting Changes His Mind.

THEY say it is the prerogative of old maids and great men to change their minds. Councillor A. H. Goetting is not an old maid and—well he has hanged his mind about that succession-to-the-throne idea he used to talk against so strongly. When he was in the running for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant-Governor a few years ago he attacked the policy of elevating the Lieutenant-Governors, and promised, if elected, not to be a candidate for Governor. Pretty modest on the colonel's part, wasn't it? Rather decent, I say.

He didn't get that nomination and so escaped the danger of being drafted as a candidate for Governor. But he did go to the Governor's Council and has been there three years. He has had time to examine, to study and reflect, and he has come to the conclusion that it is the part of wisdom to promote Lieutenant-Governors and make them full-fledged Governors.

Their experience counts a lot, their knowledge of State institutions and departments is valuable and their general training a great advantage, he says.

The Colonel takes it all back on that no-succession stuff of a few years ago. He reneges and recants completely on it. But there is this much to be said for him—there's a reason and good one, too.

55,000 Ballots for 99 Votes.

JUST think of printing 55,000 Democratic Progressive ballots in Boston alone for the primaries, and then casting only 99. I'm sometimes inclined to believe they made that 99 out of number 66, just to have it look a little better. Why, when the old Independence League used to ask for a couple of thousand ballots, the newspapers used to say it was an awful waste of the public money. Anyhow, the league never went down to 99 and it did make a lot of noise.

Green is After Keith.

I AM sorry for Eben Keith, Republican candidate for the Council in the First district. His opponent is Alfred E. Green of Duxbury, one of the best. He is simply going to scotch Mr Keith. Eben makes and sells cars. He sells some of them to the New Haven railroad, which is a good thing for him but a reason why he shouldn't be elected to the Council, in the opinion of Brother Green.

Eben was a State Senator twice upon times. And he voted for things the New Haven wanted. So I have been told (and I guess it's so) by friends of Mr Green. In fact, Mr. Green comes right out openly and says so.

Now it appears from the records, that Eben, as Senator, voted against a bill to compel railroad companies to equip their cars with lifting jacks. What could you expect from a man who sells cars to the New Haven? Why, nothing else, to be sure. Now, then Mr. Green knows all about Eben's record on the lifting jack legislation and he is going to show him up. Yes, sir, show him up in a way he won't like.

Mr. Green I am told, is having cartoons made showing a railroad wreck with the ground strewn with mangled humanity and not a lifting jack in sight. In the background, but looming up, will be Eben calmly smoking a fat cigar. That ought to cook Mr. Keith's goose if anything will, don't you think so?

Mayor Has No Regrets.

WITH the State election less than a month away, Mayor Fitzgerald is ... losing any sleep these nights fearing that he will not be the chief executive of the city of Boston for the next twelve months. The Mayor feels well satisfied with his administration during the past year and a half and has no regrets. He also feels certain that the public at large has been satisfied with his regime.

Under the new city charter, to recall the Mayor, it is necessary for a majority of the registered voters of the city to vote against him at the election. At that time there will be about 110,000 names on the voters' lists and this means that over 55,000 votes will be cast for the recall of Mayor Fitzgerald. The chances of such an enormous vote being cast against the present incumbent seems an impossibility when it is taken into consideration that when James J. Storrow ran against Mayor Fitzgerald the former received 44,17... votes and spent a barrel of money in getting that number.

At the Fall election there will be no one in the field who is going to spend any money urging the recall of the Mayor and certainly there is no one who would want to spent as much as Storrow did in an attempt to defeat the "Little General."

Giblin Again on Ballot.

THE name of former Alderman Thomas J. Giblin of East Boston will once more be seen on the ballots in Ward 1 on November 7 next. This time the hero of the hundred speeches in one short day is seeking a seat in the House of Representatives from the Orient Heights district of East Boston and there seems little chance of the former Councilman and Alderman being prevented from taking a seat up on Beacon Hill next January. Giblin was one of two winners out of a field of seven candidates for the Democratic nominations at the primaries held recently.

There is the friendliest of feeling by the five losing candidates toward the two winners, all five endorsing the two nominees and in the field to boost the Democratic slate. Giblin has one idea in mind, no matter what political office he is seeking, and that is "Get Improvements for East Boston, no matter what any other city ... gets."

If Tom is elected to the House he will present bills urging the State to do many things for his district. When Giblin was defeated for Congress two years ago, he said he would "come back and set a fresh start in the political game." It certainly ... as if he was going to make that fresh start this Fall.

Municipal League Campaign On

THE Citizens' Municipal League has opened its headquarters at No. 141 State street and plans are being made for the campaign for the league candidates. This year the terms of Councillors Curley, Ballantyne and Kenny will, it is expected receive the support of the league in the coming city election. Congressman Curley will not be a candidate for office, but it is expected that he will put into the field a member of his Tammany Club for his place at City Hall.

It is stated on good authority that the Municipal League will support John A. Coulthurst for the third place on the ticket. The league will start on November 8, the day after the State election, to secure the necessary 5,000 signatures endorsing the candidates for the office. This task proved a hard one last year and this year the league does not intend to lose any time in securing the necessary number early in the campaign.

Cronin Has a Good Chance

THE chances of John F. Cronin, the Democratic nominee for clerk of the Supreme Court, winning out this year over Walter F. Frederick, the present clerk, who was ... in the primaries for the Democratic nomination, but, who obtained the Republican nomination, are growing bright er daily.

YOUNG MEN'S SODALITY.

Immaculate Conception Organization Plans for Year.

Extensive plans were discussed at the annual meeting of the Young Men's Sodality of the Church of the Immaculate Conception for the work of the coming Winter. The organization, formed some years ago, embraces members from all parts of Boston. Its object is the promotion of the spiritual life of the men and to aid in works of charity. The spiritual director of the society is the Rev. H. A. Gaynor, S. J., recently of Georgetown University. The election of officers preceded the business meeting with the following results: Thomas Meighan, prefect; William J. Haverty and Joseph H. McManus, assistant prefects; Joseph Lambert, secretary; Joseph H. Farren, treasurer; William J. Greene, consultor-general; Jerome Carey, choirmaster, and Fred Morrisey, sacristan.

Enters Brighton Seminary.

John W. Dowd, a well known young man of Brockton who has been studying at Boston College during the past year, has entered St. John's Seminary at Brighton. Before departing he was presented with $100 in gold by friends. Others from this city who are studying to become priests at St. John's Seminary are John McMahon, James Sliney and Thomas Murphy.

Loyola Guild Meeting.

The first meeting of the members of the Loyola Guild will be held on Tuesday evening in Boston College music room. All members are requested to be present to arrange for the annual election of officers.

CAMBRIDGE PARISH MARKS ANNIVERSARY

Christ Church, 150 Years Old, to Have Three Days of Celebration.

Extensive arrangements are being made by the parish of Christ Church, Cambridge, for the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the first service held in that church, which was on October 15, 1761. The exercises will be held on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, October 14, 15 and 16.

On October 14, a reception will be held for the members of the parish and invited guests in the parish house, where will be exhibited many of the relics which are in the possession of the church and members. Among the relics is a silver communion service, which was given by King George III. to King's Chapel and by that church to Christ Church. There are also prayer books dating back to 1761, the original Apthorp Bible and many other articles. The reception will be held from 4 to 6 and from 7 to 10 p. m.

On October 15 there will be a service of corporate communion of the parish at 7:30 a. m. At 10:30 o'clock there will be morning prayer with special music and a historical sermon by the rector, Rev. Prescott Evarts. At 3 o'clock there will be a children's service, at which it is expected that Bishop Parker of New Hampshire will deliver an address. At 8:30 o'clock there will be a service for the clergy of the diocese and for the public at which Bishop Lawrence will preach.

On October 16, a historical meeting will be held in Sanders Theatre at 8 p. m. Bishop Lawrence will preside. President A. Lawrence Lowell will bring the greetings of Harvard University. Rev. George Hodges, dean of the Episcopal Theological School, will give a sketch of the Puritan and the Churchman. Richard H. Dana will give an address on Cambridge in 1761. Canon I. Norman Tucker of Ontario will represent the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts and will describe the work of that society in New England before the Revolution. Dr. Alexander Mann, rector of Trinity Church, Boston, will speak of the church in the United States during the past century and a half. A choir of men and boys will render church music of the eighteenth century.

It is proposed in connection with this anniversary to issue a historical volume in regard to the church.

Professor J. H. Beale is in charge of the committee on arrangements. Other committee chairmen are: Hospitality, Miss J. F. Bumstead; invitations, J. J. Greenough; reception, Miss A. M. Houghton; historical meeting, Miss S. M. de Gozzaldi; decoration, Mrs. Huntington Saville; church services, H. R. Brigham; finance, J. H. Storer; historical relics, S. F. Batchelder; publicity, Stoughton Bell.

GUILD PLANS MORE WORK.

St. Elizabeth Must Have Larger Facilities.

The Winter classes of the Guild of St. Elizabeth will begin next Saturday. Many plans are being made for the accommodation of the largely increased attendance. The Guild is the oldest and largest in the diocese. The work has grown to proportions far beyond the expectations of its founders. The demands upon it are constantly increasing, necessitating much thought and effort to keep within the means and space.

It is the wish of these young women to create a fund for the purpose of purchasing the property adjoining the house.

The board of directors is composed of Miss Maud M. Rockwell, president; Mrs. Warren M. Hill, vice-president; Miss Mary Josephine Bleakie, secretary; Miss Alice F. Murray and Miss Marie Blake, treasurer.

SOCIAL PROVES SUCCESS.

St. Ann's Ladies' Association to Meet on Monday.

The monthly meeting of St. Ann's Ladies' Association of Somerville will be held on Monday evening, October 16, in St. Ann's Hall. The various committees in charge of the Autumnal subscription party, held last Tuesday evening, are to present final reports. The party was successful. It was the first social affair held under the auspices of the new organization. The guests of honor were the Rev. Fr. Butler and his assistants, the Rev. Fr. Reynolds and Rev. Fr. Mannix.

It is the intention of the association to conduct a series of social gatherings this Winter. Announcement of the dates will be made later.

School Children Drilling.

The children of St. Anthony's Parochial School, North End, will participate in the Columbus Day celebration. They are drilling in the school yard and will add an interesting feature to the parade.

WAR OVER REVERE'S NEW TOWN SCALES

Citizens Are Disturbed by Disclosures Made by Sealer of Weights and Measures.

Citizens of Revere are stirred up over the condition of affairs in the highway department, disclosed by Sealer of Weights and Measures William J. Wills, who has revealed that of 1,282 tons of crushed stone purchased for the streets of the town, only eighteen tons have been weighed on the town scales.

Last year the town purchased new scales and they were installed in the rear of the Town Hall. The citizens in town meeting voted that all coal, hay and crushed stone or other material purchased by the tonnage should be weighed on the scales.

Last week while the new sealer of weights was at work he ordered the driver of a load of crushed stone to drive to the town scales, where it was found after weighing the load that it was 700 pounds short as called for by the slip of the driver.

Called Into Court.

Ranson Rowe, treasurer of the Rowe Construction Company, doing business in North Revere, was summoned before the Chelsea Police Court and after a hearing by Judge Stearns was found not guilty.

Superintendent of Streets Walter A. Sanctie was a witness for the government, as he purchases the stone for the town's use. He testified that he had purchased about 300 loads of stone and of that amount about two-thirds had been weighed by the public weighers. It was because of the agreement between Mr. Sanctie and Mr. Rowe that the defendant was discharged, as it was shown that by an agreement the town was to pay for the stone as weighed on the town scales.

Since that case members of the Revere Finance Committee have investigated the statements of the Superintendent of Streets, and at the meeting of the Selectmen last week Mr. Sanctie told the board that all stone was weighed.

Last Wednesday evening Public Weigher Anthony Stevens was called before the board and in response to a question by Selectman Robert W. Harding he answered that he had weighed two loads of stone, one on August 2 and another on September 19. Public Weigher Edward Parker showed by his books that he had weighed one load of stone on March 31.

Inquiry Is Rejected.

It was learned by members of the Finance Committee that the bills in the town auditor's office showed that stone had been delivered to the town on sixty-six days and that the total cost of the stone purchased was $1,614.

At the last session of the selectmen, Mr. Harding made a motion that certain town officers be requested to appear before the board and explain the statements of the superintendent of streets. This motion was defeated, Selectman Philip J. Meyer voting with Harding and Selectmen Ernest Acker, Bruno Hartung and Andrew Camass voting not to investigate the conditions further.

Because of the status of the situation at the present time it is expected an early meeting of the finance committee will be called to investigate the reason for failing to comply with the vote of the town. Not only will the superintendent of streets be requested to appear, but other officers will ...

Since the town scales have been installed coal dealers delivering coal to the town by contract have objected to being forced to cart their fuel several miles for the purpose of having the material weighed. The selectmen refused to change the order of the citizens, and since the appointment of Sealer Wills many cases of false scales and weights have been brought before the court.

MALDEN CLUB FOR BOYS.

Settlement House Workers Expect Big Attendance.

Settlement houses in every section of the city will resume within a few weeks the usual Winter classes. One of the first to begin work will be the Malden Boys' Club. Registration, which has been in progress throughout the week, indicates that the industrial classes of the institution, including weaving, sloyd, cane-seating and brass work, will be more largely attended than ever before.

In addition to the industrial work Superintendent Charles F. Ernst is ... form strong athletic teams ... resent the institution ... similar organization ...

"The Scene of Aaron's Mysterious Death."

ONE OF THE ROCKHEWN BUILDINGS OF PETRA

MOUNT Hor, the scene of the death of Aaron, the High Priest, and the strange, rock-hewn city of Petra, lie in one of the least known and most inaccessible regions in the world. This region has just been visited by R. J. Robinson, the American explorer, some of whose photographs are printed on this page.

It was on Mount Hor that one of the most remarkable scenes described in the Bible occurred—a scene that is not yet clear to all commentators. Moses and Aaron had angered the Lord because of their conduct at Meribah, when the Children of Israel were perishing of thirst.

The Book of Numbers (chapter xxi) tells us what then occurred:

23 And the Lord spake unto Moses and Aaron in Mount Hor, by the coast of the land of Edom, saying,

24 Aaron shall be gathered unto his people: for he shall not enter into the land which I have given unto the children of Israel, because ye rebelled against my word at the water of Meribah.

25. Take Aaron and Eleazar his son, and bring them up into Mount Hor:

26 And strip Aaron of his garments and put them upon Eleazar his son: and Aaron shall be gathered unto his people and shall die there.

27 And Moses did as the Lord commanded: and they went up into Mount

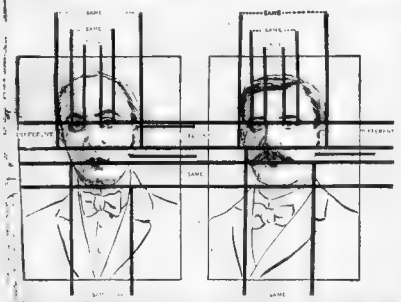
An Act to Establish and Preserve the Identity of Individuals

A Law To Prove Just Who You Are

An Enforced Scientific System to Distinguish Between Persons Indistinguishable to the Human Eye and Prevent Wicked "Missing Heir" Conspiracies.



How the Bertillon System of Measurements of Photographs Reveals a Slight Difference Between the Face of Kimmel, on the Right, and of White, His Probable Impersonator, on the Left.

IN the State of Utah a ... startling law has been proposed ... making it compulsory upon every person to be scientifically identified within one year of birth and afterwards at intervals of ... years by means of finger prints, Bertillon measurements and photographic analysis of the features.

The object of this law is to render impossible the extraordinary cases of disputed identity which have disrupted families and communities at loggerheads, led to great criminal conspiracies and caused much suffering to innocent persons.

The subject is one that deeply concerns every civilized community. Probably we have more cases of disputed identity than any other nation. At this moment it is known that Mr. and Mrs. Francis R. Arnold of New York [illegible] parents of Dorothy Arnold, who disappeared a year [illegible] ago, in dread that some impostor will appear and claim to be their missing daughter. There is no proof that poor Dorothy Arnold is dead and any woman resembling her closely might familiarize herself with the lost girl's early life and cause incalculable trouble by claiming to be she.

It has been demonstrated beyond question that many persons resemble one another so closely that it is impossible to distinguish between them by mere ocular observation. Science has done much to explain why this is so. Persons are made up of cells inherited from all their ancestors which combine in some cases so that they bear no resemblance to their parents, but a close one to some remote ancestor. Thus it may happen that two persons who know of no relationship to one another, may look exactly alike through descent from some exceedingly remote common ancestor.

But, however much alike two persons may look, science has shown that they can never be exactly alike in the impressions made by their finger prints and in all the measurements of their bodies. Hence scientific identification makes the deepest-laid conspiracies referred to impossible.

The most famous and classic case of disputed identity is the Tichborne case in England. No romance has ever presented a more intricate and improbable series of evidence than this. Yet, extraordinary as the Tichborne case was, it is duplicated in some of its most extraordinary features, and even surpassed in [illegible] by two cases now ex[illegible] life insurance policy which she held on his life. She obtained a favorable verdict and collected $50,000 from one company. A New York life insurance company, however, which carried a policy for $20,000 on his life, carried the case to a higher court, and in the meantime instituted a careful search for Kimmel.

The searchers said that they had found him under the name of Andrew J. White in Auburn Prison.

John M. Shatland, the Bertillon expert at Auburn, has declared, from measurements of old photographs of Kimmel that he and convict "Andrew J. White" are not the same man. It need hardly be said that this identification from old photographs is not conclusive and cannot be compared with the complete system of scientific education proposed in the new law.

Now the family of Kimmel and the whole population of Niles are divided into two parties, one declaring that he is their missing friend and kinsman, and the other that they never knew him.

"Only exact science could take the face of a false Dorothy Arnold, tear off the impostor's mask and reveal the real person beneath."

b. 1867 Daniel Russell died and in his will directed his oldest son William Russell, to share [illegible] $1,000,000 estate with his brother Daniel, if he could be found. In April, 1909, a breezy Westerner, since known as "Dakota Dan," breezed into Melrose and announced that he was Daniel Blake Russell, the missing member. "I have never seen you before," said William C. Russell.

Dakota Dan began suit for the estate. Soon after he arrived from Fresno, Cal., came into Melrose and announced that he was Daniel Blake Russell. He is now known as "Fresno Dan." William C. Russell and his friends, after careful examination, recognized Fresno Dan as the real missing brother.

Dakota Dan presented a very well constructed story in which he gave an account of his life since he left Melrose, at the age of twenty-three. A large majority of the townspeople hailed and identified him as the missing man. A strong effort was made to prove that he was James D. Rousseau, a former resident of Auburn, New York, who had wandered away into the West. Rousseau's own brothers and sisters swore that Dakota Dan was not their brother. It was shown that an Indian woman had slashed Jim Rousseau three times in the face with a knife and removed the lobe of his ear. Dakota Dan did not have these marks.

After the largest trial in Massachusetts, costing $100,000 in fees, Judge Lawton decided against Dakota Dan. The people of Melrose burnt William C. Russell in effigy and attacked the houses of those who had testified against Dakota Dan. The latter has now taken the case to a higher court.

Not less extraordinary is the case of the man who has just arrived at Niles, Michigan, claiming to be George Alfred Kimmel, who disappeared from that town thirteen years ago and was believed by his relatives to be dead.

The claimant has been recognized as Kimmel by the latter's old schoolteacher, by his cousin, Mrs. Harry L. Fox, and by a majority of the townspeople who knew the missing man. The mother, up to the present, has refused to identify him, although she admits that he knows facts about the family history which only her son could have known. She appears to be wavering on the point of identifying him.

Kimmel says that he left Niles where he had been a bank cashier, in 1898 to go into business in the west. He was badly beaten about the head in St. Louis, which injured his mind and memory. He wandered about New York in a condition, fell into bad company and was sent to the Auburn penitentiary for a petty theft. Seven years after his disappearance his mother began suit for the

Raising Toads to Save Farm Products

BY selling toads for use in killing insects, Hiram Potts, of Seattle Wash., is making as much money as many grain farmers.

Potts was originally engaged in the growing of vegetables. He found that the cucumber beetle destroyed so many of his cucumbers, melons and squash plants that there was little profit in it.

A letter to the Department of Agriculture suggested many things which failed. An old woman from town told him to put some toads in the patch. This he did and he found it effective. By means of a friend in Seattle he obtained seven toads which were found in a manhole of the city sewer system.

Potts made pets of these seven toads and kept them in his cave until Spring. Then he placed them all in an improvised pond in his farm and thousands of young tadpoles resulted. These ultimately became toads; mature hungry toads. He placed them in his vegetable patches and was no longer troubled with insects. Neighbors became interested and offered four toads for their keep. Potts thus became engaged in a unique traffic, and, learning the worth of his pets, he fenced them off and has been dealing them out in gross lots.

Farmers raising vegetables and grapes in the irrigated sections of Washington and Oregon have heard of Potts's toads, and this year he has sent them to hundreds of farms. He gets $5 per gross for toads of one year and older. His supply will never run low as it is said a female toad will lay a million eggs annually. Many enemies kill half of the young ones and half of the remainder die from other causes. Potts keeps his toads on his own premises by a foot-high board fastened to the fence posts. Toads cannot jump over a foot board.

Toads devour ants, sowbugs, spiders, caterpillars, plant lice, celery worms, flies, beetles, gnats, wasps and hundreds of other destructive bugs and insects. Their value is just being learned in the Northwest. Toads are harmless. They do most of their eating during dawn and dusk, and are rarely seen in daylight.

The Scene of Aaron's Mysterious Death

28. And Moses stripped Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar, his son; and Aaron died there in the top of the mount; and Moses and Eleazar came down from the mount.

The land of Edom, in which Mount Hor is situated, was populated by an interesting prehistoric people, with whom Moses and the Israelites fought on their way to the Promised Land. Later it was partly colonized by those Israelite tribes which settled east of the Jordan. In the Greek and Roman periods it reached a high degree of civilization. Since those times it has become a savage wilderness.

Its downfall is a fulfilment of the prophecy that the inheritance of Esau shall become "a desolation and a curse."

At the base of Mount Hor lies the curious city of Petra, the ancient capital of Edom, whose principal buildings are hewn entirely out of the solid rock. From its nature it can never be destroyed.

Petra is now peopled only by wild Bedouins of the desert, who believe that its ruins conceal vast treasures. Of the few white travelers who have approached the place, most have been driven away by the Bedouins.

Petra lies in a long valley of red sandstone. The wonderful entrance ravine, called the Sik, is over a mile in length, and winds about continuously. At points the walls are two hundred and fifty feet high, and the opening is not more than twelve feet wide. On leaving this gloomy defile, the first object seen is the beautiful rose-colored temple known as the "Treasury of Pharaoh."

The city is majestic, a mass of stately facades, pediments, pilasters all hewn out of the solid rock. The great amphitheatre contains thirty-three tiers of seats, and is capable of holding 4,000 persons. Near by are widely cut tombs. In front is a great obelisk, all around are churches, temples, buildings, standing there empty, as if awaiting the return of the ancient inhabitants.

A short walk takes the explorer to Mount Hor, on the summit of which stands a little white-domed tomb raised by the Arabs over the supposed burial place of Aaron.

KICKED OFF PARNASSUS!

The Sordid Ejectment That Threatens the Distinguished, Ultra-Artistic Tenants of the Biron Palace, (Even the Great Rodin Among 'em) but Gives, Perhaps, Extraordinary Mrs. Gouraud, of U. S. A., Another Actor Husband!

Paris, Oct. 5.

BIRON PALACE, or the Hotel de Biron, as the palaces of the ancient nobility are styled in French, is one of the points of interest before which all tourists bow with reverent heads. It is the Mount Parnassus of France.

The great Rodin, the foremost sculptor of the age, is there. So is Isadora Duncan with her little bare feet and her dogs, Signora Duse, who makes it her home while in Paris; Max de Max, the beautiful, the former leading man of Sarah Bernhardt and the only actor who ever stirred the temperof Jane Hading to the slapping point, has his apartments there. Cleo de Merode, too. Poets, musicians, playwrights, painters, the leaders of Art with an immense A, to the number of sixty live in the Biron Palace.

And there is Mrs. Jack Gouraud, the extraordinary American woman who so loves Orientals and who is a millionairess fifteen times over.

At once it will be seen why the Biron Palace is called the Mount Parnassus of Paris!

But woe to the Muses! Woe to art! The sordid hand of ejectment threatens these dwellers on the sanctuary; yes, one and all, even the Great Rodin! Paris is up in arms!

There has been nothing like the excitement since the last barricades were erected!

But two of the ejectees are happy, for lo, the very force which threatens to propel these artistic souls from Parnassus has, it is said, thrown the aforesaid Max de Max into Mrs. Gouraud's arms, and Mrs. Gouraud, who was the beautiful Amy Crocker, of San Francisco, who has been married several times, is worth $15,000,000, and who has a collection of Oriental furniture and jewels worth at least a million, is to be Mrs. Max de Max.

There are always compensations in art!

Sympathy for Mrs. Gouraud in a recent affliction brought her and the actor together. It was Max de Max's tender condolences over the death of two of Mrs. Gouraud's favorite dogs and his heroic action in accompanying them to the Dog Cemetery in Paris, said dogs being encased in gorgeous mummy cases which had once been the last beds of Egyptian princesses, won Mrs. Gouraud over finally.

And, oddly enough, it was Isadora Duncan's dogs to which the concierge of the Palace objected and which a gallant court restored to her aching arms that has caused the present sorrow of all these great artists.

"That dear Calve. It will disrupt her nerves, so often shaken. Mon Dieu. She will finally lose her voice."

"The wonderful hand of Rodin, so delicate, so sensitive, will lose its cunning!"

"It is said that Cleo de Merode forgot to arrange her hair in saintly fashion and she looked quite earthly, indeed, my dear, very nearly wicked."

"The beautiful Gallois lives there. Did you know? And it is said when she received the notice she had a lapse of memory and exclaimed, 'My dear Nicholas!' It reminded her of her eviction from Russia for the good of the imperial household."

"My dear, how droll you are. I supposed the Gallois's memory was a short one."

"But an Emperor, my love."

"True. And do you know what this eviction may cause? It may evict De Max, the beautiful De Max, into the arms and the millions of that American with the French soul, Mme. Aimee Gouraud."

"And there will be for De Max no more bachelor gaiety. No more youthful poets seeking to die on his doorstep."

So wags the nimble tongue of Paris.

The Biron Palace was the home of the pious Marquis de Biron, who bequeathed it to the Sisters of the Sacred Heart. The sisterhood did not long enjoy the palace, which they had converted into a school for the daughters of wealthy French and American families. Finally litigation by the heirs of the marquis caused the sisterhood to be expelled.

The portion of the family acquiring possession reconstructed it, dividing it into sixty apartments, which were quickly filled with famous painters, playwrights, poets, actors, novelists, dancers, beauties and sculptors, who took up their abode in this dovecote of genius.

Rodin concerned himself with the troublesome details of a long lease and became an occupant of the palace. There the lovely Marquise de Choiseul and the febrile Duse called at his studio and inspired his magnificent models. Rodin alone would have made the palace famous, but the collection of other great folk in art made it unique.

Sometimes upon the windows the shadows of Isadora Duncan's form could be seen floating, transparently clad and with feathery lights, through the figures of ancient Greek dances. Sometimes the dances were interrupted by two beautiful children, a boy and a girl, the girl a granddaughter of Ellen Terry. Miss Duncan calls her children "the children of Pan," and so they seem when she whirls them in dryad waltzes.

Mr. Max De Max, the Parisian Actor, Another Tenant of the Palace, Whose Sorrow at Ejectment Is Softened by Mrs. Gouraud.

MRS "JACK" GOURAUD

ISADORA DUNCAN

The first dissension came when complaint was made about Isadora Duncan's dogs. Miss Duncan likes to have her pets around. Some of the tenants were filled with fear at the romping of the brutes through the corridors. The concierge grew steadily more indignant. The Biron family grew intensely bitter after several of the Duncan dogs had nearly caused one of their rich maternal aunts to die of fright. The dogs must go, they said.

"Never!" said Miss Duncan.

"Then you and the dogs must go!" said the Birons.

"I have a long lease," said Miss Duncan.

There was a deadlock. The dancer carried the case to the courts. It was threshed out in the wonderful French manner. The gallant judges conceded that Miss Duncan had a right to keep her dogs and herself in the palace as long as her lease allows.

Quite soon after pets of Mrs. Gouraud, very beautiful St. Bernard dogs, died mysteriously. There were whisperings that the two were sacrificed in the place of Miss Duncan's dogs. In other words, Mrs. Gourard's dogs had seen whatever there was first and had eaten it. Nothing could be proved. Mrs. Gouraud took two of her most wonderful mummy cases, in which centuries ago the bodies of beautiful Egyptian princesses had been placed, and used them to contain the bodies of her dead pets.

Max de Max heard of the misfortune of his fellow tenant. He wrote an exquisite letter of condolence. Mrs. Gouraud replied. She invited him to call. She told him of the wonderful sarcophagi, in which kings' daughters had rested, which were to encase her pets for eternity. Max de Max wept at the tender story. Encouraged by his sympathy Mrs. Gouraud invited him to the funeral of her pets. Max de Max walked behind as a mourner. Mrs. Gouraud's heart was nearly won.

She moved from the palace. She invited him to her new home, 13 Avenue Elle Reclus. He visited often.

"I am to be ejected," he told her sorrowfully.

"Live here," is said to have cried Mrs. Gouraud, completely won. The marriage may be soon. M. de Max is a man of romance, as Mrs. Gouraud is a woman of romance. He is a Roumanian, the reputed son of a queen, and apart from his salary draws a royal income.

Gyp wrote her two novels in the Biron palace. Lanteime, in a pet at her husband, removed to his congenial atmosphere until he followed and on his knees begged her to return.

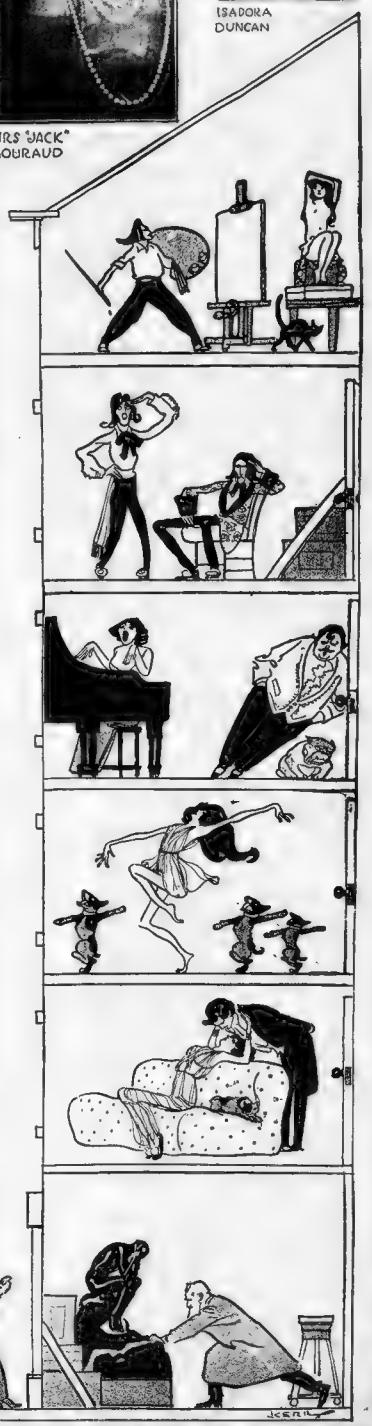
Jane Hading rested there after a provincial tour. Meeting De Max in the hall she revived the quarrel at rehearsal, whose climax had been the boxing of his ears.

"You made a face. I saw you!"

"So I did, lovely one, but not at you. I stuck out by tongue at Guitry."

They went to her wee dining room for chocolate and mutual forgiveness.

Mary Garden tarried there for a time. So did Fanchon Thompson. Some of the tenants loved, some quarrelled. Duels and threats of duels proceeded out of it. And now in part because of the prying neighbors, in part because of further litigation, the notice of eviction may any day be posted on its doors.



"When the dire day comes we will resist," says Parnassus. "M. Rodin may use his statues to barricade; M. de Max will rehearse with fervor; Mlle. Duncan will dance with full abandon; Mme. Calve sing he loudest; our poets think their hardest! our painters paint their best! Can these canaille overcome this outburst of art? Never! They will fly!"

Early Winter Dresses

Straight Slenderness of Outline, Fur Trimmings and Embroideries of Gold and Black, with Tunic Coats, Gracefully Mark the Newest Models

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, presenting all that is newest and best in styles for well-dressed women.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

In the early Winter season fashion puts its best foot forward—it is the beginning of the year's gayest social season, the feminine mind is astir, alert, ready and eager for the new and correct color.

So I am showing you here, with photographs for illustration, three new models of gowns designed to go with the first snows of the year, and which I believe will appeal to your artistic sense, as well as to your feelings regarding fashion's conformity with good taste.

A new afternoon gown of supreme simplicity and charm is of soft gray charmeuse only adorned midway on the skirt by a band of moleskin and the draperies on the left side being so contrived as to show a long and grace-giving line unbroken by the fur.

The crossed folds of the corsage are held in by swathing of Autumn leaf [illegible] weight with silver, the shorter sash end being bordered with narrow pleatings of [illegible] gold and brown and finally [illegible] with delicate leaf [illegible]. A stole and muff of moleskin are additions to protective as well as decorative value, and the picturesqueness of the bejumbled hat of silk beaver is thoroughly in harmony with the dress.

Another costume is shown which in its straight slenderness of outline at once proclaims itself as infinitely more desirable and becoming in every way than those many new and unlovely models in for this season which have gained skirts, whose ungraceful [illegible] at the back is accentuated by [illegible] abbreviation of [illegible] coats.

Coat and Skirt of Soft Brocaded Silk, with Autumn Shades in Violet Trimmings.

Navy blue coating serge is the fabric chosen for its making and the distinct features of the tunic coat include epaulettes of gold and black braids, sundry diamond shaped buttons of gold cord and connecting loops of black braid, and a belt of wide black military braid, whose deeply fringed ends is reveal—as the wearer walks—a glimpse of olive green satin lining.

There is another touch of green introduced on either end of the black velvet band on the neck, where it makes a background for embroidery of black and gold.

So much for the coat, while then, the skirt is arranged in upturned tunic form in the front, but only in the front, the back being left plain, and a final bordering of the wide braid coming at the hem.

The soft brocaded silk which, as a fabric for coat and skirt costumes, makes its debut this season is here shown off to excellent advantage by a very simple but quite perfect cut and style.

Dead leaf brown is the shading of the silk, while the warmer golden brown of other and more vitalized foliage is represented by the velvet of the roll collar, this latter fabric being used again in conjunction with the brocade for the fashioning of the two long-looped ornaments which serve both as fastening and finish.

Smoked fox fur borders sleeves and skirt, while other bands of fur divide the gauged and corded fullness of the great muff of the warmly hued velvet. The velvet hat to match can also boast of a trimming of fur arranged in an upstanding militant style, which is as strikingly smart as it is new.

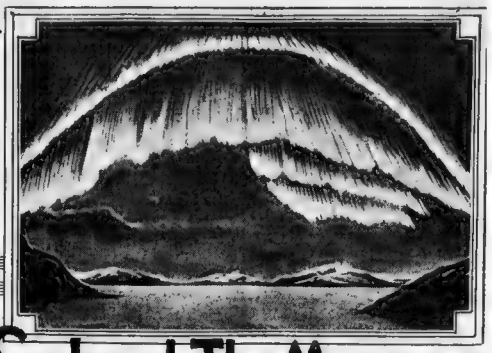
Altogether the color scheme of the whole costume pays such a pretty compliment to nature's Autumnal mood that she in return will assuredly provide any number of harmonious and efficient backgrounds when its wearer takes her walks abroad in park or boulevard.

Very soon I shall talk to you about fashion's decrees respecting accessories of the Winter costume. Here and now just a word as to evening wraps. Many of them are made in the reversible form, which enables every woman to be a "turn coat" this being a fashionable distinction nowadays instead of a political disgrace, while their gorgeous metallic tissues and velvet brocades are combined with ermine or skunk to give an effect of costly richness which has rarely before been attempted or achieved.

In fact, there never was a time when by making the right or the wrong use of fabrics and fashions, women can be either so supremely beautiful or so exceedingly ugly. The matter is to a great extent in their own hands; or rather, perhaps I should say, in their figures, whose outlines and perfection are of as vital importance as in the days of those other "revelation" modes—the Merveilleuse and the Directoire.

So that if your figure cannot, even with the help of the "Statue" corset, adapt itself gracefully to the present styles, you must create or discover a style to suit your figure, and by thus daring to be distinctive insure a success and a charm which you could never achieve if you merely made yourself into a slavish and grotesque copy of those to whom both Nature and the fashions had been more kind.

Solved—The Mystery of the Aurora!



Ingenious Experiment Proves It Is Due to Electrified Particles from the Sun

THAT marvelous and beautiful spectacle, the aurora borealis, has hitherto been a complete puzzle to scientists. Until recently it was impossible even to make a photograph of the aurora.

It is certain that there is a connection between the aurora and electrical disturbances on earth, for the former never passes without the latter. During a great auroral display of September 25, 1909, telegraph communication was interrupted all over the world.

Svante Arrhenius, the great Swedish scientist, has now put forward the theory that the aurora is the result of electrified particles thrown off by the sun. To test this theory M. Birkeland has directed an electrical discharge of the kind described against a globe and succeeded in reproducing a miniature aurora.

The theory of Professor Arrhenius is that the sun is continually discharging ionized gases. They condense and form particles which are electrified negatively. These are thrown out all over the universe by the force of radiation.

These particles emit cathode rays, similar to those which produce X-rays. They enter into combination with terrestrial electric currents, are attracted to the poles in accordance with the laws of magnetism and give rise to the aurora, just as the cathode rays in a Crookes tube produce a beautiful light.

M. Birkeland directed a powerful beam of cathode rays upon a small magnetic globe representing the earth. It was covered with a coating of crystals of platinum and barium to make visible the places struck by the cathode rays. A blaze of brilliant electrical illumination formed itself over the top of the globe representing the North Pole, or over the bottom of the globe, representing the South Pole. The place where the illumination concentrated itself varied according to the manner in which the experimenter manipulated the cathode rays. It showed itself slightly between the poles. Altogether it was a close reproduction of the way the auroral lights are distributed over the earth.

There seems to be no doubt now of the origin of the aurora. It is due to a swarm of cathode particles from the sun playing about a magnetized earth.

How to Stain Wood in Your Growing Trees

THE interesting experiment of dyeing the wood in living trees, says a writer on the current number of Science Conspectus, has been successfully carried out by making a fine groove around the trunk deep enough to expose the wood just inside the bark.

A string having a diameter slightly greater than the groove is wound around the trunk completely filling the groove and thus protecting the wood from the action of the air. If now the ends of the string dip into a solution of coloring matter, the latter is absorbed by the tree. The solution is renewed until the wood is dyed to the desired intensity. Observations are made from time to time by boring small holes into the tree.

The length of time necessary to dye the wood depends upon the species of tree, the temperature and the season of the year. The best results are obtained just before the leaves fall in the Autumn. The absorption of the coloring matter is selective; that is to say, all coloring matter is not absorbed by every tree, and in general decided preference is shown for the colored extracts of other trees.

The wood is not stained uniformly, and the mottled effects are very beautiful. The color in the heart of the tree is not perceptibly changed.

Aren't There Any Ladies Any More?

ONE of the most remarkable and significant books published in recent years is entitled "The Lady," by Emily James Putnam, and is issued by Sturgis & Walton Company, New York

The paragraphs from this volume printed on this page serve to show, by the authority of an author who is herself a woman, how the lady rose with more or less honor and then declined to her present position of elegant parasite

By Emily James Putnam

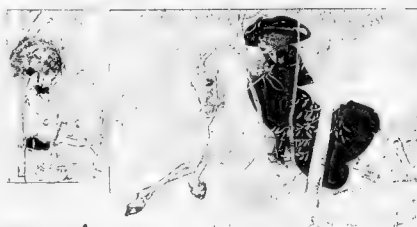
THE lady is proverbial for her skill in eluding definition, but for the purpose of the present discussion she may be described merely as the female of the favored social class. Every discussion of the status of woman is complicated by the existence of the lady. She overshadows the rest of her sex.

Economically she is supported by the toil of others, but, while this is equally true of other classes of society, the oddity in her case consists in the acquiescence of those most concerned. The lady herself feels no uneasiness in her equivocal situation, and the toilers who support her do so with enthusiasm. She is not a producer; in most communities productive labor is by consent unladylike. On the other hand, she is the heaviest of consumers, and theorists have not been wanting to maintain that the more she spends the better off society is.

In aristocratic societies she is required for dynastic reasons to produce offspring, but in democratic societies even this demand is often waived.

In the United States during the two generations preceding the war for the Union the slave States furnished the background for perhaps the last example the world will see on a large scale of the feudal lady.



"The birth of character would be the preliminary step toward becoming an efficient stenographer."

"In aristocratic societies she is required for dynastic reasons to produce offspring."

Read How One of Her Own Sex Traces Her Development as an Honored Social Factor and Her Decadence Into a Mere Parasite

"Every lady who listened to troubadour or jongleur was furnished with the material for constructing a fresh estimate of her own importance."

But the typical lady everywhere tends to a feudal habit of mind. In contemporary society she is an archaism.

There have been times which her primary social requirement has apparently been waived; it seems difficult, for instance, so to classify the lady as to exclude Aspasia and Louise de la Vallière. Nevertheless, the true lady is in theory either a virgin or a lawful wife.

A lady may become a recluse in the strictest and poorest order without altering her view of life, without the moral convulsion, the destruction of false ideas, the birth of character which would be the preliminary steps toward becoming an efficient stenographer.

It seems pretty plain from the accounts given by the anthropologists of the ancient history of our race that the gentleman appeared far earlier than the lady. * * * If today her husband toils that she may be idle, there was a time when the relation was reversed. The first systematic leisure, we are told, was achived by the man who discovered that the woman's occasional preoccupation with matters gave him a chance to bring her into subjection. From that day he reserved himself for the tasks more congenial to his physique and his temperament.

As the gentleman decays, the lady survives as the strongest evidence of his former predominance. Where he sets her, there she stays.

The lady's life, and even her character, are always sensibly modified by the house she lives in, and the house represents the social or economic requirements of the man of her class.

The lady of the castle was virtually the only woman in a society consisting of men generally younger than herself who were socially her husband's inferiors, and who therefore paid court to her. If she had any personal force or charm these circumstances were highly favorable to its exertion.

Such a theory was developed and perfected in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, and came by degrees to color the whole of literature. . . . How far this theory actually modified life we are not in a position to say. It is certain, however, that every lady who listened to troubadour or jongleur, or who read for herself the new love songs and romances, was furnished with the material for constructing a fresh estimate of her own importance.

At all times, everywhere, and by all the ladies, love is admitted to be the most acceptable of gifts. With fact the humblest may offer it without offense, the highest without conferring obligation. The lady's power to excite love was to her what the lord's prowess in battle was to him. . . . If a little good will went to produce the vasomotor disturbance that was the sign of love, it was applied with the intent not to deceive the lady, but to play the game. The spirit of the code can be gathered from a few examples

1. Marriage is not a valid excuse from love
11. Common love seldom endures
15. Every lover is wont to grow pale at sight of the beloved.
18. Virtue alone makes one worthy of love
23. The thought of love makes a man sleep less and eat less.
24. Every action of the lover ends in thoughts of the beloved.
25. The true lover cares for nothing save what he deems pleasant to the beloved.
30. The true lover is forever and without interruption occupied by the image of the beloved

In the course of the Renaissance the lady developed a waist. . . . . Thus gaily was ushered into the lady's life one of the most sinister phenomena in her history, the corset. . . . . .

The difference between the status of the lady at Athens in the fifth century before Christ and her status in France in the eighteenth century of our era is so profound that other social changes seem comparatively negligible.

At Athens she was allowed the dignities belonging to the head of the household on condition of fidelity to her husband. In France she even strengthened her position in the house while no longer fulfilling the condition. She had of old been a lady as distinguished from a courtesan; in the eighteenth century the distinction had disappeared except as between amateurs and professionals.

"Theorists maintain that the more she spends the better off society is."

She is the Dr. Wiley of the Seed Market

THE principle of the pure food law has been extended to seeds in the State of Washington. Laws have been passed making it imperative that seeds offered for sale shall be so labelled as to indicate the percentage of purity, and the dealer who mixes Canadian blue grass with the simon pure Kentucky article, or sweet clover or trefoil with red clover or alfalfa will have to pay heavy penalties

That farmers and dealers who purchase seeds may know whether or not these laws have been complied with, a woman has been assigned to test all samples of seed sent to her. This woman is Miss Louise M. Allen, A. M., and her position with regard to seeds is a good deal like that of Dr. Wiley with regard to food

Miss Allen will test and report without expense on all samples sent by farmers to the State Department. Dealers, however, will have to pay a nominal charge.

During June and July Miss Allen visited seed dealers in various parts of the State, looking over what they had in stock and giving them suggestions for obtaining better grades for Fall stock. A local seed dealer who had purchased from an Eastern firm twelve sacks of red clover seed for early Fall trade. The test showed that he had bought from samples which contained a large per cent of dodder, buckhorn and other weeds, besides a number of large pieces of dirt. His bags of seeds were very much like the samples. He will either have to reclean the seed or reship it to the Eastern firm at considerable loss

It would have been worth considerably more than 50 cents to him to have known what he was buying per cent of all alfalfa and red clover contained dodder. This is one of the worst weed pests known. It is a parasite making no root structure of its own, but sapping the strength and nourishment from the plant on which it grows. It spreads rapidly and finally chokes out a crop

In Oregon, last year, 44 per cent of all alfalfa samples examined contained dodder. Most red clover was contaminated by the pest

The hope of the department established this Summer is to help the farmer to get better seeds and thus aid the salesmen to sell better seeds. For seed dealers the department will make three to five tests per month at 50 cents per sample. The number allowed per month will have to be limited to the amount of work on hand.

His bags of seeds were very much like the samples. He will either have to reclean the seed or reship it to the Eastern firm at considerable loss

WHY YOU SHOULD NOT SHAKE HANDS. All Kinds of Deadly Diseases Are Communicated by the Grip of the Friendly but Germ-Filled Palms.

Six Pictorial Reasons Against Handshaking.

Look at any hand through a high power microscope. Unless it is kept antiseptically scoured all through the day it will be found infected with the germs of diphtheria, pneumonia, typhoid and other deadly diseases gathered up in the course of the day by contact with a thousand infected articles.

A DETERMINED campaign against the useless and unhygienic habit of hand-shaking is being carried on by scientists all over the civilized world. In Europe this crusade against one of the most general and efficacious means of distributing the germs of disease has already gained popular headway In this country bills have been introduced in the Legislatures of several States with the object of legally restricting the practice of both kissing and hand-shaking

Of these two means of spreading disease scientific judgment gives the palm to the senseless hand-shaking habit, the hand being the organ of organs in man that places him in communication with surrounding objects, and by its very structure and function being specially adapted to collect minute bacteria of disease, to preserve them in an active state and to mechanically transplant them in the mucus of mouth and nose, there to multiply and do their deadly work.

And, thanks to the universal custom of hand-shaking, the cleanly hand and its owner's body are at the mercy of every dirty, germ-collecting hand.

The palm of the human hand is a most admirable catch-all and preservative of germ life. It is composed of lines and ridges to catch and detain minute objects, of which disease germs are the most minute and easily detained, and is pierced with myriad pores communicating with the underlying mucus and glandular tissues, which supply ample moisture and nutrition to maintain the activity of germ life.

The hand is constantly touching objects most calculated to be infested with disease microbes—handkerchiefs, toothpicks, gloves, hats, boots, hanging straps in trolley cars, stair rails; a hundred times a day its fingers go to the nose, the mouth or the hair—all repositories, and the two former important culture receptacles of multiplying germ life.

Every trade and profession furnishes its special access to morbid bacteria, with the hand the triumphant collecting and preserving medium. If you are introduced to a stranger, who, according to custom, extends his hand with friendly intent, the same absurd custom bars you from withholding your own hand until he gives a satisfactory answer to your question.

"Is your hand clean? Are you a sausage maker, a tripe seller, a pork butcher or a dresser of the hides of dead animals?"

No; through custom and habit you weakly take the hand offered to you and hope for the best. Quite possibly you go home, examine the baby's first tooth and leave in its mouth the cause of a fatal attack of some intestinal disease

This is a brief survey of the reasons why the scientific crusade against hand-shaking is rapidly gaining headway, and why it should be completely successful. Below, the medico-scientific aspect of the matter is admirably set forth by R. G. Eccles, M. D., an authority respected by the medical profession on both sides of the Atlantic.

The Distinguished Bacteriological Expert.

WHENEVER we shake hands with another—whether friend or stranger—prudent care of our health demands an early use of soap, water and a clean towel.

Every time we shake hands with another we face a possible menace to our lives which, though often exceedingly slight, is never wholly absent. Science has told us—and in no uncertain way—that a threat of possible death hovers over us, like a sword of Damocles, when we fail to thoroughly cleanse our hands following their contact with the hands of other human beings.

Diseased people—and there are thousands of them at large—by shaking hands with others scatter the virus of their respective diseases wherever they go. Being immune themselves, they lo not suspect the fact of their great danger to others, who have never had these diseases. It does not, therefore, occur to them that their lack of cleanliness in not caring, with the utmost attention, to the condition of their hands is scattering death in every direction.

But it is the handling of food and milk by these carriers, or by those with whom they have shaken hands, that causes the greatest mischief. Our public health and marine hospital service has collected and published reports of numerous epidemics of scarlet fever, diphtheria and typhoid fever that have been positively proven to be due to virus grown in milk and ice cream

The danger is not, as many imagine, in a direct transmission of the disease germs from our hands to our bodies. The cells of our bodies can kill multitudes of disease germs, but there is a limit to their killing powers, and the few taken upon our hands by contact with other human hands have to reach a place where they are capable of multiplying into a deadly dose.

To those not familiar with the facts upon which such conclusions are based such a claim savors of rank sensationalism. To those who have learned the few simple facts these conclusions are well-nigh irresistible.

Refusal to master the facts governing the prevention of disease and opposition to the sanitary efforts of boards of health is usually due to our love for some time-honored habit which many of us are unwilling to abandon. The hand-shaking habit, in the eyes of those who know just what kinds of dirt a large number of human hands constantly carry, is an exceedingly filthy and disgusting one, yet it is likely to be a very long time before we are willing to give it up

Its origin, too, can scarcely commend it to us as a sacred one. Our savage ancestors, during their most savage state, are credited as being its originators. It was their proof of good intentions and an absence of contemplated treachery. While holding each other's right hands they could not very readily kill each other by stealth. As a habit it has persisted from that day to this, and as a habit it has been one of the most efficient means of passing disease along from individual to individual.

On money, clothing, furniture, toys, house walls and the like disease germs soon perish. Those found in these places are usually dead or dying, since such conditions are found to be inimical to their lives. On human hands, on the contrary, the germs are generally freshly deposited, hence very much alive and capable, under suitable conditions, of rapidly multiplying into countless millions.

People having consumption, colds in the head, influenza and other diseases of the respiratory organs cannot avoid freshly covering their hands every few minutes with the virus of their diseases. When we shake hands with a man suffering from the grippe, coryza or the nose or other similar ailment their germs adhere to our hands, and we become, to that extent, disease carriers. If we pick our noses with our infected fingers we sow these germs in the dead mucus, where they can multiply into legions and overcome bodily resistance

In this way, from hand to hand, go colds, grippe, throat affections and the like. In the Hebrides and other isolated small islands, where traffic is light, however bad the weather may be, they get no severe colds. Let a ship arrive in which the sailors have bad colds and soon every person on the island is sneezing and coughing. The bad weather finds the nose with dead mucus in which these germs can multiply beyond the power of the cells to destroy them.

Typhoid fever, summer complaints, cholera, scarlet fever, diphtheria and other infectious and contagious diseases have their carriers. People who have had typhoid fever become immune to its germs, but carry them for years and literally hand them out daily to those with whom they shake hands. They keep infecting their own hands, and, by contact, the hands of others. This, remember, keeps on for many years after they have become to all appearances perfectly well.

Tens of thousands of human beings lose their lives by the lack of cleanliness of hand shakers who fail to wash their hands. Millions of babies go to their eternal rest through infected milk that probably would never have been infected if more people made a regular habit of washing their hands with greater frequency

The menace is one that is constant, and is certainly as deadly as it is constant, but it has been greatly misunderstood as regards its way of bringing death. It is too real to need the slightest breath of sensationalism.

Let the public get at the facts and its reality will quickly be appreciated

The Newest Crime of the Filthy House Fly—Carrier of Infantile Paralysis.

ANOTHER point has been made in the long list of horrible offences against human life and health charged to the common house fly.

Dr. Simon Flexner and Dr. Paul F. Clark, of the great Rockefeller Institute, New York, have shown that the virus of infantile paralysis may be carried by the common house fly. This disease, as most people know, is one of the most terrible and widespread that afflicts children. No adequate remedy for it has been found

In many epidemics of the disease it appeared probable that the virus was conveyed directly from one child to another, but physicians were puzzled to know why the disease also broke out at widely distant points in a sparsely populated community. It was suggested that the infection was conveyed by house flies and it has been proved at the Rockefeller Institute that this is possible.

"There are still so many unsolved problems relating to the manner of the spread of epidemic poliomyelitis that every new fact would, at present, seem worth recording," say the doctors. "The present point of view based on seemingly accurate clinical observation, is to the effect that many cases of the disease can be connected with each other through evidence of direct and indirect contact of the ill and the well. Not all cases, however, have been so connected, and it remains, therefore, to ascertain whether any other agency than human contact may be invoked to account for the distribution of the infectious agent."

The experiments were made upon little monkeys, who show all the human susceptibility to this disease. Full-grown flies were permitted to feed on the fresh spinal cord removed from monkeys inoculated with the virus of infantile paralysis. After feeding, the flies were removed to a fresh receptacle from which certain of them were taken forty-eight hours later, killed with ether, then pounded with sand and extracted with saline solution, from which a bacteria-free filtrate was obtained

The filtrate was injected into the brain of little rhesus monkeys. Their health was unaffected by this operation, but six to ten days later they exhibited all the symptoms of infantile paralysis and became progressively paralysed. An autopsy, in two cases, showed the characteristic lesions of infantile paralysis in the spinal cord.

"Experiment 2—Another Macacus rhesus monkey was inoculated intracerebrally on May 3 with a filtrate prepared from the bodies of ten flies, which had fed forty-eight hours before on the spinal cord obtained from a paralysed monkey. After recovering from the ether anesthesia, this animal remained well until May 13. By May 14, paralysis of all four extremities had developed and the animal was etherized. The autopsy showed characteristic lesions of experimental poliomyelitis in the spinal cord."

These experiments proved the very important fact that the common house fly could carry the virus in an active and deadly condition for at least forty-eight hours. It remains possible that the fly may carry the active virus much longer than that and that the virus may survive in the digestive tract of the insect. Further experiments are being carried on to decide these two points.

These experiments should make people more than ever determined to banish the filthy house flies from their dwelling places

The Newest Discoveries of Medical Science

Fighting Death Away from Babies WITH SEA WATER

By Prof. J. V. Marchand, of the Sorbonne, Paris.

Paris, Sept. 20

THE extraordinary success of Professor Rene Quinton in treating diseases of children with his sea water cure is exciting great interest in the medical world. During the past Summer thousands of babies actually at the point of death from infantile cholera have been saved almost miraculously by the sea water cure. The treatment has been given in Paris and London.

Professor Quinton's treatment is based on a very interesting scientific theory. He holds that every human being is a walking aquarium, a colony of little marine animals which must perpetually bathe in salt water to live. The salt water is the blood. If the water in the aquarium gets pure the fish become sick and die.

Millions of years ago life originated in the oceans, which then practically covered the earth. The oceans were warm, about the present temperature of the blood. This theory also holds that the body shows a strong tendency to preserve in its interior former conditions of life on earth.

Even now more than half the living creatures on the globe live in the sea. The first living creatures were tiny marine cells like the individual cells of the body. Competition and variation then caused creatures of more than one cell to evolve.

All sorts of complex forms were evolved, from corals and sponges up to fishes. Then came a time when the ocean became crowded and certain adventurous forms of life poked their noses out of the water and ventured occasionally upon the newly formed continents. Some of their descendants forsook the element of their birth altogether and settled on land. In order to do this they had to carry a supply of the original life-giving salt fluid within them. We have it to-day in the salty blood, for the animals that first left the ocean were the direct ancestors of man.

Now the wasting condition which follows many diseases and particularly infantile Summer diseases, is found to be accompanied by a loss of the salts of the blood. Professor Quinton's remedy is to go to the primeval source of life and use it to restore the enfeebled body to health. He uses for this purpose water taken from the deep sea, containing a full proportion of salts and marine life, and free from germs. He calls it "marine plasma." It is injected into the body subcutaneously.

Professor Quinton sends me, from his hospital at 17, Rue d'Ouessant, the following details of his treatment: "A baby seriously attacked with infantile cholera should receive two injections a day of marine plasma—one in the morning and the other at night—each injection of three and a half ounces at least. In very serious cases, which have reached the stage immediately preceding death agony, with the abdomen relaxed and hollow eyes sunken, eyelids fixed, nose pinched, forehead hot, jaws cold, lips colder still—each injection should be of at least seven ounces.

"As no evil effects follow, the doctor may, if he has the least doubt, employ the larger quantity in all cases. In extreme cases, which have reached the comatose stage, we frequently make use of doses of ten ounces.

"These injections of three and a half to seven ounces twice daily should be continued for six consecutive days. After this period the baby should continue to receive injections of three and a half to seven ounces for at least a week, no matter what its apparent improvement may be. This is very important.

"The diet during treatment should be as follows: The baby should be immediately fed with milk, and for the first six days should be given air or seven feeding bottles full per day, according to age, a daily supply equal to a tenth of the weight of the child. Twenty grammes (twelve drams) of pure water should be added to each bottle of milk. Between every two bottles of milk the baby should be given a bottle of pure water, without sugar, each of these bottles of water being half the size of the bottles of milk. The child will take part or the whole of the water according to his thirst

"The first bottle of pure water should be given one hour after the first injection; the first bottle of milk an hour after the first bottle of water

"After six days of this diet the doctor may increase the quantity of milk and give the child daily a ninth, then an eighth, then a seventh of its weight.

"In cases where the temperature before the injection of sea water is below 103 degrees Fahr., the doctor should order the child a bath of fifteen minutes in water at 99 degrees Fahr All injections should be made in the back in the region of the shoulder blades."

In administering the treatment, a tube of sea water hermetically sealed at both ends and graduated to allow of the dose being measured, is hung from a nail on the wall. The seal is broken, a rubber tube, to which a forceps is clipped, is fastened to the lower end, and the hypodermic needle, in which the tube ends, is sterilized in a spirit lamp.

The insertion of the needle gives a considerable shock to an adult, but a baby evidently feels less pain.

For the first three hours there is a feeling of swelling and stiffness. After this comes a shivering stage. This is accompanied by a fall in temperature and is followed in about half an hour by fever, the temperature rising to 103 degrees, but steadily declining from that figure after the first injection.

After about an hour the temperature commences very slowly to fall and the fever, though it may still be comparatively high, does not prohibit sleep; but one wakes after a few hours in an extraordinarily profuse perspiration, which is of great benefit.

I have seen babies recover under this treatment so rapidly that it was hard to believe the evidence of my own eyes. They had lost every quality which one associates with life. Their wizened bodies were the color of a corpse. The eyes were closed, the mouth was drawn across the purple face in a frightful grin. There was nothing but shrunken skin upon the skeleton.

Yet within a few hours of the injection most of these poor creatures were visibly, almost happily, alive, and might even be drinking milk, which had not passed their lips for days or had only passed to return immediately

It is not on infants only that the treatment performs its miracles. M. Quinton has in his possession photographs illustrating its efficacy in a wonderful variety of diseases, many of them of a malignancy that responds but uncertainly to ordinary treatment.

In his earlier experiments Professor Quinton took a dog and bled it of every drop of blood that would run out of its veins. The animal lay on the operating table to all appearances dead. Then Professor Quinton injected into its veins a quantity of sea water equal to that of the blood lost, whereupon the dog sat up, wagged its tail and was soon running about just as lively as ever.

Studying Dreams to Cure Us of Our Nervous Diseases.

DREAMS are always very mysterious and interesting. They reveal the operations of our unconscious mind. Science has lately been very busy trying to explain what they really mean.

A particularly interesting series of experiments with dreams has begun in the Henry Phipps Psychiatric Clinic of the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore. The object of these experiments is to cure nervous disease by studying the dreams of the patients.

The physicians are following out the teachings of Dr. Sigmund Freud, a physician, of Vienna, who believes that man is influenced by two distinct personalities. One, Dr. Freud believes, has its influence in the waking hours, when man's faculties and bodily action are at their height. The other or lesser personality has its sphere of activity when the body is in slumber and the mind, free from the distractions of active life, presents the field for its machinations.

The scientists who are making the experiments start with the axiom: "Every state of nervousness denotes something lacking in the unconscious personality." To make peace between the conscious and unconscious personalities, to adjust their differences, as it were, is a cure for sick nerves.

The new treatment is known as psychoanalysis, which means the analysis of the soul and the mind. It is being conducted at Johns Hopkins by Dr. Trigant Burrow. For three years he has been studying this science in Europe under the tutelage of Dr. Freud, and Dr. Jung, of Zurich, another famous psychologist.

The treatment begins by the physician carefully and fully learning the desires, the ambitions and the thoughts of the patient. This knowledge will be gained by a thorough diagnosis of repeated conversations, by questions delicately put, for perhaps there are secrets in the patient's mind that an abrupt questioning would fail to bring forth.

Dreams are thought to be the spontaneous expression of the aims, desires, ambitions and thoughts of the repressed personality. In every dream, disguised though it may be in form, is the lurking, suppressed want of the under-personality. Perhaps this is why superstition points to a dream of a death as the omen of a wedding. The subconscious ego may translate its message of desire for happiness through the form of pain and sorrow.

"Have you ever dreamed that you were falling, falling, falling until you seemed to strike the very depths of the pit? Have you ever dreamed of your agony, your fear, your desperation, as hurtling down what seemed to be a red-lined, fiery pit, you were unable to voice that fear? Do you recall how you cried, before you struck what you were certain you would strike, to find your forehead damp with the sweat of that sleep-fear? These are distorted expressions of the emotions of the sub-conscious personality.

"Under the treatment at Johns Hopkins the patient goes to sleep under ordinary conditions. His consciousness effaces itself and the time for the play of his sub-conscious begins.

"If his two personalities are at war he will dream. When he awakens the physician will tell him to close his eyes in order to shut out all suggestions of the surrounding world, for his mind must not be influenced by the things he sees when his eyes first open.

He will be asked to describe exactly the dreams that have occurred in the night. What he tells is called, technically, the "manifest content." Its interpretation and translation depend upon the system of Dr. Freud.

From the dreams will be revealed the trend of thought, the clue to the trouble between the two personalities of the patient. The treatment that will follow will consist in bringing the two personalities together, to harmonize them, to finally unify them as closely as possible. A smooth and happy disposition, before disrupted by the nerve-wrecking battles of the ego, will result.

When the reminiscences and ideas suggested by the unconscious personality become known to the conscious, which is the stronger, the conflict ceases and the trouble vanishes.

Dr. Burrow, in speaking of the experiments, referred to familiar quotations. He mentioned Browning's "God be thanked—the meanest of His creatures owns two souls, one to face the world with and one to show a woman when he loves her." He spoke of the Biblical expression, "Possessed of devils." St. Paul, he thinks, must have referred to the phenomenon of dual personality when he spoke of Christ making "Himself of twain, one new man, so making peace." (Ephesians, II, 15.

"Another remarkable feature in the treatment is the discovery that the unconscious personality often holds ideas, obtained from associations of years back, which a conscious personality has dropped into oblivion, but which have nevertheless produced discord," said Dr. Burrow.

"For instance, a man found that he had an abhorrence of all other men who were tall and dark. He could not explain this. When put under the treatment it was revealed that in his childhood, thirty-five years previously, he had been insulted by a larger boy, who was tall and dark, and who was also too big for him to whip."

Sealed Rooms, Where Sufferers Breathe and Bathe in Radium.

By Prof. Paul Wichmann,
Radium Specialist of the Hamburg Hospital for Skin Diseases.

WE are now able to report a great many new observations concerning the effects of radium upon disease

I have been much interested to find that the miners working in the radium-bearing region of Joachimsthal, in Bohemia, are free from rheumatism and neuralgia. The drinking of radium-bearing water on the spot —not bottled—seems to have a good effect.

The manner in which the emanations of radium are absorbed by the body was first studied by Professor Loewenthal, who says that even in baths of radium bearing water absorption takes place not through the pores of the skin, but through inhalation by the lungs, due to the gas-forming power of the emanations, and the impermeability of the skin to gases in water.

In the inhalation treatment several persons may be treated at the same time. One method is to have the patients inhale over a vessel of warm water into which the radium solution has been placed. But this is primitive, lacking precision as to the dose given.

Another method is to spray mouth and nose directly with solution of radium; but this, too, lacks precision.

Still another method is to cover the face with a mask filled with radium water of 100,000 to 200,000 units solution. The nose and mouth of the patient are so covered that he must breathe the solution and absorb it for several hours, oxygen being supplied from a reservoir. In this way a thorough circulation of the radium emanations is secured, without inconvenience.

To treat a number of persons at once sealed rooms are needed. For this purpose an "emanatorium" has been invented by Professor Loewenthal. The stream of emanations is forced from the emanator by a stream of oxygen, calculated according to the number of persons in the room. The even distribution of the emanation gas mixture is regulated by an electric ventilator, which absorbs the products of respiration and steam in a tower of chalk. In this way it is possible to treat six or eight patients at the same time in a single room thirty cubic feet in size, for three hours or more.

Another apparatus for the same purpose has been devised, in which the patient is surrounded by a coil of tube, having little holes through which radio-active air is blown upon him.

The agglutinating action of the serum of typhus fever is arrested by radium rays. Even the poison of the deadly cobra has been made harmless by radium.

We have established the most important and interesting fact that diseased tissues absorb the radium rays much more readily than healthy tissue. This is especially true in lupus (tuberculosis of the skin) and several forms of cancer. It should be noted that the effect of radium is proportioned to the quantity of rays absorbed by the tissue treated. Lupus tissue absorbs twice as much as normal tissue, i. e., 66.7 per cent, as compared with 31.7 per cent in normal. In cancer 85.2 per cent of the rays are absorbed.

I have recently treated thirty cases with a newly devised radium apparatus. Many of these were lupus, presenting deep, painful and dangerous sores. In twenty-three of these cases absolute and lasting cures were effected

Experiments in the Hamburg State Physical Laboratory have proved that when the human skin is subjected to the radium rays about two-thirds of the rays are absorbed. The outer skin absorbs but about one-tenth, while the inner skin takes up more than half of the rays.

When the spot to be reached is one-third of an inch under the skin, the absorption is considerable, but if two-thirds of an inch deep, the absorption is limited. A bit of cancer growth at this depth seemed to absorb only about 1-127 of the rays shed upon it. Here we have the very first instance of an exact measurement of the absorptive power of tissue at different depths

The effects of radium rays upon the central nervous system are quite interesting. When the rays were applied to the brain and spinal cord of young mice it was noted that lameness and other nerve-paralysis ensued, ending in death. Afterward it was found that there was hyperaemia (excessive accretion of blood) in the brain, its coverings and in the spinal cord, and heavy loading of blood in all parts of the central nervous system. The front parts of the spinal cord were congested.

When the radium rays are played upon the exterior nerves of the human body there is a marked beneficial effect, especially in neuralgia.

If a capsule of radium be brought near or laid upon the head, there is a sense of diffused light. This is caused by the influence of the rays upon the eye, but the kind of effect upon the optic nerve is not comparable with that of ordinary light rays. In the latter physical sight is possible, for there is a picture on the retina. But the radium rays merely make certain parts of the eye fluorescent, and the entire retina is suffused with light. Vision in the ordinary sense is impossible. Even the eye of the blind, in which retina and optic nerve are still preserved, may perceive a diffuse illumination and distinguish between light and darkness.

How to Make a Good Ragout.

The Second of the Cooking Series By A. Escoffier, the World's Most Famous Chef

Simple Ragout Mode Irlandaise, or Plain Irish Stew

CUT up two pounds of mutton, place the pieces in a saucepan of convenient size. The best meat for this purpose is from the breast, the neck or the shoulder. Cut it in pieces of three to four ounces.

Add a large glass of water, then put the saucepan on the fire, cover it and let the water evaporate completely. Add another glass of water, allow it to evaporate and then salt and pepper to taste. Next add four large onions divided into quarters, a bunch of parsley, thyme and bay.

Moisten with just sufficient water to cover the meat completely. Cover the saucepan and let it boil for twenty-five to thirty minutes. Then add to the mutton two pounds of potatoes skinned and divided in four. Cover them with hot water. Season them again if you like it highly seasoned. Cover the saucepan and finish cooking. Remove the bunch of herbs before serving.

This dish is also excellent if sliced carrots and turnips are added. In this case you must also slice up the potatoes. Be careful to put the carrots and turnips to cook fifteen minutes before the potatoes. Potatoes cooked to pieces spoil the stew.

In this method no flour thickening should be used.

THIS is the second of the series of articles on French cooking which M. Escoffier, its most famous chef, is writing exclusively for this paper. M. Escoffier, who controls the food supply of William II, the Kaiser, and the other royalties he feeds, will give all the secrets of French cooking, and delicate, economical and elaborate dishes, in a practical way for the benefit of American readers.

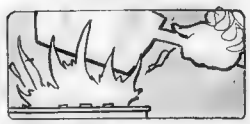
Monsieur A. Escoffier, the Great Chef, Who Is Writing a Series of Articles on Cooking for This Newspaper.

By A. Escoffier

IN FRANCE we regard a ragout, or stew, as a very valuable, estimable and respectable dish in domestic cookery. Among English-speaking people I find that a stew is somewhat contemptuously regarded. This point of view, I feel sure, must have arisen from the fact that the stew has been too often imperfectly prepared.

Perhaps you will like your stew better if you call it a "ragout" (pronounced "rah-goo"). Certainly the change is justifiable, since a certain carelessness appears to be denoted by the word "stew" which is by no means implied in the French term "ragout."

A good mutton ragout is one of the most harmonious, wholesome and economical combinations of meat and vegetables which our cuisine has any knowledge of. I give to-day directions for preparing the principal mutton ragouts.



Ordinary Ragout of Mutton, or French Mutton Stew

HAVING cut the mutton in pieces cook it in a saucepan at a sharp fire with clarified fat or lard. Season with salt and pepper.

When the pieces of mutton are well browned drain out nearly all the fat. Add two large soupspoonfuls of flour. Cook for several minutes and moisten with a full quart of water. Add two skinned tomatoes, or two spoonfuls of tomato puree, a bunch of parsley, thyme, a bay leaf, and a tiny piece of garlic.

Cover the saucepan cook gently forty or fifty minutes. Then change the pieces of mutton to another saucepan. Add to them fifteen small onions browned in butter and twenty small potatoes the size of a pigeon's egg. Then skim the sauce from the first saucepan. Strain it over the meat and other ingredients. Cover the saucepan and finish cooking. Before serving skim the grease off the stew again.

Ragout of Mutton aux Haricots Blancs, Mutton Stew with White Beans

THE beans must be cooked separately and in advance. Cut the mutton in pieces and cook till brown, as in the preceding method. Then add several large onions divided in four, two carrots cut in pieces and two soup-spoonfuls of flour. Let this cook several minutes and moisten with a quart of water.

Add salt and pepper as desired, two or three good tablespoonfuls of tomato puree, a bunch of parsley, thyme, a bay leaf, and a mite of garlic. Cover the saucepan and let it cook gently for about an hour. Change the pieces of mutton to another saucepan, skim the sauce in the first saucepan, strain it over the mutton through a fine strainer. Add the white beans, already cooked, and let it simmer twenty-five or thirty minutes. Skim the ragout again before serving.

In fact countries mutton often holds the taste of the wool. In such cases it is useful to boil it for a few minutes in salted water before cooking.

Ragout of Mutton Printanier, Also Called Navarin

BEGIN as in the last recipe, but when you change the pieces of mutton into a new saucepan add small onions, newly peeled turnips, slightly browned in butter, small new carrots, fifteen small new potatoes and new peas. Strain over the whole the sauce from the first saucepan, well skimmed, and finish cooking slowly for about an hour. Skim the stew again at the moment of serving.

Mutton Hash a l'Americaine

CUT the meat into small cubes. Also cut into pieces of the same shape the same weight of potatoes as of meat. Season the potatoes and toss them in butter. This done, put half their quantity into a saucepan with the meat, and cover the whole with a few tablespoonfuls of tomato sauce and some reduced meat gravy; heat without allowing to boil. Distribute the remainder of the potatoes, which should be crisply fried, over the hash, and sprinkle with a pinch of freshly chopped parsley. In hash the meat must never be allowed to boil or it will become hard.

Ragout of Mutton au Riz, Mutton Stew with Rice

AFTER the mutton has been cut in pieces and cooked, add four good tablespoonfuls of chopped onion, season with salt and pepper, let it cook at a slow fire ten to twelve minutes.

Then add a dozen small carrots, a bunch of parsley, thyme, bay leaves and a mite of garlic. Moisten with a quart of water, cover the saucepan and cook gently for an hour.

Add ten ounces of rice, washed. At this moment pour boiling water on the rice and the mutton until the rice is two or three inches under water. Cover the saucepan and let it cook twenty-five to thirty minutes.

The amount of rice necessary may be estimated by taking three quarts of water as basis for two pounds of rice. For smaller quantities you may allow a quart of water for about eleven ounces of rice.

To the mutton stew with rice you may add some peeled tomatoes chopped up, with seeds removed. You may also add eggplant chopped in slices and some small mild green or red peppers, after you have cooked the onions five to six minutes with the mutton. Finally you may flavor it with saffron or curry.

Mutton Cutlets a la Bourgeoise

THE following quantities are calculated for six persons. Choose eight heavy cutlets or chops. Put them in a frying pan, after having heated in a tablespoonful of lard. Cook them brown on both sides, season them with salt and pepper, and sprinkle them with a tablespoonful of flour. Stir continually so as to brown them slightly.

Then moisten with two tablespoonfuls of bouillon, or, if that is inconvenient, with water and then with a glass of white wine. Add a tablespoonful of tomato puree, a dozen new small onions and the same number of potatoes. Cook it at a slow fire, then arrange the potatoes and onions on the middle of the dish with the cutlets around them, and pour the sauce over the whole.

Pilaff of Mutton a la Turque

MUTTON pilaff is really a "navarin" in which tomatoes dominate the other ingredients. It is flavored with ginger or saffron, according to taste, and the usual vegetables are replaced by rice. It may be dished in the midst of a pilaff-rice border. Sometimes, too, the rice is served separately after the manner of a curry dish.

The Cobweb Bait and the Mammoth Trap

The man of the old Stone Age, 100,000 years or more ago, lured his gigantic prey into a trap roughly constructed with tree trunks, and then, with the help of his tribe, beat the huge brute to death with great clubs and rocks.

The Solomon Islander has found the fish in his neighborhood grown so wary from generations of experience that he can catch them only with a delicate spider's web. The Islander goes out in his canoe flying his kite, from the tail of which hangs a string, at the end of which is a cobweb which trails in the water. The Garfish which is a favorite food of the Solomon Islanders, swims along with projecting under jaw and long teeth, and gets them entangled in the cobweb and goes home to the cooking pot.

In these two pictures the story of human progress is pleasantly told. As the world grows older the game grows smaller and harder to catch.

We sometimes think that life must have been uncomfortable when huge monsters like the mammoth roamed the earth, but really these creatures were quite at the mercy of the agile, resourceful wild man.

The fact that mammoths abounded did not alarm prehistoric man, but rejoiced him, for it meant plenty of meat. He could not complain that provisions were dear.

To-day man has to use stratagems artificial weapons—brains, in fact—to catch his game. The average American citizen has a harder time even than the Solomon Islander in securing his food. The savage can at least combine sport with his quest for provisions. The only sport within the reach of many Americans is hunting the mosquito, and that is not nourishing.

Fido Has His Goggles On; His Hanky's in His Pocket!

THE luxuries enjoyed by the pet dogs of society women have long been envied by the humbler orders.

This season the luxuries have been carried to a greater extreme than ever before by the fashionable women of Newport. Doggie was always provided with shoes to protect his little feet from dirt and injury. This was not only a protection for doggie, but prevented him from bringing bad bugs into the palatial home of his mistress.

Even in Summer the smartest doggies wear little linen coats to protect them from the sun and the dust.

Every little dog who wears a little coat has a little pocket handkerchief with his initial, and sometimes with his coat-of-arms. This little "hankie" is used to wipe doggie's little nose. Everybody knows that doggie's nose goes into some very queer places, even though he belongs to the most aristocratic set in society. There are some characteristics that cannot be educated out of the most refined dogs.

Well, when Fido comes home his loving mistress first takes his pocket handkerchief and wipes his little nose, and then she implants a great big kiss on it.

The fashion news indicates that tailored coats worked in fancy colors will be much worn this Winter. These coats are made with extensions to cover all four legs. It has been found that aristocratic dogs are very subject to gout and rheumatism in the legs, and that it is not sufficient merely to protect the body.

Collars with large metal bosses are quite fashionable, as they are supposed to protect the wearers against assault by common dogs. Motor goggles and leather coats are now always worn by the best dogs when they go motoring.

The Horrors of the Grand Guignol

Gaby Deslys Tells Why Gay Paris Loves and Laughs at Death and Suffering

This is the second of the vast series of articles which Mlle Gaby Deslys, the noted French actress, now playing at the Winter Garden, New York, is writing on the life of Paris for this newspaper. Here she describes most picturesquely the extraordinary taste for death, horror and suffering in their spectacles which the people of the Gay City exhibit.

By Gaby Deslys.

WE Parisians laugh at death! We love the horrible! We live only in the present. But the present must give us sensations of some kind.

We must have horrors. Realism runs riot on the Parisian stage. Where else but in Paris could there be that theatre of horrors, Le Grand Guignol?

The Parisian aristocrats, men of great culture, women of the most exquisite type support Le Grand Guignol. It is by no means a theatre for the common people!

No—its art is too condensed, too tense, calling too much on the active imagination, for the average persons to care for it. They must still have their old fashioned dramas, and their long, tedious melodramas. Ah! but Le Grand Guignol is the last word in theatres for the aristocrat—the true Parisian. Only the aristocrats go there!

We go there, two hundred strong, to see men kill their children; to see mutilated bodies go through the most grotesque performances, to see death in a hundred forms.

Le Grand Guignol is small, smaller than any theatre you have in New York. In a large theatre much of the realism, of the tragedy would be lost. Therefore Paris prefers the small playhouse.

Le Grand Guignol holds two hundred. It is a gloomy theatre, the hangings are black, the ceiling low. There is no gaiety in

I go many times each Winter to Le Grand Guignol. I love that scene where a famous surgeon kills his own daughter!

The head surgeon, he is her father, takes the operating knives from an assistant. He operates. I watch every move. I am breathless with excitement! I live!

Suddenly the surgeon staggers, the patient gives one, two convulsive shudders, and is again still. She is dead! Killed by her own father!

He cries. He seizes a gleaming knife and opens the veins of her arm! The blood spurts forth, then stops. It is no use! The girl is dead!

Terrible? Perhaps! But I am in ecstasy! My sensations are exquisite!

Ah, what it is to be a Parisian!

Again I go. It is another medicated scene! The creepy, gloomy curtain rises, there is deep silence. There is, of course, no orchestra in Le Grand Guignol! The audience sits in silence. Ladies do not rustle their gowns, nor rattle their jewelry. In fact, being true Parisians, they wear no flashing jewels to this theatre of horrors!

The stage again shows a hospital room. There are medical students standing about and they are talking about a case. It seems that the head physician gave a grisette the electrical treatment for rheumatism in her left arm. The current was too strong. Something went wrong and the girl's arm was paralyzed.

As they cold-bloodedly talk, in she shrieks. Her arm hangs useless. It is withered. She glares at the students and asks for "le docteur." He comes in. She curses him in true grisette fashion. She cannot live. She shrieks with her arm dead. The doctor steps forward. He asks her to let him give her another treatment, to let him cure her. She raises her left arm and flings a phial of vitriol in his face!

Ah-h! How wonderful! How terrible! He puts his hand up, oh, so quickly! It is too late! The acid eats into his face, it eats his very eyes out! He staggers around the room in agony—his face blackened, his eyes gone! The grisette is avenged!

The divine Sarah comes to America. She plays Camille to a New York audience. You weep, you shed tears all over the theatre, over the sorrows of the lovely Camille.

We Parisians go to see Camille. The divine Sarah plays to the height of her powers. We are touched, we sorrow with Camille, but we do not shed tears.

One night I am said. I say: "I will go to the play." Not to a farce, not to a music hall; no I go to Le Grand Guignol! That horrible play, "The Telephone," is on the boards.

Ah-h-h! Such art! Such tragedy! I see the pretty wife at the telephone. She is alone in her boudoir, in her chateau, miles from Paris. She is talking to her husband who is in Paris for the night.

As she talks, the door opens, oh, so quietly; a most loathsome man slips into the room! A second one follows him.

The wife looks into a mirror. She sees the men! She knows them to be murderers! To me they look worse than the worst Apaches of Paris! The wife shrieks into the telephone:

"Come to me, Raoul! Come! Come! there are men in my room, they mean to murder me! They are coming closer, closer. They are at my back, as I shriek to you! I am lost! They clutch my waist, they press my neck, they—ah—ugh!"——

It is all over! The murderers wait while she cries for help to Paris, miles away! They smile most horribly at each other. They choke her in pantomime! They can afford to play their victim as a fisherman would play a trout!

Then they spring at her and it is finished!

The Paris authorities have been obliged to close the morgue to the general public! At all hours of the day it used to be crowded with men and women who gloated over the horrible objects placed in full view!

These bodies had been taken from the Seine, from frightful accidents! They were mutilated, decayed! Paris flocked to see them until the authorities had to close the doors!

What city in the world would have been forced to such action!

Ah, Paris! City of Pleasure! City of Horrors! But Paris!

Turning On Lights Inside Your Body.

How Modern Science Enables Itself to See Just What the Trouble Is in Man's Interior

By Dr. R. Burnier, of the Paris Academy of Medicine.

THE interior of the human body is no longer dark to the physician's eye. Its most mysterious recesses may be lighted up so that he can see what ails it or what foreign objects are concealed there. This is done by the science called endoscopy.

The luminous sources are very powerful electric lamps, either fixed on the operator's forehead by means of a wide band or contained in the instrument itself.

The exploratory tools are graduated tubes of nickeled copper, whose calibre varies from one-third to one-half inch, according to the subject's age, and within which may be neated elongating tubes until the objectionable body is reached.

The instruments of extraction consist of hooks, of pincers at various angles, and of electro-magnets for attracting foreign bodies of metal.

To-day endoscopy gives us an opportunity to see, not the shadow, but the thing itself; it enables us to ascertain the nature of the foreign body, whether it is free or encysted, whether the walls of the conduit are wounded; it also shows us pathological alterations of the oesophagus, and of the trachea and its branches.

A few years ago the physician was usually in doubt and often in despair. When certain means of doubtful value had been tried, such as emetics, holding the patient head downward, slapping his body, and administering thick pastes intended to carry the foreign body into the stomach, the prudent physician ceased [illegible]. Some more daring ones introduced at random instruments such as hooks or "umbrellas," and made valid and dangerous attempts that were more apt to be fatal to the patient than to bring up the foreign [illegible].

Some surgeons, still more enterprising, proposed to reach the oesophagus or bronchial tubes by cutting through the chest—an exuberant operation doubtless, but not necessarily fatal in the mortality being one half of the cases.

At present thanks to endoscopy in the hands of a skilful operator, we have a rational, sure and safe method of treatment. [illegible] endoscopic tube has been pushed in as far as the foreign body, it is easy to introduce an electro-magnet, a hook, or some instrument specially designed to extract foreign bodies and to withdraw the offending article under control of the sight, without injuring the walls of the conduit.

There Are 17,000 Ways to Die!

In Nero's Time There Were Only 15,000—Progress Has Added a New Way for Every Year.

THERE are 17,000 ways to die!

This decision has been reached by members of the Polyclinic Institute of Rome, working together with fellow members at London and Paris. It has been found that every new discovery or invention of man can in some way or other be utilized to produce death in a manner slightly different from similar deaths in the past.

The data so far gathered is based upon figures available during the first ten years of the present twentieth century.

From time to time the news reports make mention of what seems "a novel way" to die, but the medical statisticians say that this novelty exists only inferentially, in the sense that it is a method rarely used, and that if means were available to tabulate every death in the world for a hundred years, together with its causes, there would be not one instance of a novel way to die. There may be cases where the cause is unusual, but this more than likely because of a linking of various causes. St. Croix Johnstone, the aviator, for instance, died really by being drowned, but the essential first cause was the "fall" of the aeroplane, with an antecedent cause that brought down his machine before its time.

The Polyclinic Institute announces that there are four basic means to death. These are: Natural, accident, suicide and murder. These four causes have ramifications which bring in subsidiary causes, at times found in three categories, as, for instance, asphyxiation, which may be occasioned by murder, suicide or accident.

The tendency of modern inventions, like electricity, aerial travel, locomotion, submarine exploration, to hasten death is, of course, evident, and for this reason the doctors say that the methods with which to achieve death are greater in number now than they were a thousand or two thousand years ago. The figures made up in Rome show that at the time of Nero there were 15,000 ways to die, thus making the increase in two thousand years less than two thousand, or one new way to die each year.

The Institute supports this by figures and analyses. It is stated that in the year I A. D. fire, water, poison and steel were four quick agents, just as they are now, except that human ingenuity has made the steel implement not only into a new utensil, but has turned it into a steel rail with a steel locomotive over it, and thus creating a grand new weapon for death.

While melancholy is not as prolific of death in these days as in the past, it still finds a few victims. Deaths by rage are analogous to apoplectic deaths.

Walking, as the most normal movement of the human body, still affords its victims, and unquestionably—the Polyclinic Institute believes—if to-morrow everybody in the world started to walk, discarding all other means of locomotion, deaths in this manner would centuplicate themselves. Since the popularization of aerial sports death from the skies has been increased. Yet, physicians say, the increase in the accidental deaths causes a decrease in any other possible death. One may die in a fast train or on a mule cart; in an automobile or in a boat, and a boat may either be a catamaran or a Lusitania or a submarine.

Suicide! That offers the ingenious ways of dying, but this ingenuity is merely a deviation from standard ways of leaving the earth.

Murder practically repeats suicide, with the only difference that death is administered either by force or by stealth. Firearms and clubs do their work effectively, after which come poison and the knife. Strangulation is usually an essential to a fight, and hanging may be called lynching. Arson is seldom inflicted by suicides because too cumbersome, but to kill a person—or many persons at one time—it has been effective.

No. 145 More Obesity Cures By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty.

My Secrets of Beauty.

ME. CAVALIERI to-day gives her many readers the benefit of new and valuable discoveries on methods of treating obesity. She shows that the treatment of superfluous flesh should differ according to the age of the person. The treatment for the woman of thirty varies from that of forty, all of which Mme Cavalieri explains in detail.

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

THE fear of fat is constantly before women, and I am glad that it is so, for what we fear we try to avoid. There is no dissenting voice among the nations. Turkey excepted, that fat is a burden to the body and a destroyer of grace.

Study of the subject is bringing new facts to the surface about the causes of and the treatment for fat. For instance, a professor in the Paris Academy of Medicine has concluded that fat is not a disease, but a symptom of disease. It proves, he says, that there is a derangement of some function. Perhaps the kidneys are not doing their work well. Perhaps the liver is unusually lazy. Perhaps the digestion is faulty. Perhaps the fatness is the result of overfeeding that sometimes attends tuberculosis, or it may be the product of a kind of nervousness which results in low vitality.

These are interesting theories with a degree of truth, possibly, in each of them, for they come from an unquestioned authority. But one of the latest deductions is of be-t practical value to women. That is the conclusion that the cause of superfluous flesh in the woman of thirty and the cause of superfluous flesh in women of forty is different. In other words "thirty fat" and "forty fat" are of different origin and being of different origin are of different kind and cure.

Let me make this seemingly murky fact as clear as possible. A woman between twenty-five and thirty begins to acquire plumpness. Her figure takes on what novelists call voluptuous curves, but what everyday persons classify as fat. She supposes that these additional and pronounced curves are a sign of health and this impression is deepened by insincere persons who say to her face "How well you are looking," and at her back "Isn't she getting a slight?" Even her doctor does not want to risk his fees by offending her with reference to it and the warning that what she regards as signs of health are really symptoms of disease.

The young woman notices that she is sleepy after meals, that she begins to have troublesome headaches, that she coughs somewhat and she suffers from a sense of heaviness after meals. These are symptoms of dyspepsia, and she should correct them at once. Otherwise she will accumulate fat and fat and fat. For this young woman and those who, like her, are between twenty and thirty, or a little past thirty, the causes of rapid taking on of flesh is one of three. Either sumalimentation, which is merely indigestion, improper distribution of food elements, in persons of rheumatic tendency, latent dyspepsia or pre-existent nervousness.

The cures are proper food diet, chiefly of vegetables and fruits, and frequent baths in cold or cool water. If you are nervous eat your meals regularly, letting nothing interfere with them. Eat less but eat it very slowly, chewing it until the food reaches a liquid state in your mouth. Stop the over-eating, which is a bad habit of the nervous person addicted to plumpness. Teach yourself that it is not masculine to be muscular. Train yourself to enjoy exercise. Exercise for a few days or weeks at a regular time and the exercise will come to be a necessity. Exercise will make you healthier, as well as thinner, especially if you are of gouty or rheumatic tendency. In youth prepare for middle age. To prevent gouty middle age exercise much in youth. And exercise out of doors is of twice the value of exercise indoors, for it permits oxygen to do its work of burning up the fat. Golf and tennis, rowing and long walks are the best friends of the woman who would reduce "thirty fat."

Now let us consider the woman who is past thirty and is nearing or has reached forty. Usually the gain of flesh at this age is due to nervous trouble. Strange as it may seem to the careless observer the fat person is usually very nervous, especially the middle-aged woman. Resulting from this nervousness she has some form of indigestion, either gastric, intestinal or relating to the liver. Professor Heckel gives to such cases, and recommends, the practice of muscle cure. For these women he advises exercises with pulleys, but he limits the weight of these to four pounds. Serious injury may result from a woman using too heavy weights for exercises. Having faced the pulley and drawn the handles down and up ten times, counting each movement, turn your back and draw the handles up and down again ten times. Then reverse the body and repeat the exercise. Continue this until the muscles begin to feel tired. Open the window of the room in which you are exercising and breathe deeply and regularly while exercising. If you can perform these exercises in the yard or on the roof it is that much better.

For the solid "forty fat" bending at the waist is absolutely necessary. This flesh is more solid than that of the younger woman, and to banish it requires more persistence. Bend from the waist forward, not bending the knees, until the fingers touch the floor. This is the exercise with which Mrs. Langtry tested herself every day, and "so long as I can do that I know I am all right," she said. Bend back ward as far as possible, but do this with great care, for the strain might cause internal injury.

Swing the trunk as far around from side to side as possible, bending the body forward and letting the arms swing free. Always bathe after these exercises. As I have often said, a bath should always follow perspiration. If you cannot endure a cold shower or spray or plunge, get into a tub of tepid water and let the water gradually run colder.

The woman who is driving away "forty fat" cannot endure the hard dietary of the young woman, but she should eat temperately and no more than she is sure she actually needs. For the younger woman, dieting is most to be relied upon. For the older, muscle treatment, which is but another name for exercise. Massage will aid both. But let no oily substance be used in the massage. Starch is cooling and pleasant to the skin and is not fattening, as are oils and creams.

Especially does the woman of forty or more fear the loose skin that follows reduction. If you do not reduce too rapidly this will not follow, for the skin will slowly become used to the new conditions, and will follow and adhere to the shrinking muscles. But to counteract this loosening of the skin, which is liable to cause wrinkles, bathe the neck, bosom, cheeks and chin several times daily with cold water. Ice can be used to advantage upon the cheeks and chin. I do not advise massage under these circumstances, but recommend gentle pinching of the loose skin. This causes the blood to flow through the tissues, nourish and make them firm. But be sure to pinch the muscles as well as the skin.

For instance, take the part of the neck where you wish to avoid wrinkles—the dreaded "double necklace" comes midway of the length of the neck—pull it outward from one-third to one-half an inch and suddenly let go. Repeat this many times. Use both hands and grasp the skin and muscle between the thumb and first finger.

A few words of counsel as to both "thirty" and "forty" fat.

Household work is good for both of you. So are stair and ladder climbing, and all exercises which causes you to stoop. When you are in the country never lose an opportunity to climb a fence.

Turkish baths will aid you, but light baths are better, though more expensive.

These are valuable exercises: Stand with one foot on the floor, raising the other. Bend the knee and cross your hands over it. Draw the knee as close to the stomach as possible. Repeat several times. This exercise, which is really "hugging the knee," is invaluable in reducing the abdomen.

Lie on your back on the floor or on a hard mattress. Clasp your hands over your knees and draw them close to the stomach.

Lie on your back. Place your feet beneath the bed or other heavy piece of furniture. Place the hands flat upon the floor behind the neck, and thus raise your self to a sitting posture.

"Bend backward as far as possible, but do this with great care, as the strain might cause internal injury."

"Bend from waist forward, not bending knees, until you touch the floor."

"Bend the knee and cross your hands over it. Draw the knee as close to the stomach as possible."

"Bathe the neck, cheeks and chin several times a day with cold water."

THE NEWPORT STRIDE.

Also the Casino Swing, the "Birdy Waddle," the New Horsey Walk--All the Oddities Society Has Learned During the Season Just Ended

Newport, Oct. 5.

WITH the close of the Newport season the novelty-loving circus set begins to take count of stock.

"What new thing have we learned this Summer? What reason have we for being sure that we still set the pace for the rest of the world? Let us see!

"Ah! There is the Casino swing, the new walk, as exemplified by Reginald Vanderbilt and Eleanor Sears. Now this is something to be proud of! It is so new and so very different!"

Last year Mr. Vanderbilt and his following of chorus boys were content to walk with arms flat and heels up. This year he has developed the true Casino swing, with arms working like flails and heels down, toes up. It is not graceful, but it is new! Let us all try it!

The chorus boys are practising it on quiet uptown streets, so that later they can spring it on Fifth avenue.

Miss Sears's walk is new, but her ideas on stockings are newer. Boston's Bobbie wears black silken hose with scarlet heels. They show to perfection in her adaptation of Vanderbilt's Casino swing.

The Newport chorus girls who copy Miss Sears are careful to fling their arms upward and outward. This is the very latest Newport fad. It takes lots of room, and, of course, pushes other people out of the way.

Will they be able to do this on Fifth avenue? They must if they wish to be known as members of the Circus set.

The beautiful Kane sisters, Rose and Alexonella, are practising this swing. They want to introduce it into Tuxedo.

Newport has developed a really new horsey walk. In other resorts all horsey walks are the same; but the Circus set has one peculiarity of its own. The devotees want to "introduce it to New York early in November, in time for the National Horse Show.

Miss Bryce and pretty Margaret Andrews are responsible for it. With the left foot pointed outward on the bias and right one turned inward on the bias, it is necessary to hitch up one's riding habit at the back with the left hand. The right hand is held out from the side as though it were made of wood.

The girls using this walk get over the ground as gracefully as though they were tied up in sacks. Newport does not smile or criticise, for the newness of the fad condones its grotesqueness.

"We must be new, we must set the pace, no matter whether we make fools of ourselves or not!"

But there are other new things for Newport to be proud of. For years the mails and matrons have had to wear heavy veils to hide their beauty from the snapshot men.

This year Constance Warren hit upon a perfectly new idea! "Why get hot wearing stuffy veils?" asked Miss Warren. "Just do as I do. When a camera man looks your way, put up your hand with palm toward your face and fingers outspread! It makes a perfect camera screen!"

"Horrors!" cries New York; "will we see armies of women on Fifth avenue using this horrid but new camera screen!"

Mrs. Drexel, Mrs. Reggie Vanderbilt, Miss Sherman and pretty Mrs. L. Thomas are practising this screen fad an hour after breakfast every morning.

The famous Newport twist bids fair to become a fad in New York, Lakewood and Palm Beach! The first was originated by Mrs. Sidney Colford. Now Mrs. Colford is heiress to some forty millions of dollars, but when she reached Newport in July she found that none of her lovely gowns had the latest thing in Paris draperies!

This idea took like wildfire with the Newport women were courtiers by the end of the season. Surely be displayed at the Horse Show and on Fifth avenue. As banks has been extended to Mr. ord

Fine new things! eh, de port. Is there any o with such a record? Stay. Fiel Is a sixth! Vincent Astor's birdy waddle! This is really the most chic, the very newest new th walks.

Last year young Mr. Astor turned from England with his toes turned in! This year he goes from Newport to Harvard with h turned out! Newport had work to copy this curious fad that young Hermann Oelrichs, Georgie Warren and Penny Jones studied for hours, and now they do it as well as young Astor.

Will Fifth avenue accept the "Birdy Waddle?" Will Harvard accept the "Birdy Waddle?"

Newport does not care. She has produced six perfectly good fads for her season's work and is content.

The Care of House Plants—No. 5

By M. B. Gleason.

OVERFEEDING will produce plant indigestion and arrest development as surely as it will a plant. A half inch of broken coal, coarse cinders or coarse sand will be sufficient for a number of plants. It can be obtained at the greenhouse or in many of the department stores where flowers are kept. As has been said before palms do not require a very large pot. A three or four year old plant, if of vigorous development, may require a twelve-inch pot, but it is surprising how well a palm will do in a five or six inch pot if suitable and nourishing soil is supplied.

Ferns require a light, spongy soil and need plenty of root room. A year-old plant ought to have at least a ten-inch pot. The best soil for ferns is made by mixing garden loam and leafmold in equal portions. As a substitute for leafmold, which is sometimes difficult to get, scrape away the fibrous parts of old sword, using that portion immediately below the grass. This is full of fine roots, and mixed with equal parts of garden loam and a little coarse sand—enough to make the mass friable so that it will readily fall apart when squeezed with the hand—will insure a good growth if the plant receives proper care. Be careful to see that the soil of ferns never becomes entirely dry. A year-old fern, when properly cared for, ought to have fifty to sixty fronds of 4 to 5 feet in length.

The Ficus, or rubber plant, needs a rich soil and a good-sized pot, and should receive a moderate amount of water and plenty of sunshine.

The Aspidistra requires a rich soil and a regular supply of water. It is a so a very hardy plant that will grow with very little attention. It has a rich dark green glossy foliage. This foliage is said to injure the soil and has no benefit.

When plants are too large to repot, depend upon concentrated fertilizer for plant nourishment. A spoonful of bonemeal worked well into the soil about the roots every three months, if the plant is putting forth new growth, should be all the right feeding the plant requires.

In repotting do not forget that good drainage is the most important factor of plant culture, and see to it that the broken crockery and the charcoal are put in the bottom of all pots. Do not have the earth come too high in the pots, but leave a space of a half inch to an inch at the top of the pot to allow for watering.

FOXY GRANDPA Little Brother THE BOYS

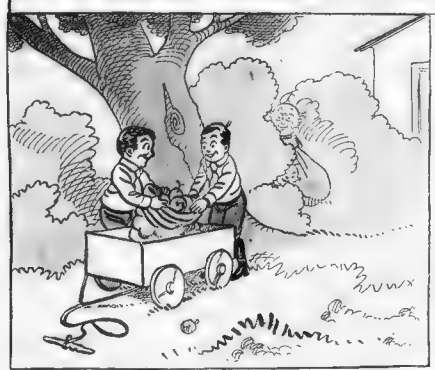
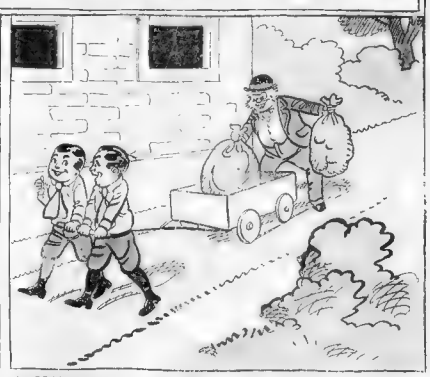
The Boys Got There First, but Foxy Grandpa and Little Brother Got the Apples.



1. GRANDPA—Dear me! The boys have gotten ahead of us and picked all the apples.

2. GRANDPA—Never mind, baby. Jump into our bag and let's see if we can't get a good laugh on those youngsters.



3. GRANDPA—Now for a rapid [illegible] and a quick race around the house.

4. GRANDPA—Hello, boys! Why, where did you come from? See the nice apples I have brought for you.

5. BOYS—Oh, you just wait Gran'pa, and we will soon show you a bag of real apples!

6. GRANDPA—Oh, you young mischiefs, fooling your old Grandpa again! I was just wondering where Little Brother was.
